

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

[22 H. VIII. c. 10; 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 4; 5 El. c. 20; 1 Geo. IV. c. 116.]

THESE are a strange kind of commonwealth among themselves, of wandering impostors and jugglers, who made their first appearance in Germany about the beginning of the sixteenth century, and have since spread themselves all over Europe and Asia. They were originally called Zinganees by the Turks, from their captain, Zinganeus; who, when Sultan Selim conquered Egypt, about the year 1517, refused to submit to the Turkish yoke, and retired into the deserts, where they lived by rapine and plunder, and frequently came down into the plains of Egypt, committing great outrages in the towns upon the Nile, under the dominion of the Turks. But being at length subdued and banished from Egypt, they dispersed themselves in small parties into every country in the known world; and, as they were natives of Egypt, a country where the occult sciences, or black art, as it was called, was supposed to have arrived to great perfection, and which, in that credulous age, was in great vogue with persons of all religions and persuasions, they found the people, wherever they came, very easily imposed on. Mod. Univ. Hist. vol. xliii. p. 271.

In the compass of a very few years, they gained such a number of idle proselytes, who imitated their language and complexion, and betook themselves to the same arts of chiromancy, begging, and pilfering, that they became troublesome, and even formidable, to most of the states of Europe. Hence they were expelled from France in the year 1560, and from Spain in 1591. And the government in England took the alarm much earlier; for, in 1530, they are described by the statute of the 22 H. VIII. c. 10, as “outlandish people, calling themselves Egyptians, using no craft nor feat of merchandize, who have come into this realm, and gone from shire to shire, and place to place, in great company, and used great, subtil, and crafty means to deceive the people; bearing them in hand, that they by palmestry could tell men’s and women’s fortunes; and so, many times, by craft and subtilty have deceived the people of their money, and also have committed many heinous felonies and robberies.” Wherefore they are directed to avoid the realm, and not to return, under pain of imprisonment, and forfeiture of their goods and chattels: and, upon their trials for any felony which they may have committed, they shall not be entitled to a jury de medietate linguæ. And afterwards it was enacted by stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 4, and 5 El. c. 20, that if any such persons shall be imported into this kingdom, the importer shall forfeit 40*l*. And if the Egyptians themselves remain one month in this kingdom, or if any person being fourteen years old, whether a natural born subject or stranger, which hath been seen or found in the fellowship of such Egyptians, or which hath disguised him or herself like them, shall remain in the same one month at one or several times, it is felony without benefit of clergy. And Sir Matthew Hale informs us, that at one Suffolk assizes no less than thirteen gypsies were executed upon these statutes, a few years before the Restoration. But, to the honour of our national humanity, there are no instances more modern than this, of carrying these laws into execution. 4 Black. Com. 166. And by stat. 23 G. III. c. 51, the said stat. 5 El. c. 20. is repealed.

And now, by stat. 1 G. IV. c. 116, after reciting that, “by the stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 4, it is enacted, that if any of the persons called Egyptians which shall be transported and conveyed into this realm of England or Wales do continue and remain within the same by the space of one month, that then he or they so offending shall, by virtue of this act, be deemed and judged a felon or felons, and shall therefore suffer pains of death, loss of lands and goods, as in cases of felony, by the order of the common law of this realm, and shall, upon the trial of them or any of them therein, so tried in the county, and by the inhabitants of the county or place where they or he shall be apprehended or taken, and not per medietate linguæ, and shall lose the benefit and privilege of sanctuary and clergy,” it is enacted “that so much of the said act as is herein-before recited shall be, and the same is hereby repealed.”

Escape.

See also Rescue, Prison-Breaking, Vol. V.

THIS is to be understood of escapes in criminal cases; and not in civil cases, as for debt, or the like.

An escape is, where one that is arrested gaineth his liberty before he is delivered by the course of law. Terms de la Ley. Escape, what.

Escapes are of three kinds. 1. By a person who hath the offender in his custody; this is properly called an escape. 2. Caused by a stranger; this is commonly called a rescue. 3. By the party himself; either without force, which is simply an escape, or with force, which is prison-breaking. Rescue and Prison-breaking are treated of under their respective titles: and this title treats only of escapes properly so called. Concerning which we will treat in the following order: Several kinds thereof.

I. Escape by the Party himself, 4.

[13 Geo. III. c. 31; 44 Geo. III. c. 92; 45 Geo. III. c. 92; 54 Geo. III. c. 186.]

II. Escape suffered by a private Person, 4.

III. Escape suffered by an Officer, 4.

IV. What is a voluntary, and what a negligent, Escape, 5.

V. Concerning the retaking of a Person escaped, 6.

VI. Indictment for an Escape, 7.

VII. Trial and Conviction for, 7.

VIII. Punishment of, 8.

[37 Geo. III. c. 140; 52 Geo. III. c. 156; 9 Geo. IV. c. 6.]

IX. Aiding in attempting to escape, 10.

[16 Geo. II. c. 31; 4 Geo. IV. c. 64.]

X. Forms.

I. Escape by the Party himself.

Escape by party himself.

As all persons are bound to submit themselves to the judgment of the law, and to be ready to be justified by it, whoever in any case refuses to undergo that imprisonment which the law thinks fit to put upon him, and frees himself from it by any artifice before such time as he is delivered by due course of law, is guilty of a high contempt, punishable with fine and imprisonment. 2 Haw. c. 17, s. 5; 4 Black. Com. 129.

But escape, committed by the party himself, belongs more properly to the title Prison-breaking, post, Vol. V.

Persons escaping from G. B. to Ireland, or from Ireland to G. B., to be apprehended and brought back again.

By stat. 44 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 3, offenders against whom any warrant shall be issued, escaping from Ireland into England, or Scotland, may be apprehended by an indorsed warrant, and conveyed to Ireland; and the fourth section of the act makes the same provision as to offenders escaping from England or Scotland into Ireland, being apprehended and conveyed back again to England or Scotland.

The apprehension of persons escaping from England into Scotland, and from Scotland into England, is provided for by stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 31.

And as to admitting persons apprehended in England, Scotland, and Ireland, to bail, for bailable offences, see stat. 45 Geo. III. c. 92, and 54 Geo. III. c. 186; which latter stat. s. 2. enacts, that all warrants issued in England, Scotland, or Ireland, respectively, may and shall be indorsed and executed, and enforced and acted upon, in any part of the united kingdom, in like manner as is directed by stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 31, in relation to warrants issued or granted in England and Scotland respectively, as fully as if all the provisions of the said act were made part of this act, as to every part of the united kingdom, and as to all justices of the peace, sheriff's officers, constables, or other officer or officers of the peace in Ireland, as well as in England and Scotland respectively.

See also post, Warrant, Vol. V.

II. Escape suffered by a private Person.

Escape by a private person.

It seems to be a good general rule, that wherever any person hath another lawfully in his custody, whether upon an arrest made by himself or another, he is guilty of an escape, if he suffer him to go at large before he hath discharged himself of him, by delivering him over to some other who by law ought to have the custody of him. 2 Hawk. c. 20, s. 1.

And the law is generally the same, in relation to escapes suffered by private persons, as by officers. Id.

As to escapes procured by third persons, see post, Rescue, Vol. V.

III. Escape suffered by an Officer.

Escape by officer.

Whenever an officer, having a party lawfully in his custody on a charge of felony, voluntarily permits him to escape, the officer is involved in the legal guilt of the crime charged on his prisoner, 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 40.

Where he negligently permits a prisoner to escape, he is guilty of a misdemeanor; and he is guilty in this degree if a prisoner in his charge commits suicide. Dalt. J. c. 159.

It is laid down, that whoever, de facto, occupies the office of a gaoler, is liable to answer for a negligent escape, and that it is no way material whether his title to the office be legal or not. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 28. It appears to have been holden, that it is an escape in the constable to discharge a person committed to his custody by a watchman, as a loose and disorderly woman, and a street-walker, although no positive charge was made. Rex v. Bootie, 2 Burr. 864.

BY AN OFFICER.

As to what is an escape, and what a negligent, and what an involuntary one, see infra.

IV. What is an Escape, and what a negligent, or voluntary one.

In order to make an escape there must be an actual arrest; and therefore if an officer, having a warrant to arrest a man, see him shut up in a house, and challenge him as his prisoner, but never actually have him in his custody, and the party get free, the officer cannot be charged with an escape. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 1; 1 Hale, 594. As to what is an arrest, see ante Arrest, Vol. I.

What is an escape.

Must be a previous arrest.

The arrest must be also justifiable; for if it be either for a supposed crime, where no such crime was committed, and the party neither indicted nor appealed, or for such a slight suspicion of an actual crime, and by such an irregular mittimus as will neither justify the arrest nor imprisonment, the officer is not guilty of an escape, by suffering the prisoner to go at large. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 2.

And justifiable.

And as the imprisonment must be justifiable, so it must be also for a criminal offence. Id. s. 3.

And for a criminal offence.

The imprisonment must also be continuing at the time of the escape; and its continuance must be grounded on that satisfaction which the public justice demands for the crime committed. So that if a prisoner be acquitted, and detained only for his fees, it will not be criminal to suffer him to escape, though the judgment were that he be discharged, paying his fees; he being detained, not as a criminal, but only as a debtor: but if a person convicted of a crime be condemned to imprisonment for a certain time, and also "until he pays his fees," and he escape after such time is elapsed, without paying them, perhaps such escape may be criminal, for it was part of the punishment that the imprisonment be continued till the fees should be paid.* 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 4; 1 Russ. C. & M. 531.

And not detained only for fees.

Also, it is an escape in some cases to suffer a prisoner to have greater liberty than by the law he ought to have; as to admit a person to bail, who by law ought not to be bailed, but to be kept in close custody. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 5.

Too much liberty, an escape.

So if a gaoler or other officer shall license his prisoner to go abroad for a time, and to come again, this is an escape, even though the prisoner return again. Dalt. c. 159.

If the gaoler so closely pursue the prisoner who flies from him, that he retakes him without losing sight of him, the law looks on the prisoner so far in his power all the time, as not to adjudge such a flight to amount at all to an escape: but if the gaoler once lose sight of the prisoner, and afterwards retake him, he seems in strictness to be guilty of an escape. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 6.

Losing sight, an escape.

But it must be by a known officer of the law. T. Hill, a yeoman wardour of the Tower, and Dod, the gentleman gaoler there, were indicted for the negligent escape of Colonel Parker, committed to the Tower for high treason. Lord Lucas, the constable of the Tower, had committed the colonel to the care of the defendants, to be kept in the house of the defendant Hill. The judges present (O. B. January, 1694) were of opinion, that the defendants were not such officers as the law took notice of,

* By 55 Geo. III. c. 50, fees payable by prisoners are abolished. See Gaols, vol. II.

WHAT IS.

and therefore could not be guilty of a negligent escape. It was merely a breach of trust to Lord Lucas, their master.

Upon the same principle, S. Stick, a wardour of the Tower, who was indicted at the same sessions for the negligent escape of Lord Clancarty, was acquitted.

Voluntary escape,
what.

Wherever an officer, who hath the custody of a prisoner, charged with and guilty of a capital offence, doth knowingly give him his liberty, with an intent to save him from his trial or execution, this is a voluntary escape. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 10.

Negligent escape,
what.

A negligent escape is, when the party arrested or imprisoned doth escape against the will of him that arrested or imprisoned him, and is not freshly pursued and taken again before he hath lost the sight of him. Dalt. c. 159.

Suffering a prisoner to kill himself.

If the constable or other officer shall voluntarily suffer a thief, being in his custody, to go into the water to drown himself, this escape is felony in the constable, and the drowning is felony in the thief: otherwise, if the thief shall suddenly, without the assent of the constable, kill, hang, or drown himself, this is but a negligent escape in the constable. Id.

Prisoner breaking gaol.

If a prisoner for felony break the gaol, this seems to be a negligent escape in the gaoler, because there wanted either that due strength in the gaol, that should have secured him, or that due vigilance in the gaoler or his officers to have prevented it; and therefore it is lawful for the gaoler to hamper them with irons to prevent their escape; for if gaolers might not be punished for this as a negligent escape, they would be careless either to secure their prisoners, or to retake them that escape. 1 Hale, 601.

V. Retaking a Person escaped.

Let go voluntarily, cannot be retaken.

If an officer hath arrested a man by virtue of a warrant, and then taketh his promise that he will come again, and so letteth him go, the officer cannot, after arrest, take him again by force of his former warrant, for that this was by the consent of the officer. But if he return, and put himself again under the custody of the officer, it seems that it may be properly argued that the officer may lawfully detain him, and bring him before the justice, in pursuance of the warrant. Dalt. c. 169; 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 9.

Fresh suit.

But if the party arrested had escaped of his own wrong, without the consent of the officer, now, upon fresh suit, the officer may take him again and again so often as he escapeth, although he were out of view, or that he shall fly into another town or county, and bring him before the justice upon whose warrant he was first arrested. Dalt. c. 169, p. 405.

And it is said generally in some books, that an officer who hath negligently suffered a prisoner to escape may retake him wherever he finds him, without mentioning any fresh pursuit: and indeed since the liberty gained by the prisoner is wholly owing to his own wrong, there seems to be no reason he should take any manner of advantage from it. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 12.

Breaking open doors to retake.

And wherever a person is lawfully arrested for any cause, and afterwards escapes, and shelters himself in a house, the doors may be broken open to take him, on a refusal of admittance. 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 9.

Retaking excuseth not the escape.

It is perhaps the better opinion, that wherever a prisoner, by the negligence of his keeper, gets so far out of his power that the keeper loses sight of him, the keeper is punishable for the escape, notwithstanding he took him immediately after: and it is clear that he cannot excuse himself from an escape by killing a prisoner in the pursuit, though he could not possibly retake him; but must in such case be content to submit to such punishment as his negligence shall appear to deserve. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 13.

In the case of Ryland v. Lavender, 2 Bing. 65, the defendant, as gaoler, covenanted with the sheriff, among other things, to attend the quarter sessions, and to remove prisoners, under writs of habeas corpus, without permitting them to escape. The defendant being engaged at the quarter sessions, the sheriff, upon a writ of habeas corpus for the removal of a prisoner, directed his warrant to the defendant, and “W. W., by me (the sheriff) for this time only thereto specially appointed.” W. W., who was the defendant’s turnkey, proceeded with the prisoner towards the place of destination. The prisoner having escaped, the court of C. P. held that the sheriff having specially directed the warrant to W. W., the defendant was not liable upon his covenant.

AFTER.

VI. Indictment for an Escape.

The indictment for an escape, whether negligent or voluntary, must show that the party was actually in the defendant’s custody for some crime, or upon some commitment on suspicion; and it is not sufficient to say that he was in the defendant’s custody, and charged with such a crime; for that is no allegation that he was in custody upon that charge: 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 97, s. 4. It should show that the prisoner went at large, and the time when the offence was committed for which the party was in custody, not only that it may appear that it was prior to the escape, but also that it was subsequent to the last general pardon. An indictment for a voluntary escape must allege that the defendant feloniously and voluntarily permitted the prisoner to go at large, and must also show the species of crime for which the party was imprisoned; for it will not be sufficient to say, in general, that he was in custody for felony, &c. It is questionable, however, whether such certainty, as to the nature of the crime, be necessary in an indictment for a negligent escape, as it is not, in such a case, material whether the person who escaped were guilty or not: 1 Russ. 374. Coll. Stat. tit. Escape.

Indictment.

VII. Trial and Conviction for an Escape.

If the prisoner be of record in the court, and the gaoler being called cannot give an account where he is, this is a conviction of an escape; but seems not a conviction of a voluntary escape, unless the gaoler confesseth it: And the gaoler may be fined in such a case. 1 Hale, 603.

Gaoler not producing him, a conviction.

And it seems to be clear, that a keeper who voluntarily suffers another to escape who was in his custody for felony, cannot be arraigned for such escape as for felony until the principal be attainted, for that the felony of the prisoner shall not be tried between the king and the keeper, because the prisoner is a stranger thereunto; yet he may be indicted and tried for it as a misprision before the attainder of the principal offender. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 26; 2 Inst. 591, 592.

Felony to be tried before the escape.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 44. “And, to the intent that prosecutions for escapes, breaches of prison, and rescues, may be carried on with as little trouble and expense as is possible, be it enacted, that any offender escaping, breaking prison, or being rescued therefrom, may be tried either in the jurisdiction where the offence was committed, or in that where he or she shall be apprehended and retaken; and in case of any prosecution for any such escape, attempt to escape, breach of prison, or rescue, either against the offender escaping or attempting to escape, or having broken prison, or having been rescued, or against any other person or persons concerned therein, or aiding, abetting, or assisting the same, a certificate given by the clerk of assize, or other clerk of the court in which such offender shall have been convicted, shall, together with due proof of the identity of the person, be sufficient evidence to the court and jury of the nature and fact of the conviction, and of the species and period of confinement to which such person was sentenced."

Sec. 48. Gaol, though locally situate out of the county, &c. shall be deemed part of the county, &c., and subject to the jurisdiction of the justices of the county, &c.

Not to extend to certain prisons, &c.

Sec. 96. "And be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to the royal hospital of Bethlehem and prison of Bridewell, nor to the King's Bench or Fleet Prison, or to the prison of the Marshalsea, or Palace Courts, the general Penitentiary at Milbank, nor to the Penitentiary at Gloucester; nor to any ships or vessels provided in any port or navigable river for the reception and employment of convicts sentenced to transportation; nor to exempt any such convicts from any punishment or discipline to which they were liable by law before the passing of this act."

VIII. Punishment of an Escape.

Escape before arrest.

If a felon escape before arrest, it is not punishable in him as felony; but for the flight he forfeits his goods when presented. Hale's Sum. 111.

Escape by private person.

If a private person arrest a felon, and he escape by force from him, the township shall be amerced; but it seems it excuseth the party because he cannot raise power to assist him: but if a constable or other officer hath the custody of a prisoner, bringing him to the gaol, it seems that a simple escape by the rescue of the prisoner himself doth not wholly excuse him, because he may take sufficient strength to his assistance. 1 Hale, 601.

Wherever a person is found guilty upon an indictment or presentment of a negligent escape of a criminal actually in his custody, he is punishable by fine and imprisonment, according to the quality of the offence. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 31; c. 20, s. 6; 1 Hale, 600, 604.

Escape by officer.

And it seems to be the better opinion, that the sheriff is as much liable to answer for a negligent escape suffered by his bailiff as if he had actually suffered it himself, and that the court may charge either the sheriff or bailiff for such an escape; and if a deputy gaoler be not sufficient to answer a negligent escape, his principal must answer for him. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 29; Rex v. Fell, 1 Ld. Raym. 424.

Mr. Hawkins, although he is one of the most accurate of all writers, yet hath inserted in this place certain penalties for escapes which were expired above two hundred years before. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 34, 35. Vide the edition by Mr. Curwood.

It seems to be generally agreed, that a voluntary escape suffered by an officer amounts to the same kind of crime, and is punishable in the same degree as the offence of which the party was guilty, and for which he was in custody; whether it be treason, felony, or trespass. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 22. if the cause be expressed in the commitment, 2 Inst. 52. See ante, Commitment, Vol. I.

But yet a voluntary escape is no felony, if the act done were not felony at the time of the escape made, as in case of a mortal wound given, and the party not dying till after the escape; but the officer may be fined to the value of his goods. Dalt. c. 159.

Also a voluntary escape suffered by one who wrongfully takes upon him the keeping of a gaol, seems to be punishable in the same manner as if he was never so rightfully entitled to such custody; for that the crime is in both cases of the same ill consequence to the public; and there seems to be no reason that a wrongful officer should have greater favour than a rightful, and that for no other reason but because he is a wrongful one. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 23.

But it seemeth to be clear that no one is punishable as for felony for the voluntary escape of a felon, but the person only who is actually guilty of it; and therefore that the principal gaoler is only fineable for a voluntary escape suffered by his deputy; for that no one shall suffer capitally for the crime of another. Id. s. 27.

PUNISHMENT.

And therefore, although in all civil causes the sheriff is to be responsible, or the gaoler, at election, yet if the gaoler do voluntarily suffer a felon in his custody to escape, this, inasmuch as it reacheth to life, is felony only in the gaoler that was immediately trusted with the custody, and not in the sheriff. 1 Hale, 597.

For the escape must be voluntarily permitted in him that permitted it, which could not be in the high sheriff, though it were such in the gaoler, for he was not privy to it, and therefore could not do it feloniously; but it was a negligent escape in him, in trusting such a person with the custody of his prisoners that would be false to his trust, and therefore the sheriff shall pay, but not corporally suffer for the miscarriage of his gaoler. 1 Hale, 597, 598.

But although the felony for which a man is committed be not within clergy, yet the person who voluntarily suffers him to escape shall have the benefit of the clergy. 1 Hale, 599. See now ante, Clergy, Benefit of, Vol. I.

The Mutiny Act in general enacts, that if any offender, under sentence of death by a court-martial, shall obtain a conditional pardon [viz. on transportation], all the laws in force touching the escape of felons under sentence of death shall apply to such offender, and to all persons aiding, abetting, or assisting, in any escape or intended escape of any such offender, or contriving any such escape, from the time when an order [for his transportation] shall be made by a justice or baron, and during all the proceedings had for the purposes mentioned in the act. See post, Military Law, Vol. III.

Escape of offenders sentenced by a military court-martial, and conditionally pardoned.

A former statute, 37 Geo. III. c. 140, s. 6, contains a similar provision with respect to offenders under sentence of death by a naval court-martial, and allowed the benefit of a conditional pardon.

As to those sentenced by a naval court-martial.

The 52 Geo. III. c. 156. provides against the aiding of the escape of prisoners of war, and enacts, that “every person who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist any alien enemy of H. M., being a prisoner of war in H. M.’s dominions, whether such prisoner shall be confined as a prisoner of war in any prison or other place of confinement, or shall be suffered to be at large in H. M.’s dominions, or any part thereof, on his parole, to escape from such prison or other place of confinement, or from H. M.’s dominions, if at large upon parole,” shall, upon conviction, be adjudged guilty of felony, and be liable to be transported for life, or for fourteen or seven years.

Persons aiding the escape of prisoners of war made liable to transportation.

Section 2. also declares and enacts, that every person who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist any such prisoner at large on parole in quitting any part of H. M.’s dominions, where he may be on his parole, although he shall not aid or assist such person in quitting the coast of any part of H. M.’s dominions, shall be deemed guilty of aiding the escape of such person within the act. There is a further provision as to assisting such prisoners in their escape after they had got upon the high seas.

Section 3. enacts, “that if any person or persons owing allegiance to H. M., after any such prisoner as aforesaid hath quitted the coast of any part of H. M.’s dominions in such his escape as aforesaid, shall, knowingly and wilfully, upon the high seas, aid or assist such prisoner in his escape to or towards any other dominions or place, such person shall also be adjudged guilty of felony, and be liable to be transported as aforesaid.” It is also provided, that offences committed upon the high seas, and not within the body of any county, may be tried in any county within the realm.

By section 4. the act is not to prevent offenders from being prosecuted as they might have been if the act had not been passed; but no person prosecuted otherwise than under the provisions of the act is to be liable to be prosecuted for the same offence under the act; and no person prosecuted under the act is, for the same offence, to be otherwise prosecuted.

The offence of aiding a prisoner of war to escape is not complete if such prisoner is acting in concert with those under whose charge he is merely to detect the defendant, who was supposed to have assisted in the escape of other prisoners, and such prisoner having no intention to escape. Rex v. Martin, Russ. & R. C. C. 196.

IX. Aiding in attempting to escape.

Aiding a prisoner convicted of treason or felony, or committed for these offences, in an attempt to escape.

Aiding, &c. a prisoner convicted or committed for petty larceny, &c.

Assisting any person to escape from a constable, or from any boat carrying felons for transportation.

Felony.

Stat. 16 Geo. 2. c. 31. does not extend to cases where an actual escape is made.

The mere aiding an attempt of persons confined to make an escape, though no escape should ensue, is made highly penal by stat. 16 Geo. II. c. 31,* which enacts, "that if any person shall assist any prisoner to attempt his escape from any gaol, though no escape be actually made, if such prisoner were then attainted or convicted of treason or felony (except petty larceny), or lawfully committed to or detained in any gaol for treason or felony (except petty larceny) expressed in the warrant of commitment or detainer,† he shall be guilty of felony, and be transported for seven years: and if such prisoner were then convicted of, committed to, or detained in gaol for petty larceny, or any other crime not being treason or felony, expressed in the warrant of commitment or detainer, or was then in gaol upon any process for debt, damages, costs, or sum of money, amounting to 100*l.*, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be liable to fine and imprisonment."

The third section enacts, "that if any person shall assist any prisoner to attempt to escape from any constable, or other officer or person who shall have the lawful charge of him in order to carry him to gaol, by virtue of a warrant of commitment for treason or felony (except petty larceny), expressed† on such warrant; or if any person shall assist any felon to attempt his escape from on board any boat, ship, or vessel, carrying felons for transportation, or from the contractor for the transportation of such felons, or his agents, or any other person to whom such felon shall have been lawfully delivered in order for transportation, he shall be guilty of felony, and be transported for seven years."

All prosecutions on this act to be commenced within a year after the offence committed.

The stat. 16 Geo. II. c. 31, does not extend to cases where an actual escape is made, but must be confined to cases of an attempt, without effecting the escape itself. Mr. J. Buller, in delivering the opinion of the judges (O. B. June, 1796), observed, "the statute purports to be made for the further punishing of those persons who shall aid and assist persons attempting to escape, and makes the offence felony: it creates a new felony; but the offence of assisting a felon in making an actual escape was felony before, and therefore does not seem to fall within the view or intention of the legislature when they made this statute." Rex v. Tilley and others, O. B. April Sess. 1795; 2 Leach, 662; see also Rex v. Burrridge, 3 P. Wms.

* This act is not actually repealed by the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64. post, 11; but its provisions are thereby, in many respects, altered.

† This has been held to mean "clearly and plainly expressed;" so that a case where the commitment is on suspicion only is not within the act. Walker's case, 1 Leach, 97; Greeniff's case, 1 Leach, 363; and Gibbon's case, 1 Leach, 98, note (a) S. P.

439; 1 Hale, 621; R. v. Young and Chissell, Winchester Lent Ass. 1801, cor. Le Blanc, J. Burn, J. 24 ed. 935.

AIDING IN.

Delivering instruments is within the act, though the prisoner has been pardoned of the offences of which he has been convicted, on condition of transportation. Rex v. Shaw, R. & R. Cc. 526.

The stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 43, enacts, that "If any person shall convey or cause to be conveyed into any prison to which this act shall extend, (post, Gaols, Vol. II.) any mask, vizor, or other disguise, or any instrument or arms proper to facilitate the escape of any prisoners, and the same shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, to any prisoner in such prison, or to any other person there, for the use of any such prisoner, without the consent or privity of the keeper of such prison, every such person shall be deemed to have delivered such vizor or disguise, instrument or arms, with intent to aid and assist such prisoner to escape or attempt to escape; and if any person shall, by any means whatever, aid and assist any prisoner to escape, or in attempting to escape, from any prison, every person so offending, whether an escape be actually made or not, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be transported beyond the seas, for any term not exceeding 14 years." See a similar provision, stat. 16 Geo. II. c. 31, s. 2. See the 44th section as to the trial and conviction of offenders. Ante 7.

FORMS.

Indictment against

— The jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that on, &c., at, &c., aforesaid, one A. I., of, &c., came before J. P., esquire, then and yet one of the justices of our said Lord the King, assigned to keep the peace in the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed; and the said A. I. did, then and there, on his oath before the same justice, charge, accuse, and give information against one A. O., of, &c. for a certain misdemeanor, in taking fish out of the pond of _____, at _____, in the said county, [or as the offence shall be]: Whereupon he the said J. P., the justice aforesaid, did then and there, to wit, at _____ aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, make a certain warrant, under his hand and seal, in due form of law, directed to the constable of _____ aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, thereby requiring him the said constable to take the body of the said A. O., and bring him before the said J. P., the justice aforesaid, to answer to such matters and things as should be alleged against him, touching the said misdemeanor; which said warrant afterwards, to wit, on the same day and year aforesaid, at _____ aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, was delivered to one A. C., then being constable of _____ aforesaid, in due form of law to be executed; by virtue of which said warrant the said A. C. afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at (venue) aforesaid, in the said county, did take and arrest the body of the said A. O., and him the said A. O. in his custody for the cause aforesaid had*. Nevertheless, the said A. C., of, &c. afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, the duty of his office in that respect not regarding, at (venue) aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, unlawfully and negligently did permit the said A. O. to escape and go at large out of the custody of the said A. C.; to the great hindrance of justice, in contempt of our said Lord the King and of his laws, and against the peace of our Lord the King, his crown and dignity.

luntary escape.

— The jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that heretofore, to wit, [at the general quarter sessions of the peace holden at _____ here state the record of the conviction of the party who escaped, in the past tense; and then as follows:] as by the record thereof more fully and at large appears; which said judgment still remains in full force and effect, and not in the least reversed or made void. And the jurors first aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do further present, that afterwards, to wit, at the said general quarter sessions of the peace above mentioned, he the said C. D. was then and there committed to the care and custody of E. F., he the said E. F. then and still being keeper of the common gaol in and for the said county of _____, there to be kept and imprisoned in the gaol aforesaid, according to and in pursuance of the judgment and sentence aforesaid; and the said E. F. him the said C. D. then and there had in the custody of him the said J. S., for the cause aforesaid, in the gaol aforesaid*. And the jurors first aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said E. F., late of, &c. afterwards, and before the expiration of the six calendar months for which the said C. D. was so ordered to be imprisoned as aforesaid, and whilst the said C. D. was so in the custody of the said E. F. as such keeper of the said common gaol as aforesaid, to wit, on, &c., at, &c., aforesaid, feloniously, [if the offence for which C. D. was convicted were a felony,] unlawfully, voluntarily, and contemptuously, did permit and suffer the said C. D. to escape, and go at large whithersoever he would, whereby the said C. D. did then and there escape out of the said prison, and go at large whithersoever he would, to the great hindrance of justice: in contempt of our said Lord the King and his laws, and against the peace of our said Lord the King, his crown and dignity.

the turnkey of a gaol for a misdemeanor, in permitting a person committed on a warrant for a

— The jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that one W. D., esq., then being one of the justices, &c., in due form of law did make his warrant of commitment, under his hand and seal, to wit, at, &c. bearing date the same day and year aforesaid, directed to the keeper of the common gaol at _____, in and for the said county of _____, by which said warrant of commitment the said keeper was required to receive, &c. [here set forth the mittimus] as by the same warrant more fully appears, by virtue of which said warrant of commitment, afterwards, to wit, on the said, &c., at, &c., G. H., then being keeper of the said common gaol of the said county of _____, at _____, aforesaid, did receive the said O. O. into his custody in the said common gaol there situate. And the jurors, &c., that D. M., late of, &c., labourer, well knowing the premises, afterwards, and whilst the said O. O. was a prisoner as aforesaid, for the cause aforesaid, to wit, on, &c., with force and arms, at, &c., unlawfully, voluntarily, and unjustly did unlock and open the door of a certain yard wherein the said O. O. was then confined within the said prison, as such prisoner as aforesaid, and did permit him, the said O. O., to go out at a certain back door of, and belonging to, the said gaol, and over a certain wall surrounding and enclosing the same, and to go at large out of the said prison wheresoever he would, he the said D. M. then and there having the custody and keeping of the keys of and belonging to the said prison, whereby the said O. O. did then and there escape out of the said prison, and go at large whithersoever he would. And so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said D. M. then and there, in manner and form aforesaid, was aiding and assisting the said O. O. to make his escape from and out of the said prison, to the great hindrance of justice, in contempt, &c. [Conclude as in last form.]

And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said O. O. on the said, &c. was lawfully committed to the custody of the said G. H., then being keeper of his said Majesty's gaol of and for the said county of , to wit, at, &c. aforesaid, by virtue of a certain warrant of commitment, duly made, under the hand and seal of the said W. D., then being such justice as aforesaid, bearing date the same day and year last aforesaid, upon and in pursuance of a certain charge, upon oath, made by the said R. R. against the said O. O. to and before him the said W. D., being such justice as aforesaid, alleging that the said O. O. had unlawfully [state the offence as set forth in the warrant], and by which said last-mentioned warrant the said G. H. was required safely to keep the said O. O. until the then next general quarter session of the peace, to be holden in and for the said county of , or until he should be thence delivered by due course of law, as by the said last-mentioned warrant more fully appears. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said D. M., so having the custody and keeping of the said keys as aforesaid, and well knowing the said last-mentioned premises, afterwards, to wit, on, &c., aforesaid, with force and arms, at, &c., unlawfully, voluntarily, and contemptuously did permit and suffer the said O. O. then being a prisoner in the said gaol, under the custody of the said G. H., by virtue of the said last-mentioned warrant, for the cause last aforesaid, to escape and go at large out of the said gaol wheresoever he would, without the knowledge, privity, or consent of the said G. H. being such keeper as aforesaid, and without any lawful authority whatsoever; whereby the said O. O. did then and there escape out of the said prison and go at large whithersoever he would: to the great hindrance, &c. [Conclude as in last form.]

Second count.

Estray.

And herein also of Goods waived.

Estray, what.

ESTRAY is, where any horses, sheep, hogs, beasts, or swans, do come into a lordship, and are not owned by any man. Kitch. 23.

Where any horses, sheep, hogs, beasts, or swans]—Bees and other creatures of a wild nature are not within this description, and therefore not to be reckoned amongst stray goods. Nevertheless it seemeth that a swarm of bees, of which the owner hath lost sight, and consequently can make out no property, may be seized for the use of the king, or of the lord of the manor; for it is a maxim of the common law, that such goods whereof no one can claim property do belong to the king; and that which the king hath he may grant to another, and consequently another may prescribe to have the same within such a precinct or lordship. And therefore it is said, that if any take honey or swarms of bees within the demesne of the lord, it is inquirable in the court baron. Kitch. 114.

Swans]—Swans that are unmarked and wild (being at large and abroad) may be seized by the sheriff for the use of the king, by his prerogative. Dalt. Sher. 80.

Also swans marked and tame may be estrays. Kitch. 86. But it seemeth that no other fowl can be estray. Wood, b. 2. c. 2.

Do come into a lordship]—That is, where the goods have no right to be ; and therefore an estray cannot be in such place, where the party hath a right of common. Dalt. Sher. 79.

And are not owned by any man]—Whereupon (as hath been said) the property accrue to the king ; and the cattle of the king cannot be estrays, nor forfeited as such to the lord of the manor. Kitch. 81.

Waif is, where a felon in pursuit waiveth the goods ; or where the felon, for fear of being apprehended, thinking that a pursuit was made, having them with him in his possession, fleeth, and waiveth, casting away, or goeth from the goods ; in these cases, they shall be said to be waived in law. But if he hath not the goods with him when he fleeth being pursued, or for fear to be apprehended, they are not waived nor forfeited, but the owner may take them when he will, without any fresh suit. 5 Rep. 109. Dalt. Sher. 78.

Waif, what.

But if the thief in his flight waive them, there the goods are forfeited to the king or lord of the liberty by the common law, if the felon upon fresh suit were not attainted at the suit of the owner of the goods. And the reason why waif is given to the king, and that the party shall lose his property in such case, is for default in the owner, that he pursued not freshly to apprehend the felon ; for it concerneth the public that crimes do not remain unpunished. Therefore the law hath imposed this penalty upon the owner, that if the thief by his industry and fresh suit be not attainted at his suit, in an appeal for the same felony, he shall lose for his default all his goods, which the thief at the time of his flight waived. But if the thief had them not with him when he fled, having peradventure hid them, there no default can be in the party ; and therefore they shall not be forfeited, for if he maketh fresh suit after notice of the felony it sufficeth. 5 Rep. 109.

Heretofore waifs and strays were the finder's, by the law of nature ; and afterward, the king's by the law of nations. Dalt. Sher. 79.

Seizure thereof by the lord.

Thus, one, as a bailiff or servant to the sheriff, seized a horse as an estray to the king's use, and proclaimed him according to law, and after the year and day sold him, and the sheriff accounted for him in the exchequer. Id. 80.

But now kings have granted this and such like prerogatives unto their subjects, within their liberties ; so that waifs and strays are in many places the lord's of the franchise where they are found. Id. 79.

And therefore waived goods and estrays shall be seized by the officer of the king to the use of the king ; or by the officer or bailiff of the lord, who hath such things by grant of the king, or by prescription, to the use of the lord. Id. 80.

But if one have a waif, and it be taken out of his manor, he shall have trespass without seizing, and though he do not seize it. Kitch. 81.

It seemeth to be agreed that waifs and strays ought to be proclaimed in the two next market-towns ; and that if they be not proclaimed, the owner may take the stray goods again at any time. And it seemeth to be the general tenor of the old books, that they ought also to be proclaimed in the church : which course it seemeth best to follow ; to the end that the owner, who in this case is no wrong-doer, may have reasonable mean to come at his goods again ; that is to say, that the goods be proclaimed at the least thrice, to wit, in the two market-towns next adjoining to the place where they strayed on the market-days respectively, and at the church-door on a Sunday, as the people come out of the church. Kitch. 23. 81. 105. Dalt. Sher. 79. Cro. Eliz. 716.

Proclaiming the goods seized.

And they ought to be wreathed ; and to be put into some several ground in an open place, and not in any covert of wood, that the owner may have a view of them ; for if they be in covert the property is not changed, though they be there a year and a day. Kitch. 23.

How waifs or stray are to be kept.

WAIF, WHAT.

An estray is not to be used in any manner, except in case of necessity, as to milk a cow, or the like; but not to ride a horse, for within the year and day he hath not any property in him. Cro. Jac. 147, 148.

In Oxley v. Watts, 1 T. R. 12, it is determined, that an action of trespass lies for working a horse taken as an estray.

Owner claiming.

He who taketh an estrays may keep it until he be satisfied for the finding, keeping, and proclaiming thereof. Dalt. Sher. 79.*

But the owner (if it be within the year and day) may take it without telling any marks, or making any proof of property; but this may be done upon the trial, if contested. Henly v. Walsh, 2 Salk. 686.

The lord ought to make a demand of what the amends should be; and then if the party think the demand unreasonable, he may tender sufficient amends; and if the lord shall not accept it, this shall be settled by the jury upon trial.

But it is sufficient in this case to tender amends generally, without expressing any certain sum. For there is a difference between this case and that of a tender of amends for trespass. In that of a trespass, if the defendant plead a tender of amends, he must show what he tendered; for he must tender a certain sum. And the law puts this difficulty upon him because he is the wrong-doer: but the owner of the stray (as hath been said) is no wrong-doer: and it is impossible he should know how long his beast hath been in the lord's custody, nor how much will make a proper satisfaction. 2 Salk. 686.

In the case of goods waived; the owner may seize them twenty years after, if the lord of the franchise nor the king seized before; but if they are seized, then they become forfeited to the king, or the lord of the liberty. Kitch. 82.

And this forfeiture is not like a stray, where, though the lord may seize, yet the party who is the owner may retake them within the year and day; but here the true owner cannot seize his own goods, though upon fresh suit within the year and day. 1 Hale, 541.

But this is not an absolute loss of the owner's goods, but rather an expedient settled by law to drive the owner to convict the felon by prosecuting his appeal; and therefore if he make fresh suit, and prosecute his appeal, and the felon be thereupon convict or attain, and the fresh suit be inquired and found by verdict or inquest of office, he shall have restitution of the goods so waived. 1 Hale, 541.

Property accruing to the lord, on not claiming.

Waifs and strays not claimed within the year and day are the lord's. Kitch. 23. 80, 81.

For where the lord hath a beast a year and a day, and it be cried in the church and markets, the property is changed. Kitch. 80.

That is to say, after he hath had the beast a year and day from the time of the proclamation, and not from the time of the seizure; for after the first proclamation it becometh an estray, but not sooner. 11 Mod. 89.

If the estray within the year estray out of the manor, the lord may chase back the estray, unless it be seized by another lord who hath estrays; but if it be seized by such other lord, then the first hath lost all possibility of his gaining the property, and the other lord ought to proclaim it de novo. Finch, 177. Kitch. 81. Hutt. 67.

After seizure the lord shall be charged for trespass done by an estray. Hutt. 67.

And he shall have a replevin, if a stranger take it. Hutt. 67. Or trespass, Winch. 68.

* But if any other person finds and takes care of another's property, not being entitled to it as an estray (nor being saved at sea, or in other cases where the law of salvage applies), the owner may recover it or its value, without being obliged to pay the expenses of keeping. 2 Bla. Rep. 1117; 2 H. Bla. 254.

Estreat.

ESTREAT (extractum) is used for the true copy or note of some original writing or record, and especially of fines and amerciaments imposed in the rolls of a Court, to be levied by the bailiff or other officer. When however it is applied to a recognizance, it signifies that the recognizance itself is extracted or taken out from among the other records and sent up to the Exchequer. 4 Bla. Com. 253. Estreat, what.

As to the estreating of fines, penalties, for forfeitures and recognizances, see 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, and 4 Geo. IV. c. 37.

See further as to Estreats, post, Fines and Forfeitures, Vol. II.

Eves Droppers.

EVES Droppers are such as listen under walls or windows, or the eves of houses, to hearken after discourse, and thereupon to frame slanderous and mischievous tales; are a common nuisance, and presentable at a court leet; or are indictable at the sessions, and are punishable by fine; and are to find sureties for their good behaviour. 4 Black. Com. 168.

And Dalton says that night-walkers, that eve-drop men's houses, or cast men's gates, carts, or the like, into ponds, or commit other outrages or misdemeanours in the night, or shall be suspected to be pilferers, or otherwise like to disturb the peace, or that be persons of ill behaviour, or of evil fame or report generally, or that shall keep company with any such, or with any other suspicious person in the night, are liable to find sureties for their good behaviour.

Eves droppers are indictable at the sheriff's torn as well as other dangerous and suspicious persons. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 59. And it seems that a magistrate may also compel such persons to find surety for their good behaviour. 1 Haw. c. 61, s. 4; see Surety for Peace, post, Vol. V.

Evidence.

EVIDENCE in legal understanding doth not only contain matters of record, as letters patent, fines, recoveries, inrolments, and the like, and writings under seal, as charters and deeds, and other writings without seal, as court rolls, accounts, and the like; but in a larger sense it containeth also the testimony of witnesses, and other proofs to be produced and given, for the finding of any issue joined between the parties. And it is called evidence, because thereby the point in issue is to be made evident to the jury. 1 Inst. 283. Evidence, what.

It should be observed, that the doctrine of evidence in criminal prosecutions and proceedings before justices is, in most respects, the same as that in civil actions. 4 Esp., 136, 9. 144; 2 East's P. C. 993; 2 T. R. 201, n.; 4 Bla. Com. 356; 1 Chit. C. L. 556. See the valuable works on Evidence in Civil Actions, by Mr. Phillips, Mr. Starkie, and Mr. Roscoe. Same as in civil proceedings.

We shall confine our considerations under this most important title to the rules and principles of evidence in general. As to the evidence on criminal prosecutions and proceedings before magistrates, in particular cases the reader is referred to the different titles throughout the work.

Such considerations will be divided as follows:

IN GENERAL.

I. What should be proved.

What must be proved.

Before inquiring into the nature and mode of proof, it will be expedient to ascertain what parts of the charge contained in an indictment or information should be proved.

(1.) In general.

(1.) In General—Generally every fact stated on the face of the indictment or information, which enters into the substance of the offence charged, as also all facts not so stated, but which are necessary to constitute the offence charged, must be proved. See 2 Leach, 594.

Surplusage.

Averments stated in the indictment, if wholly unconnected with the charge, may be considered as surplusage, and need not be proved. Id.; and see further as to what is surplusage, 1 Chit. C. L. 294; post, Indictment, Vol. III.

Divisible averments.

It is sufficient to prove so much of the indictment as shows the defendant to have been guilty of the substantive crime therein stated, though not to the full extent charged on him. See R. v. Hunt, 2 Camp. 583. Thus on an indictment charging the defendant with having done, and caused to be done, a particular act, it suffices to prove either. Id. and see post, Indictment, Vol. III. So where a man was charged with publishing a libel against magistrates, with intent to defame those magistrates, and also with intent to bring the administration of justice into contempt, Bailey, J., held, that proof of his having published it with either of those intentions would support the indictment. R. v. Evans, 3 Stark. 35. On an indictment for felony, if a misdemeanour only be proved, the prisoner must be acquitted, but he may be found guilty of a felony of lesser atrocity, as, on an indictment for murder, he may be found guilty of manslaughter; on an indictment for breaking a house and stealing, he may be convicted of simple larceny. Dick. Sess. 351. So, on an indictment for misdemeanour in assaulting a constable in the discharge of his duty, the defendant may be convicted of a common assault. Id. If a man be charged with an offence as principal in the first degree, evidence of his being principal in the second degree will support the indictment, and e contra. Fost. 351. 9 Co. 67 b; Plowd. 98; 2 Ld. Raym. 886; 1 Hale, 122; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 35, &c. On an indictment for killing a sheep, with the intent to steal the whole carcass (now provided against by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 25), proof of killing, with intent to steal a part, is sufficient to support the charge. R. v. Williams, R. & M. C. C. R. 107.

Evidence must be confined to the issue.

Generally speaking, the evidence adduced must be relevant and confined to the issue. Therefore the prosecutor cannot generally injure the character of the defendant by giving in evidence other crimes not laid to his charge in the indictment; but when such crimes are connected with, and have a direct tendency to establish the guilt of the defendant in the specific crime charged, then they may be admitted in evidence. Thus, in high treason, though by 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 3, s. 8, no evidence shall be admitted or given of any overt act not expressly charged in the indictment; yet this does not prevent overt acts not laid from being given in evidence, if they be direct proof of any of the overt acts which are laid. R. v. Rookwood, 4 St. Tri. 661, 697; Holt, 683; R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 134. In an indictment against persons for a conspiracy to carry on the business of common cheats, evidence was admitted of the defendant's having made false representations to other tradesmen besides those named in the indictment. R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 400. See 4 East, 171, n. In R. v. Hunt and Others, 3 Barn. & Ald. 566, upon an indictment for conspiring and unlawfully meeting for the purpose of exciting disaffection and discontent among His Majesty's subjects at Manchester, it was holden that the previous conduct of a portion of the assembly, in training, &c., and in assaulting persons whom they called spies, was competent evidence as to the general character and intention of the meeting, although the effect of it as to each particular defendant was a distinct matter for the consideration of the jury. It was also holden, that it was competent to show, as against Hunt (who, though a stranger except by political connexion, had been invited to preside as chairman at the meeting), that at a similar meeting in another place, holden for an object professedly similar, certain resolutions had been proposed by that person; it being in its nature a declaration of his sentiments and views on the particular subject of such meetings, and of the topics there discussed. But the court held, that evidence of the misconduct of the military and others, in the subsequent dispersion of the meeting, was properly refused by the judge at the trial as irrelevant, and having no bearing upon the intention and objects of the meeting; which intention and objects obviously existed previously to the alleged misconduct of the military, attempted to be given in evidence. In a case where the prosecutor, suspecting the prisoner, had put marked money into his till, and caused him to be watched, evidence was admitted of several visits to the till by the prisoner, of several inspections of the till consequent upon them, and of the several results of those inspections, that the money was each time reduced, though it was objected that this was proof of several felonies. R. v. Ellis, 6 B. & Cres. 145. So on the trial of a robbery effected by a threat of a revolting description, evidence of an attempt by the prisoner to obtain the money at another time was allowed. R. v. Egerton, there cited; and see R. v. Wylie, 1 New Rep. 94. So where a number of articles are found in the prisoner's possession, the mere probability that he stole them at different times is no ground for requiring the prosecutor to confine his evidence to one of them, if they might have been stolen at once. R. v. Dunn, R. & M. C. C. 148; and see post, Kape, Vol. V.

Knowledge and Intent, when material, must be made out by the prosecutor. He cannot, of course, make them out by direct evidence, unless when they have been confessed; but both may be gathered from the conduct of the party, as shown in proof; and when the tendency of his actions is direct and manifest, he must always be presumed to have designed the result when he acted. Dick. Sess. 353; 6 East, 464. On an indictment for murder, former attempts of the defendant to assassinate the deceased are admissible in evidence; so are former menaces of the defendant, or expressions of vindictive feeling towards the deceased, or, in fact, the existence of any motive likely to instigate him to the commission of the offence in question. See Arch. C. L. 73. So on an indictment for uttering forged notes, or counterfeit coin, evidence of other utterings of other notes, or coin, was admitted, though they were not charged on the record. R. v. Ball, R. & R. C. C. 132; R. v. Wylie, 1 New Rep. 92, &c., though, in another case, in the discretion of the judge, it was refused. R. v. Smith, 2 C. & P. 633; Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 359.

Knowledge and Intent.

On an indictment for felony, embracing a number of charges essentially distinct, the Court will, in its discretion, quash the indictment, or compel the prosecutor to elect on which charge he will proceed. R. v. Jones, 2 Camp. 132; R. v. Galloway, R. & M. C. C. 234, id. 146. But, on an indictment for misdemeanors, it is otherwise; and several distinct offences, when charged, may be proved. See id. 2 Burr. 984; post, Indictment, (several Counts in), Vol. III.

Where several offences charged.

Matters of defence, which should more properly come from the defendant, need not be proved. As a branch of this rule, in indictments on statutes where an exception or proviso is mixed up with the description of the offence, the correct rule is, that in cases where the subject of such averment relates to the defendant personally, or is peculiarly within his knowledge, the negative is not to be proved by the prosecutor, but, on the contrary, the affirmative must be proved by the defendant, as matter of defence. But, on the other hand, if the subject of the averment do not relate personally to the defendant, or be not peculiarly within his knowledge, but, on the contrary,

Matters of defence.

Exceptions.

Matter peculiarly in defendant's knowledge.

IN GENERAL.

either relate personally to the prosecutor, or be peculiarly within his knowledge, or at least be as much within his knowledge as within the knowledge of the defendant, the prosecutor must prove the negative. Arch. C. L. 70. Thus informations upon the game laws must negative the defendant's qualification to kill game: but this negative need not be proved upon the part of the prosecution; on the contrary, the defendant must prove the affirmative of it as matter of defence. R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206. So on an information for selling ale without a licence, it lies on the defendant, who has been shown selling ale, to prove his licence. R. v. Hanson, 5 M. & S. 209. On the other hand, upon an indictment on stat. 42. Geo. III. c. 107, s. 1, which made it felony to course deer in an enclosed ground, without the consent of the owner,—it was held, that the deer were coursed without the consent of the owner, was necessary to be proved upon the part of the prosecution. R. v. Allen; R. v. Argent; R. v. Chamberlain, R. & M. C. C. R. 154; R. v. Rogers, 2 Camp. 654; Arch. C. L. 70. The owner himself, however, need not be called; his non-consent might be inferred from other circumstances, or proved by his agents. R. & M. C. C. R. 154.

Presumptions of law and facts ex officio noticed.

Presumptions of law, and those facts which the courts ex officio take notice of without proof, need not be proved. See 3 East, 192; 3 Camp. 10, 12; Banbury Peerage case, 2 Selw. N. P. 709; and as to what facts the courts take notice of, see 1 Chit. Plead. 196 to 204.

Negative, involving culpable omission.

Where any act is required to be done by one, the omission of which would make him guilty of a criminal neglect of duty, the law presumes the affirmative, and throws the burden of proving the negative on the party who insists on it. 3 East, 192; 3 Camp. 10; R. v. Hawkins, 10 East, 216; R. v. Twynning, 2 B. & A. 386.

Identity.

The identity of the defendant must be established, and this is for a jury to decide on; see 1 Chit. C. L. 558. In order to identify a person in court with one whom the witness has described, the attention of the witness may be directed to the person in court, and he may be asked whether that is the person of whom he has spoken. 2 Stark. C. N. P. 128.

(2.) In general, as Venue and Place.

(2.) In general, as Venue and Place—The offence must in general be proved to have been committed in the county in which the defendant is indicted, unless in particular cases, where the legislature has by act of parliament dispensed with it, and as to which see post, Indictment, (Venue in), Vol. III.

If the offence be not proved to have been committed in the county or other extent of the court's jurisdiction, the defendant must be acquitted. See as to the evidence of publication of a libel in the county wherein defendant is indicted, post, Libel, Vol. III; also, post, Forgery, Vol. II; Larceny, Vol. III.; Treason, Vol. V.

It is in no case, not even in treason or murder, in general necessary to prove that the offence was committed at the precise village, parish, or place laid in the indictment; but it suffices to prove that it happened any where within the proper county; see 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 84. In a late case, where an indictment for robbery stated that it was in a field near the king's highway, and the robbery was not proved to be near any highway, it was considered sufficient. R. v. Wardle, R. & R. C. C. 9.

There are, however, some exceptions to this rule, as, where the place is the essence of the crime, as in indictments for burglary, or for not repairing, or any other nuisance to a highway. 2 Hall, 179. 244; 4 Bla. Com. 306; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 84; and see post, Game, (night poaching), Vol. II.

So, where the place stated is so stated as matter of local description, and not as venae merely, it must be proved as stated.

So, if the indictment be on a particular statute, which gives the penalty to the poor of the parish in which the offence was committed, the offence must be proved to have been committed in the parish stated in the indictment.

It should also seem, that in indictments for treason or felony, if there be no such place within the county as that alleged in the indictment, the defendant must be acquitted according to the 9 Hen. V. st. 1, c. 1, which declares such an indictment void; but the disproof lies with the defendant. Post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 335.

IN PARTICULAR.

Time—It is in no case necessary to prove the precise day or even year laid in the indictment, except where the particular time enters into the essence of the offence: see per Lawrence, J.; 9 East. Rep. 162; and see 2 Inst. 218; Holt, 301; 2 Hawk. c. 23, s. 88. As in an indictment for burglary, though it is necessary to prove that it took place in the night-time, yet it is not necessary to prove strictly that it took place at the hour or day stated in the indictment. 2 East's P. C. 513.

So in an indictment for setting fire to a barn, stating it was set fire to in the night-time, it is not necessary to prove it was so, for there was no necessity for the averment that the offence was committed in the night. 2 East's P. C. 1021. 1035.

An overt act or acts of treason may be proved to have been committed on a day different from that stated in the indictment, Fost. 8, 9; 1 East's P. C. 125.

In cases where the day is stated as matter of description, as in describing the date of a deed or other written instrument, the variance would be fatal, unless in the case of indictments for misdemeanor, when the indictment may be amended for such a defect under the 9 Geo. IV. c. 15. Ante, Amendment, Vol. I. p. 131. See 2 Camp. 307, n.; 4 Camp. 209; 1 T. R. 656.

Where there are several offences, and they are described as having been committed on such a day and divers days and times afterwards, evidence cannot, it seems, be admitted to prove more than one offence prior to the day named. B. N. P. 86; 1 Saund. 24, n.; 1 Stark. C. N. P. 351. And if a person be charged with a burglary and stealing the goods, the prosecutor, on failing to prove that these facts were committed on the day laid in the indictment, cannot be admitted to prove that a distinct larceny was committed on a prior day. 2 Leach, 708.

Name of Prosecutor and third Persons—A variance in proof between the real name of a prosecutor or third party and that stated in the indictment will be fatal, unless such name can be rejected as surplusage. R. & M. C. C. 1; 2 East's P. C. 593; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 72. See the question raised in R. v. Messingham, R. & M. C. C. 257. See the mode of stating names, &c., post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 335 to 343. In an indictment for stealing, to the amount of 40s., in the dwelling-house of A. B., under the repealed act, 12 Anne, c. 7, the defendant was acquitted of the capital part of the charge when not strictly proved to have been the house of A. B., and found guilty of the simple larceny. Leach, 339, n. a. 252.

Name of prosecutor and third persons.

If a party be described as a person to the jurors unknown, and it appear in evidence that his name was known at the time of finding the bill of indictment, the defendant will be acquitted: see Rex v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264; Holt, C. N. P. 595.

Written Instruments—A written instrument set out in the indictment must be proved as alleged, or a variance will be fatal, unless allowed to be amended under the provisions of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 15, ante, Amendment, Vol. I. which allows amendments in the courts at Westminster, and Oyer and Terminer, on variances in proofs of written and printed instruments in misdemeanors. See various instances as to what are variances in setting out written instruments, post, Indictment, Vol. III., p. 347, Mabel, Vol. III., p. 629, 630, Ferguson, Vol. II., p. 843, Perjury, Vol. V. p. 61, 62.

Written instruments.

Goods, &c.—In an indictment for an offence relating to personal property, the evidence must correspond with the description of the goods in the indictment; as, in larceny, an indictment for stealing a pair of shoes cannot be supported by evidence of a larceny of a pair of boots; Archb.

Goods, &c.

BEST EVIDENCE.

C. L. 66. So on an indictment on 15 Geo. II. c. 34, and 14 Geo. II. c. 6, (which made it a felony to steal any ox, cow, or heifer), charging defendant with stealing a cow, proof of its being a heifer will not suffice; for the statute having mentioned both cow and heifer, proved that the words were not considered by the legislature as synonymous. R. v. Cooke, 2 East's P. C. 617; Leach, 123; and see R. & M. C. C. 160. 247; R. & R. C. C. 416. 494. See post, Indictment, Vol. III., p. 348.

Number.

A variance in the number of the goods, if such precise number stated do not constitute the essence of the offence, is immaterial.

Suma.

Sums—It is in general unnecessary to prove the precise sum laid in the indictment, unless the precise sum forms the essence of the offence, or is stated as matter of description. Thus in an indictment for extortion, or taking a greater brokerage than is allowed by act of parliament, it is not necessary to prove the taking of the precise sum laid. R. v. Gilham, 6 T. R. 265. 462; 4 T. R. 590. Where the value of property is essential to constitute an offence, it must be proved to have been sufficient for that purpose. See post, Indictment, Vol. III., p. 348.

II. Degree and Kind of Proof.

And herein of, 1. Best evidence; 2. Secondary evidence; 3. Presumptive evidence; 4. Hearsay evidence; 5. Dying declarations; 6. Confessions; 7. Opinions; 8. Evidence of character.

(I.) Best Evidence.

The best evidence is required.

It is a general rule that the best evidence must be given of which the nature of the thing is capable. Gilb. Ev. 13. Bull. N. P. 293.

The true meaning of this rule is, not that the courts of law require the strongest possible assurance of the matter in question, but that no evidence shall be given, which from the nature of the thing supposes still greater evidence behind in the party's possession or power; for such evidence is altogether insufficient and proves nothing, but carries with it a presumption contrary to the intention for which it is produced. Thus if a party offer a copy of a deed or will, where he has it in his power to produce the original, this raises a presumption, that there is something in the deed or will, which, if produced, would make against the party; and therefore the copy in such a case is not evidence. But if he prove the original deed or will to be in the hands of the adverse party, who refuses to produce it, although he has received a regular notice for that purpose, or if he prove that the original has been lost or destroyed without his default, no such presumption can reasonably be made, and a copy will be admitted, (a) because then such copy is the best evidence that can be produced. Bull. N. P. 293; 1 Phil. Ev. 7 ed. 218. See also, per Lord Tenterden, 2 B. & B. 286; R. v. Radwen, 8 B. & Cres. 708; Williams v. The East India Company, 3 East, 193. 201; and R. v. Stoke Golding, 1 B. & A. 173.

Although the best evidence is thus requisite, yet the strongest possible assurance of a fact, or, in other words, the greatest quantity of existing proof, is not so. Thus, for example, if a deed be attested by several subscribing witnesses, the execution may be proved by one of them; or if none of those witnesses can be produced, proof of the signature of one witness will be sufficient; for the proof is, as far as it goes, complete, and not inferior in its kind to any that can be produced. 1 Phil. Evid. 220; Stark. Evid. Part III. 391.

And this rule as to the best evidence does not apply, unless the evidence proposed be in its general nature of an inferior degree to that for which it

(a) In the case of the Attorney-General v. Le Merchant, 2 T. R. 201, n. it was solemnly decided in the Court of Exchequer, that there is no difference in this respect between criminal and civil cases; that in both parol evidence may be given of the contents of a paper in the defendant's possession, on his refusing to produce it after notice for that purpose.

§ II. (2.) Evidence—(Degree and Kind of Proof).

is sought to be substituted: and upon this principle, the supposed writer of an instrument need not be called to prove he wrote it; the evidence of another person who can speak to his handwriting will suffice. Stark. Evid. Part III. 391; 1 Stark. C. N. P. 167; 1 Chit. C. L. 567, a.

The party's own admission or declaration also will sometimes supersede the necessity of having other evidence. See Confession, Vol. I. Unless where a statute expressly requires the other evidence. See post, 50, as to insolvency proceedings, &c.

Parol evidence is in general esteemed inferior in its nature to written evidence; consequently where there is written evidence it must be first resorted to. Very nice questions have indeed arisen as to whether parol evidence is admissible to prove a fact which may be evidenced by a written instrument. In R. v. Holy Trinity, Kingston upon Hull, 7 B. & Cres. 611; 1 M. & R. 444, S. C., (a settlement case), parol evidence of the fact of a tenancy was admitted, although the tenant held under a written agreement; but there the appellants made out the case without its appearing, from their witnesses, that there was any written agreement; and the terms of such tenancy were not material, and the facts of that case took place before the passing of the acts 59 Geo. III., c. 50, and 6 Geo. IV., c. 57. (See now the sect. 2 of the latter act, by which a settlement by renting a tenement can only be acquired where the same has been bona fide rented for a year at 10*l.* a year). In Bucher v. Jarratt, 3 B. & P. 143, it is said, that though the contents of a written instrument cannot be proved by parol evidence, its general character may.

Parol evidence when allowed to prove a fact which may be proved by written evidence.

The correct doctrine, however, is the one above stated, that where there is written testimony, it must be resorted to before verbal testimony. And in a late settlement case, where the respondents, in order to show that the pauper was not the sole tenant, attempted to prove by parol evidence, that the premises were let to the pauper and two other persons, but the witness on cross-examination having stated that the letting was by a written instrument, the Court of King's Bench held it could be only proved by that instrument. R. v. Rawden, 8 B. & Cres. 708. In Rex v. Merthyr Tydvil, 1 Burn. & Adolp. 29, it was held, that such renting can only appear by reference to the agreement with the landlord, and could not therefore be proved by parol where the contract was in writing and might have been produced. (See the judgment of the court in that case, post, Addenda). In Strother v. Barr, 2 M. & P. 207, S. C. 5 Bingh. 136, the judges of the Court of Common Pleas were equally divided in opinion on a question of this kind. See also R. v. Castle Morton, 3 B. & Ald. 568; M. & M. 257; 1 Stark. C. N. P. 115. In 1 M. & P. 433, it was held in an action for not accounting for the produce of a bill delivered to defendant to get discounted, that the bill need not be produced, and that plaintiff might give parol evidence of its contents.

There can be no doubt that a party may, by keeping out of view, if he can, a written instrument, make out by parol testimony a prima facie case without it, and then it lies on the opposite party to rebut the case so made out. Per Bailey, J., 8 B. & Cres. 710.

Particular statutes sometimes dispense with the best evidence. Several statutory provisions to this effect will be found under titles Excise and Customs, Vol. II.; Stage Coaches, Vol. V.; Newspaper, Libel, Highway, Vol. III.; and as to Bankruptcy, and Insolvency Proceedings, post, 50, Ship's Register, &c. post, 41.

Best evidence dispensed with by particular statutes.

When the copy of a document (the document itself not being evidence at common law) is made evidence by act of parliament, a copy must be produced; the original is not made admissible evidence by implication. 2 Camp. 121, n.; sed vide 6 T. R. 534.

(2.) Secondary Evidence.

To admit of secondary evidence, it must be first shown, that all the proper sources from which the primary or best evidence can be procured are exhausted. Thus, we have already seen (ante, 24), what must be done where a party is desirous of proving a deed or instrument which is in the hands of the opposite party, or lost.

Secondary evidence.

Where there are two instruments executed as parts of a deed, one of these parts is more authentic and satisfactory evidence of the contents of the other parts than any other draft or copy. It is prepared with more care than any other copy; and the party who produces it, and against whom it is used, by taking and keeping it as a part of the deed, admits its accuracy. The courts have, therefore, always required that, if one part of a deed be lost, and another part be in existence, it must be produced, or shown to be in the hands of the opposite party, and then on his refusing to produce, on notice, a copy may be received. See per Best, C. J., Munn v. Godbold, 3 Bingham 295; and see R. v. Hunter, 4 C. & P. 128.

Where the originals of any papers are public documents, as the Journals of Parliament, records, &c. post, 36, 42, attested copies may, for public convenience, be always received in evidence. 3 Salk. 155; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 78.

Notice to produce.

Notice to produce—We have just seen that, when the best written evidence is in possession of the opposite party, he must be served with a notice to produce it, before secondary evidence thereof is admissible.

When necessary or not.

There are four descriptions of cases, where a notice to produce is not necessary: first, where the instrument produced and that to be proved are duplicate originals. Burleigh v. Stibbs, 5 T. R. 465; Roe v. Davis, 7 East, 363; 2 Camp. 315; 6 B. & C. 398. Secondly, where the instrument to be proved is a notice to quit, or a notice of dishonour of a bill, &c. Kine v. Beaumont, 3 B. & B. 288; 6 B. & C. 398. Thirdly, where, from the nature of the proceeding, the opposite party must be aware that he is charged with the possession of the instrument, as in an indictment for stealing, or in an action of trover for a bill or bond, &c. R. v. Aicles, 1 Leach, 330; 6 East, 421; R. v. Ellins, R. & R. C. C. 188; R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 566; 6 B. & C. 398. And, fourthly, where the opposite party has procured the possession of the instrument by fraud, as where he has received it after the commencement of the action, from a witness called for the purpose of producing it under a subpœna duces tecum. Leeds v. Cook, 4 Esp. 256. In these cases secondary evidence of the instrument may be given, although no notice to produce be served.

Service of notice.

Before giving secondary evidence of an instrument in possession of the opposite party, when a notice to produce is necessary, the same must be proved to have been served either on the party himself, or his attorney in the proceeding. Attorney General v. Le Merchant, 2 T. R. 201, n. A parol notice will suffice, but it is better to give a written one. 1 Camp. 440. The notice must specify the instrument, with a particularity sufficient to inform the opposite party what he is called on to produce. See France v. Lucy, R. & M. C. N. P. 341. The notice must be proved to have been served a reasonable time before the time the party is required to produce the instrument. Such time must depend on the circumstances of each case. See 1 Stark. N. P. C. 283; R. & M. C. N. P. 327; id. 47.

It is said that neither party will be allowed to inquire into the contents of an instrument, merely because the opposite party has the original in court at the time of the trial, and that the opposite party may object to secondary evidence of its contents, on account of his not having had notice to produce it. 1 Phil. Evid. 425; 1 Stark. Evid. 362; Roscoe, 3.

Possession of original.

After proof of the service of the notice to produce, the party must give some evidence of the opposite party's possession of the instrument required to be produced before secondary evidence can be given of it. Slight evidence of such possession will suffice, where the instrument belongs exclusively to the party possessing it. See Henry v. Leigh, 3 Camp. 502.

Loss of instrument.

Loss of Instrument—Where the written instrument, containing the best evidence, has been lost, in order to let in secondary evidence thereof, it must be shown that diligent search and inquiries have been made after it; and such search and inquiries must be shown to have been made in those places, and of those persons, where some account of the instrument most probably could be procured. The degree of diligence to be used in searching for a deed must depend on the importance of the deed, and the particular cir-circumstances of the case. Gully v. Bishop of Exeter, 4 Bingham, 290. Where the loss or destruction of the instrument may almost be presumed, very slight evidence of its destruction or loss will suffice. Per Abbot, C. J. Brewster v. Sewell, 3 B. & A. 296. In an action for maliciously, and without probable cause, charging plaintiff with an assault before a magistrate, the magistrate proved that the depositions taken before him were reduced into writing, and that he delivered them, at the court of quarter sessions, to the clerk of the peace or his deputy. The clerk of the peace stated, that a bill of indictment for the assault was preferred, and that the grand jury returned ignoramus, and that it was usual, in such case, to throw away or destroy the depositions; that he had searched among his papers, and could not find them; it was held, that parol evidence of their contents was admissible, and that it was not necessary to call the deputy clerk of the peace to show that the original depositions were not in his possession, inasmuch as it was his duty, if he had received them, to have delivered them to his principal; and not being in his custody, it was to be presumed that they were lost or destroyed. Freeman v. Arkell, 2 B. & C. 494; 2 D. & R. 669, S. C. Where it appeared that an indenture of apprenticeship, twenty-four years old, the expenses of which the overseers of a parish had paid, was sent to those overseers, and was not to be found in the parish chest, it was held that it might be presumed to be lost, and that secondary evidence of its contents was admissible. R. v. Stourbridge, 1 M. & R. M. C. 297. The question of diligent search is, it seems, for a jury. Bampton v. Paulin, 4 Bingham, 264. Where the publisher of a paper, in which a libel had appeared, stated that he believed the original was either destroyed or lost, having been thrown aside as useless, this was held sufficient to let in secondary evidence. Rex v. Johnson, 7 East, 66. Where, in a settlement case, it was proved that one part of an indenture had been executed, that the pauper and master were both dead at the time of the trial, and that an inquiry for it had been made of the pauper shortly before his death, who said that the indenture had been given up to him after the expiration of the apprenticeship, and that he had burnt it, and that an inquiry had also been made of the daughter and sole executrix of the master, who said she knew nothing about it; it was held that a sufficient inquiry had been made to render secondary evidence of the contents admissible. Rex v. Morton, 4 M. & S. 48. Where, however, it appeared that there were two parts of an indenture of apprenticeship, one of which had been destroyed, and the other delivered to A. B., to whom the pauper had been assigned, and that application had been made to A. B. (but who was not called), who said she could not find the indenture, and did not know where it was, the search was held not sufficient. R. v. Castleton, 6 T. R. 236.

What the best Secondary Evidence—If the best evidence cannot be produced, then the best secondary evidence must be so. Thus, if an original deed be lost, the counterpart may be read; and if there is no counterpart, then a copy; and if there be no copy, then parol evidence may be admitted. See Villiers v. Villiers, 2 Atk. 71. B. N. P. 254.

SECONDARY.

Loss of instrument.

What the best secondary evidence.

With respect to what copy is sufficient, it must be one proved to have been examined with the original, and to be a true copy. A rough draft will do. R. v. Hunter, 4 C. & P. 128. In 1 Camp. 503, it is said a copy of the original is good, but not a copy from the original. A copy taken by a copying machine is not evidence without notice to produce the original. Nodin v. Murray, 3 Camp. 228; and see R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 129. When possession has gone along with a deed for many years, the original of which is lost or destroyed, an old copy, or abstract, may be given in evidence, although not proved to be true, because it may be impossible to give better evidence. B. N. P. 254.

What copy sufficient.

Parol Evidence, when admissible when there is Written Evidence.—We have already seen that parol evidence, being inferior to written evidence, cannot, in general, be received instead of it; ante, 25. Besides this, parol

Parol evidence.

PAROL.

In contradiction or

evidence cannot in general be adduced in contradiction to the written evidence, although, indeed, it tend to show the real intention of the parties, 5 Co. 26; nor can it be adduced to show the invariable usage of trade, 1 Phillips, Evid. 539; 6 T. R. 320; or custom of the country, 2 B. & A. 746, in violation of the particular terms of the written instrument. Chit. jun. Contr. 22.

Evidence may be received to explain deeds or instruments where there is a latent ambiguity, but not where there is a patent ambiguity. By a latent ambiguity is intended that which does not appear upon the face of the instrument, where every thing seems right and clear: but the meaning rendered uncertain by the proof of some fact, the law permits the removal of the doubt by the like evidence. Peake's Ev. 112. By a patent ambiguity is that which is apparent on the face of the instrument. See Stark. Ev. Part IV. 1000.

Where there was a devise to her cousin I. C., and there were two of that name; evidence was admitted to show which of the two was meant, for the ambiguity was latent. Peake's Ev. 112.

So where a fine is levied of the manor of D., the conusor having two manors of that name, evidence may be given to show which was meant. Peake's Ev. 113.

So where from the terms of the deed its intent as to its nature is equivocal; for instance, whether it is to enure as a contract of apprenticeship, or only as an agreement to be a mere servant, evidence is admissible to show the intent of the parties, and that some act was done further than that stated in the deed, though forming a part of the same transaction. R. v. Laindon, 8 T. R. 379; 1 Phill. Ev. 544.

Parol evidence is admissible to show that a written contract, purporting to be made between A. and B., as seller and buyer, was in fact made by B., not on his own account, but as agent for a third person. Wilson v. Hart, 7 Taunt. 295; 1 Moore, 45, S. C.; 1 Phill. Ev. 542.

But parol evidence cannot be admitted to contradict the terms of a deed; as in case of a lease to show that the lessee is to pay a given sum to a ground landlord, the lease only stipulating for payment of a sum certain to the lessor. Peake's Ev. 122.

Nor is it admissible to alter the legal construction of an instrument. 3 Camp. 426; 1 M. & S. 21; 5 B. & C. 108; 1 M. & P. 147. As, if no time is mentioned in an agreement as to when it is to take effect, the law adds the time, viz. that it shall take effect immediately, and parol evidence is inadmissible to show the contrary, 5 B. & C. 108; 8 D. & R. 548, S. C.

It seems doubtful, where no consideration is expressed in an instrument, whether a consideration may be proved; see Mildmay's case, 1 Rep. 176, a. 1 Ves. 128; Dyer, 146 a; 3 T. R. 474, aff.; 3 Bing. 112; 5 Bing. 34, sembl. neg. In a settlement case, where the deed of conveyance stated the consideration of the purchase to be 28*l.*, parol evidence was admitted to show that the consideration was in fact 30*l.* R. v. Scammonden, 3 T. R. 474.

Parol evidence of usage or custom is frequently admissible to explain the meaning of the parties, when not definitively expressed on the face of the written instrument. Palm. 211; Dougl. 201; 2 B. & A. 746; and, especially in the construction of mercantile contracts, parol evidence may be admitted to show the sense in which, according to the usage and custom of merchants, the contract was made. See 2 Salk. 443; Park, Ins. 416; 2 B. & C. 160. So in the construction of ancient charters and deeds, &c., their construction may be asserted by parol evidence of usage. 2 Inst. 282; Cowp. 248; 2 B. & B. 406; 3 Atk. 576; 7 East, 199; 6 T. R. 398.

Parol evidence is always admissible to prove a fraud; see B. N. P. 173; 3 B. & C. 623; 8 T. R. 147; 2 P. Wms. 203.

(3.) Presumptive Evidence.

Many times, juries are much induced to rely upon presumptions;

Presumptive

§ II. (4.) Evidence—(Degree and Kind of Proof).

whereof there are three sorts, violent, probable, and light or temerary. Violent presumption many times amounts to full proof; as if one be run through the body with a sword in a house, whereof he instantly dieth, and a man is seen to come out of that house with a bloody sword, and no other man was at that time in the house. Probable presumption moveth little; but light or temerary presumption moveth not at all. 1 Inst. 6; 3 Blac. Com. 371.

PRESUMPTIVE

On an indictment for larceny, proof that a part of the stolen goods have been found upon the person of the prisoner, or in his house or possession, is presumptive evidence against him of his having stolen them, so as to call upon him for his defence; and may be sufficient to warrant a conviction, if no facts appear in evidence to repel that presumption. The goods are sometimes found in the prisoner's house before his apprehension, frequently found afterwards; and there can be no objection to proof of their being found at one time or the other. This kind of evidence is frequently strengthened materially by other circumstances, as by proof that about the time of the offence the prisoner was near the spot from which the goods were taken, or that he gave some false account respecting the goods on being charged with the crime, or endeavoured to conceal them, or perhaps tried to prevent an inspection, or by some other proof of suspicious circumstances in his behaviour. On the other hand, the inference, arising from the mere fact of possession, will be much weakened, if any considerable time has elapsed between the loss of the property and the finding of it again, or if the property was from its nature likely to pass in the interval through many hands; especially where the prisoner betrayed no appearance of guilt at the time of his apprehension. 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 168, 169; see 2 East's P. C. 656, 657.

Where the knowledge of the defendant of the nature of his conduct is the point in issue, as where he is charged with uttering a forged note, knowing it to be forged, evidence of his having committed a series of acts of the same description may be received as presumptive of knowledge. 1 Camp. 324; 2 Leach, 983, 987; 1 New Rep. 92; Russ. & R. C. C. 120, 132, 245. R. & M. C. C. 148, more fully noticed, ante, 21.

So it is of a charter of feoffment, if all the witnesses to the deed be dead (as no man can keep his witnesses alive, and time weareth out all men), then violent presumption, which stands for a proof, is continual and quiet possession. Also the deed may receive credit from a comparing of seals, writing, and the like. 1 Inst. 6. See Doc Wilkins v. Cleveland, Marquis, 9 B. & Cres. 864.

As to the presumption of rights of way, see Highways, Vol. III. p. 5, 6.

The death of a party will be presumed, if he has not been heard of for seven years or more. 6 East, 84; 4 B. & Ald. 430. In a late case it was held, that after one hundred years, the death of a party without issue would be presumed. 8 B. and Cres. 22. Proof that a person sailed in a ship, bound for the West Indies, two or three years ago, and that the ship has not since been heard of, is presumptive evidence that the person is dead; but the time of the death, if material, must depend on the circumstances of the case; see Watson v. King, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 121.

Twenty years' regular usage, uncontradicted and unexplained, is cogent evidence for a jury to presume, that a custom for a steward of the manor to nominate a jury to serve on the court leet, at the election of the mayor of a borough, is an immemorial custom. R. v. Joliffe, 3 D. & R. 240; 2 B. & C. 54, 55, 56.

(4.) Hearsay Evidence.

In general, that which another asserts must be by oath in a court of justice; and no one will be permitted to come into such court, and say upon his oath that he heard such a one declare certain facts to have occurred; but he who makes the declaration must himself repeat it upon his oath. And this is that which is termed hearsay evidence, viz. the deposing on oath, that certain facts are, which facts are only known to the deponent by the relation of some other person. See 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 229; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 46; Bull. N. P. 294; Stark. Evid. Part I. 40—47; Roscoe, 15.

In the Queen's case it was held, that if, upon the trial of an indictment, it appear upon cross-examination of one of the witnesses for the prosecution, that J. S. was employed by the prosecutor for the purpose of procuring and examining evidence and witnesses in support of the indictment, the defendant cannot give evidence of J. S.'s having offered a bribe to a certain person, to induce him to give evidence touching the matter of the indictment, unless such person have been examined as a witness. The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 302.

Hearsay pedigree,
births, marriages,
&c.

Pedigree, Births, Marriages, &c.]—On inquiring into the truth of facts which happened a long time ago, the courts have varied from the strict rules of evidence applicable to modern facts of the same description, on account of the great difficulty of proving those remote facts in the ordinary manner, by living witnesses. On this principle, hearsay and reputation (which latter is the hearsay of those who may be supposed to have known the fact handed down from one to another) have been admitted as evidence in cases of pedigree. Per Le Blanc, J., in Highman v. Ridgway, 10 East, 120.

Thus declarations of deceased members of the family are admissible evidence to prove relationship; as, who was a person's grandfather, or whom he married, or how many children he had, or as to the time of a marriage or of the birth of a child, and the like, of which it cannot be reasonably presumed that better evidence is to be procured. 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 238. And the declarations of a deceased relative are admissible, notwithstanding that if he was alive he would stand in pari jure with the party on whose behalf such evidence is tendered, and have the same right to recover. Doe Tilman v. Turner, R. & M. C. N. P. 141.

But declarations of servants and intimate acquaintance are not admissible evidence in questions of pedigree. Johnson v. Lawson and another, 2 Bing. 86; 1 Phill. Evid. 240, 7 ed.

Nor is hearsay evidence by a pauper of the declarations of his deceased putative father, as to the birthplace of the pauper, admissible. R. v. Erith, 8 East, 539; see Roscoe, 15.

A written memorandum by a deceased man-midwife, stating that he had delivered a woman of a child on a certain day, and referring to his ledger, in which a charge for his attendance was marked as paid, was thought by the Court of King's Bench to have been properly received in evidence, upon an issue as to the child's age. This entry was made by a person who, so far from having an interest to make it, had an interest the other way: for it appeared distinctly, from other evidence, that the work charged was actually done; and the discharge in the book repels the claim which he would otherwise have had. Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 108, 110; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 256.

On a question, whether a testator at the time of making his will was of full age, a written memorandum by his deceased father, stating the time of his birth, has been admitted to be good evidence. Herbert v. Tuckall, T. Raym. 84, cited in Brune v. Rawlins, 7 East, 290.

And the declarations of deceased persons, as to whether they were married or whether the person in question was born before or after marriage, are evidence. Stevens v. Moss, 2 Cowp. 591; Doe Northey v. Harvey, R. & M. C. N. P. 297.

Declarations made after a controversy or suit has arisen, with regard to the point in question, are inadmissible. Berkeley Peerage case, 4 Camp. 401; 2 Selw. N. P. 712.

Declarations in the family descriptions upon monuments or gravestones, in bibles and registry books, recitals in family deeds, engravings on rings, old pedigrees hung up in a family mansion, and the like (in which it is improbable that a description would be suffered to continue if erroneous), are all of them admissible, upon the principle that they are the natural effusions of a party who must know the truth, and who speaks upon an occasion when his mind stands in an even position, without any temptation to exceed or fall short of the truth. 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 239.

Right of way, &c.

Ownership of Way, Estate, &c.]—In questions about a right of way, reputation, i. e. what old people deceased have said upon the subject, is good evidence. Bull. N. P. 295. See Highway, Vol. III. p. 8.

HEARSAY.

Whether a particular piece of land be parcel of an estate may be proved by declarations made by a deceased tenant while in possession. Ib. A declaration by the owner or occupier of adjoining land, that his neighbour's land extends to such a spot, accompanying an act of forbearance to go beyond the spot for that reason (or without such act, if he speaks against his interest) is evidence that the land extends so far. Sir T. Stanley v. White, 14 East, 332. 339; 1 Phill. Evid. 163. 245. And the declaration of a deceased occupier of land, that he rented it under a certain person, is evidence of that person's seisin. Uncle v. Watson, 4 Taunt. 16; Doe d. Baggalley v. Jones, 1 Camp. 367; Doe Human v. Pettett, 5 B. & A., 228. 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 258. But entries by a third person, deceased, in his books, of receipts of rent from his tenant for a particular estate, are not admissible to prove the identity of the land, in a cause between two others. Outram v. Morewood, 5 T. R. 121; and see further as to this, post, 32.

Ownership of estate.

In cases of custom, reputation by deceased persons, as to the right, may be proved; but not to prove that they, the deceased persons, had said that they had seen certain facts take place, which amounted to an exercise of the right. R. v. Ereswell, 3 T. R. 707.

Customs.

[Settlements]—The deathbed declarations of paupers respecting their settlements are, it seems, evidence; and sometimes the general declarations of deceased paupers are evidence. R. v. Bury, Cald. 481; vide R. v. Ereswell, 3 T. R. 707.

Settlements.

The owner of a house let to a pauper, having died before an appeal against a removal, grounded on a settlement by tenancy, was heard, it was made a question whether a declaration made by him during the time the pauper occupied the house, that he had let it to him, and that another person had duly guaranteed the rent, could be received. R. v. Chediston, 6 D. & R. 269; 4 B. & C. 230, 8. C.

Hearsay evidence, from a wife, of the declarations of her husband, living abroad, respecting his settlement, are admissible when supported by slight circumstances. R. v. Wareham, Cald. 141. So declarations of a husband to his wife, respecting his settlement, seem, after his death, to be admissible evidence; but if they refer to a written instrument, they cannot be received unless previous inquiry is shown to have been made after it. R. v. St. Sepulchre, Cald. 547. See ante, 30; post, 87.

In an appeal, the respondents, in order to prove the fact of the delivery to them of a certificate given by the appellants, acknowledging the pauper to be their settled inhabitant, produced an old book from their own parish chest, in which was an entry of that fact in the handwriting of a former parish officer; it was held that such evidence was inadmissible. Re v. Debenham, 2 B. & A. 185, and post, 32.

[Public or general Rights]—A general right may be proved by traditional evidence; a particular fact cannot. Per Ld. Kenyon, C. J., in Outram v. Morewood, 5 T. R. 123. Upon a question of boundary between two parishes and manors, whether a certain common was within the parish and manor of H. or the parish of B. and manor of M., Le Blanc, J. admitted evidence of what old persons, then dead, had said concerning the boundaries, though not as to particular facts or transactions. And this though the old persons were parishioners, and claimed rights of common on the waste which would be enlarged by their several declarations; there not appearing any dispute at the time respecting the right of such old persons. Nicholls v. Parker, 14 East, 331, n. 1 M. & S. 81. But not so as to a boundary between two estates. Clothier v. Chapman, 14 East, 331, n.

Public or general rights.

HEARSAY.

Where in trespass the question was whether certain land was in the parish of A. or parish of B., the land in B. being tithe-free, it was held that ancient leases granted by the ancestor of the landlord, in which the land was described as being in parish B., were admissible as evidence of reputation that the land was in that parish. Old rates made by the parish officers of B. on the occupiers of the land in question were also produced; and an account, containing an overseer's account, in which, against the sum for which the occupier of that land had been assessed, there were crosses made, were produced: it was held that these were evidence that the sums assessed had been paid by the tenants. Plaxton v. Dare, 10 B. & Cres. 17.

Perambulations are evidence of the extent of a particular parish or manor. 1 Maule & S. 687; 1 Phil. Evid. 7 ed. 284.

Before a customary right can be proved by evidence of reputation, a foundation must be laid by showing acts of ownership, and then the evidence of reputation becomes admissible; such evidence being confined to what old persons, who were in a situation to know what these rights are, have been heard to say concerning them. Weeks v. Sparke, 1 M. & S. 687; Peake Evid. 15.

Declarations as to boundaries or customs, &c., made post litem motam, are not admissible as evidence of reputation. R. v. Cotton, 3 Camp. 444; 11 Price, 180; 1 Phil. Evid. 7 ed. 250.

Hearsay of persons having no interest to misrepresent.

Where Party has no Interest to misrepresent—In many cases, the declarations of deceased persons, who have had no interest to misrepresent, or whose interest was to represent the other way, have been admitted in evidence; as entries by a deceased rector, or vicar, as to the receipt of ecclesiastical dues, are admissible for his successor, for he had no interest to misstate the fact. 2 Gwill. 529; 4 Price, 218. So, entries made by a deceased collector of rates, charging himself with the receipt of money, and made by him in the public books of his office, are admissible against his surety, to prove his receipt. Goss v. Watlington, 3 B. & B. 132. And in Middleton v. Melton, 10 B. & Cres. 317, it was held that an entry made by a deceased collector of taxes, in a private book kept by him for his own convenience, whereby he charged himself with the receipt of sums of money, was evidence against a surety of the fact of the receipt of such money in an action on a bond conditioned for the due payment of the taxes by the collector, although the parties by whom the money had been paid were alive, and might have been called as witnesses; and that upon the general principle that the entry was to the prejudice of the party who made it. And see 8 B. & Cres. 556; Gow, 227; Doe Smith v. Cartwright, R. & M. C. N. P. 62; Roscoe, 18, 19.

To prove soil and freehold, the entries made by a former steward of the manor in his day-book, of receipts of sums of money for trespasses committed upon the place in question, were held to be good evidence, as the steward thereby charged himself with the receipt of money; and these entries may either be in his handwriting, or in a book signed in his handwriting. And the rule is, that if a steward's entry be sufficient to charge himself, it is admissible evidence. Barry v. Bebbington, 4 T. R. 514.

To prove the fact of a surrender of an interest in an estate, the books of the attorney, since deceased, who had made an entry of having prepared the writings, and of the charge for the same, as due to himself, and then an entry that they were paid, were admitted in evidence, and afterwards agreed by the court to be so. Warren d. Webb v. Greenville, 2 Str. 1129.

So, to prove the real time of executing a lease to have been different from its actual date, an attorney's entry of charges by himself for making the lease, and of payment of those charges, was admitted as good evidence. Doe d. Reece v. Robson, 15 East, 33; and see the case of the surgeon, ante, 30.

This, upon the ground that there was a total absence of interest in the persons making the entry to pervert the fact, and at the same time a competency in them to know it. And Bayley, J., said, it had long been an established principle of evidence, that if a party, who has knowledge of the fact, make an entry of it, whereby he charges himself, or discharges another upon whom he would otherwise have a claim, such entry is admissible evidence of the fact, because it is against his own interest. 15 East, 35.

“The general rule,” said Ld. Hardwicke, in the case of Glynn v. The Bank of England, 2 Ves. 43, “is, that a man cannot make evidence for himself. What he writes or says for himself cannot be evidence of his right, and consequently cannot be for his representative claiming in his right and place. I will not say” (added Lord Hardwicke) “how length of time may vary it; but otherwise it cannot be any more than for himself.” 1 Phill. Ev. 241, 242; R. v. Debenham, 2 B. & A. 185.

A party cannot make evidence for himself.

A man's book of accounts is no evidence for the owner of the book, though it is for the adverse party; for his book cannot be of better credit than his oath, which would not serve in his own case, Tr. per Pais, 348. As to shop books in action for goods sold, &c., see 7 Jac. I. c. 12; B. N. P. 282.

When Hearsay Part of the Transaction itself—When hearsay is introduced, not as a medium of proof in order to establish a distinct fact, but as being in itself a part of the transaction in question, it is then admissible; for, to exclude it, might be to exclude the only evidence of which the nature of the case is capable. Rosc. 17, B. N. P. 40; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 46. As the declarations of a party of the hurt he received, made immediately on his receiving it, from an assault. See Thompson v. Trevanion, Skin. 402: and see 6 East, 193; 3 Esp. 276. In Ld. Gordon's case, the declarations of the mob were held admissible in evidence. 21 How. St. Tr. 542.

Hearsay, when part of the transaction.

Titles of Office, Character, &c.—If upon collateral issue it is to be proved that such an one was justice of the peace, baronet, or the like, common reputation is sufficient proof, without showing the commission or letters patent of the creation. Tr. per Pais, 347.

Titles of office.

And in the case of justices of the peace, peace officers, constables, &c., it is sufficient to prove that they acted in those characters, without producing their appointments. So determined by all the Judges in the case of the Gordons, tried for murder in 1789, 1 Leach, 581; R. v. Shelley, 1 Leach, 381, n.; Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366.

And in an indictment for disobeying a justice's order for diverting a road, it was held unnecessary to produce the commission of the peace to prove the persons to be magistrates who signed the order. Per Hotham, B. R. v. —, Kingston Lent Ass. 1801, 1 Nol. P. L. 598.

So at the trial of an officer on an information for defrauding government by false returns of musters, it was held sufficient to prove that he acted in the character mentioned in the information, without proving the commission from the king. R. v. Gardiner, 2 Camp. 513.

And in general, where a party assumes a particular character, proof of that fact will suffice, as against that party. See 3 T. R. 635, n.

(5.) Dying Declarations.

The Dying Declarations of a person who expects to die, respecting the circumstances under which he received a mortal injury, are constantly admitted in criminal prosecutions where the death is the subject of criminal inquiry, though the accused was not present when they were made, and had no opportunity for cross-examination. See 1 Phill. Ev. 223; 1 Stark. Ev. 101. For it is considered, that when an individual is in constant expectation of immediate death, all temptations to falsehood, either of interest, hope, or fear, will be removed, and the awful nature of his situation may be presumed to impress him as strongly with the necessity of a strict adherence to truth as the most solemn obligation of an oath administered in a court of justice. 1 Leach, 502; 1 Gilb. Evid. 280; 1 Chit. C. L. 568, 9. To enable these testimonies to be given in evidence, they must be made when the party is not only in actual danger of death, but when he is aware of the circumstances in which he is placed, and impressed with a sense of speedy dissolution. 1 Leach, 503; 1 East, P. C. 353. But it is not necessary that the deceased should express that opinion in words; it will be sufficient if it can be collected from the general circumstances of his condition. Id.

Dying declarations.

DYING DECLARATIONS.

In R. v. Mosley, Ry. & M. C. C. R. 97, it was held, that the declarations of the deceased, made on the day he was wounded, and when he believed he should not recover, were evidence, although he did not die till eleven days after, and although the surgeon did not think his case hopeless, and continued to tell him so till the day of his death. In R. v. Christie, Car. C. L. 232, O. B. 1821, the deceased asked his surgeon if the wound was necessarily mortal; and on being told that recovery was just possible, and that there had been an instance where a person had recovered after such a wound, he said, "I am satisfied;" and after this he made a statement. This statement was held by Abbott, C. J., and Park, J., to be inadmissible as a declaration in articulo mortis, as it did not appear that the deceased thought himself at the point of death; for being told that the wound was not necessarily mortal, he might still have had a hope of recovery.

The declarations are only admissible where the death is the subject of the charge, and the circumstances of the death are the subject of the declaration. Thus in a late case where the prisoner was indicted for administering savin to a woman pregnant, but not quick with child, with intent to procure abortion. The woman was dead, and, for the prosecution, evidence of her dying declaration upon the subject was tendered. The learned judge rejected the evidence, observing, that although the declaration might relate to the cause of the death, still such declarations were admissible in those cases alone where the death of the party was the subject of inquiry. R. v. Hutchison, 2 B. & C. 608. So in R. v. Mead, 2 B. & C. 605; 4 D. & R. 120, S. C., defendant having been convicted of perjury, a rule nisi for a new trial was obtained; whilst that was pending, the defendant Mead shot the prosecutor Law; and on showing cause against the rule, an affidavit was tendered of the dying declaration of the latter, as to the transaction out of which the prosecution for perjury arose. The Court of K. B. held, that it could not be read; for dying declarations are admissible only where the death is the subject of the charge, and the circumstances of the death are the subject of the declaration. So, in trials for robbery, the dying declarations of the party robbed are rejected. Per Bayley & Best, JJ. 1822, 1 Phill. Ev. 225.

In Wright v. Littler, 3 Burr. 1244, however, the declarations of subscribing witnesses, confessing the forgery of a deed, were admitted; and see 6 East, 195; but in Doe dem. Sutton v. Ridgway, 4 B. & A. 54, Abbott, C. J., says, that the cases cited (viz. those of the deceased persons, in cases of murder or manslaughter, or subscribing witnesses to deeds, confessing the deeds to be forged) are the only exceptions to the general rule of not receiving evidence unless upon oath, and with the opportunity of a cross-examination; and Bayley, J., observes, that the declarations admitted in the case of Aveson v. Kinnaird, 6 East, 188, were a part of the res gestæ.

The dying party must, at the time of making the declarations, to render them admissible, have an idea of a future state; therefore the declarations of a dying child, only of four years of age, have been held inadmissible. R. v. Pike, 3 C. & P. C. N. P. 598.

Nothing can be evidence in a declaration in articulo mortis that would not be so if the party were sworn. Therefore, any thing the murdered person, in articulo mortis, says as to facts, is receivable, but not what he says as matter of opinion. R. v. Sellers, O. B. 1796, Car. C. L. 233.

If the declaration of the deceased, at the time of his making it, be reduced into writing, the written document must be given in evidence, and no parol testimony respecting its contents can be admitted. Vin. Ab. Evid. 38 (A. b.).

The dying declaration of a criminal at the scaffold will not be thus admissible; because his oath could no longer have been received in a court of justice, after his blood is corrupted. 1 Leach, 337; 2 Hawk. c. 46. s. 51.

The court are to decide as to the admissibility of the declaration. 1 Leach, 504; R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 532; R. v. Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. C. N. P. 629.

(6.) Confessions.

We have already seen how far the confessions of the party himself are evidence against him. Ante, Confession, Vol. I.

(7.) Opinions of Witnesses.

Opinions—Upon questions of skill and judgment, the opinions of competent judges are admissible in evidence; but in general mere matter of opinion is not so. Thus, on a trial where the defence is insanity, a witness of medical skill may be asked, whether such and such appearances, proved by other witnesses, are in his judgment symptoms of insanity—R. v. Wright, R. & R. C. C. 456; but it is questionable whether he can be asked, whether, from other testimony given, the act with which the prisoner is charged is, in his opinion, an act of insanity, which is the very point to be decided by the jury, id. A physician, who has not seen the particular patient, may, after hearing the evidence of others, be called to prove, on oath, the general effects of the disease described by them, and its probable consequences in the particular case. Peake's Evid. 208; and see Roscoe, 77.

(8.) Evidence of Character.

In trials for felony and high treason, and in trials also for misdemeanors (where the direct object of the prosecution is to punish the offence), the prisoner is always permitted to call witnesses to his general character; and in every case of doubt proof of good character will be entitled to great weight. The inquiry as to the prisoner's general character ought manifestly to bear some analogy and reference to the nature of the charge against him. On a charge of stealing, it would be irrelevant and absurd to inquire into the prisoner's loyalty or humanity; on a charge of high treason, it would be equally absurd to inquire into his honesty and punctuality in private dealings. Such evidence relates to principles of moral conduct, which, however they might operate on other occasions, would not be likely to operate on that which alone is the subject of inquiry; it would not afford the least presumption, that the prisoner might not have been tempted to commit the crime for which he is tried, and is therefore totally inapplicable to the point in question. The inquiry must also be as to the general character; for it is general character alone which can afford any test of general conduct, or raise a presumption that the person who had maintained a fair reputation down to a certain period would not then begin to act a dishonest unworthy part. Proof of particular transactions in which the defendant may have been concerned is not admissible as evidence of his general good character. The best medium of proof of general character is, by showing how the person stands in general estimation; proof that he is reputed to be honest is evidence of his character for honesty, and the species of evidence most correctly resorted to in such inquiries. 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 177.

CHARACTER.

This evidence is only admitted in prosecutions which subject a man to corporal punishment, and not in actions or informations for penalties, though founded on the fraudulent conduct of the defendant. Peake's Evid. 7.

"The true line of distinction," Eyre, C. B., said, "is this: in a direct prosecution for a crime, such evidence is admissible; but where the prosecution is not directly for the crime, but for the penalty, as in this information, it is not." Attorney General v. Bowman, cited 2 Bos. & Pull. 532.

In Huntley v. Luscombe, it was said by Lens, Serjt., and not contradicted by the court, that the Court of Exchequer is not a criminal court; and all suits for penalties of this nature, though for the king, are considered as civil. The penalty was for a breach of the Excise laws. 2 Bos. & Pull. 532.

On the trial of an indictment for a rape, evidence is admissible on the part of the prisoner, that the woman bore a notoriously bad character for want of chastity and common decency, or that she had previously been criminally connected with the prisoner. But it cannot be shown that she had a criminal connexion with other persons. R. v. Hodgson, R. & R. C. C. 211; 1 Phill. Evid. 176, 7 ed. And, on an indictment for an assault with intent to commit a rape, general evidence of the woman's bad character, previous to the supposed offence, is clearly admissible; but evidence of particular facts, to impeach her chastity, cannot be received in this case more than in the last, not even for the purpose of contradicting her answers in cross-examination. R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. N. P. 243. Her answers to questions respecting particular facts, not involved in the issue, are conclusive. And if, on cross-examination, she admit her own misconduct in some earlier transactions, it would be proper, on re-examination, to inquire into her conduct subsequent to such transactions, for the purpose of restoring her credit: other witnesses may also be called to show that she has since retrieved her character. Id. 1 Phill. Evid. 176, 7 ed. And see further, post, Rape, Vol. V., p. 260.

III. Modes of Proof by Written Evidence.

Modes of Proof.

The Modes of proving Facts are by, 1st, Written Evidence; and 2nd, Verbal Evidence by Witnesses.

(1) Written evidence.

Written Evidence may consist of public documents,—of records and proceedings in courts,—or of private documents.

(1.) Public Documents.

Acts of parliament.

Acts of Parliament—Acts of parliament relate either to the kingdom at large, when they are called general acts; or only to particular classes of men, or to certain individuals, in which case they are called private acts. Bull. N. P. 222.

Public acts.

Public acts are not the subject of proof in any court of justice, for being the law of the land, they are supposed to be known to every man. The printed statute book is on all occasions referred to, not as an authentic copy of the statute itself (which is a record), but as hints of that which is supposed to be lodged in every man's mind already. Gilh. 10.

Private acts.

Private acts of parliament, not concerning the public, are not considered as laws, but facts, and therefore must be proved like other records which concern private rights, by copies examined with the parliament rolls; for the printed statutes are, in this respect, only private copies, and, consequently, no evidence of the fact. Bull. N. P. 223. In most private acts a clause is inserted directing that the act shall be deemed and taken to be as a public act, or that a copy printed by the king's printer shall be admitted in evidence, which supersedes the neces-city of evidence to prove, or special pleading to introduce them to the notice of a court of justice. PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

By stat. 41 Geo. III. U. K. c. 90, s. 9, the statutes of England and of Great Britain, printed and published by the king's printer, shall be received as conclusive evidence of the several statutes in the courts of either kingdom.

41 Geo. 3. c. 90.

The preamble of an act of parliament, reciting that certain outrages had been committed in particular parts of the kingdom, has been adjudged by the court of King's Bench, in a late case, to be admissible in evidence, for the purpose of proving an introductory averment in an information for a libel, that outrages of that description had existed, because in judgment of law every subject is privy to the making of the statute. R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & S. 532. See further, post, Statutes, Vol. V.

Preamble of acts.

Journals of Parliament—The journals of the houses of parliament may be proved by examined copies; but the printed journals are not evidence. Id. Melville's case, 24 How. St. Tr. 603. In Jones v. Randall, Coup. 17, it was held an unstamped copy of the minutes of the reversal of a judgment in the House of Lords, without more of the proceeding, was evidence of such reversal.

Journals of parliament.

The journals are in general evidence of the facts therein stated. R. v. Franklin, 17 How. St. Tr. 617. But the resolutions of the house are not so. Oates's case, 10 id. 1165—7.

Proclamations, Addresses, and Articles of War—These, as printed by the king's printer, are considered as sufficiently proving themselves by the mere production of a witness, who purchased them of such printer. See R. v. Withers, 5 T. R. 446; Bradley v. Arthur, 4 B. & Cres. 304; Attorney-General v. Theakstone, 8 Price, 89. A paper from the Secretary of State's office, transmitted by the British ambassador at a foreign court, and purporting to be a declaration of war by the government of that country against another foreign state, is admissible for the purpose of showing the precise period of the commencement of the war. Theluson v. Cosling, 4 Esp. 266. The recitals in a proclamation are evidence of the facts recited. R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & S. 532.

Proclamations, &c.

Gazette—The gazette printed and published by the king's printer, or by the authority of government, is evidence of all acts of state, and is sufficiently proved by the production by a witness who purchased it of such printer. R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436. But according to R. v. Forsyth, R. & R. C. C. 277. it seems not to be necessary to prove it was bought of the gazette printer, or where it came from.

Gazette.

It is evidence of all acts of state therein recited, id.; but not of any private matters respecting individuals, R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436; as the appointment of an officer to a commission in the army. Kirwan v. Cockburn, 5 Esp. 233; R. v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513, or a grant of land, &c. 5 T. R. 443.

The gazette is no evidence of a party having had notice of a private matter contained therein, unless it be proved that such party was in the habit of reading, or had actually read, the gazette itself, or the like. See Peake, 154, 155; 1 Stark. 186; 2 Stark. 255; M. & M. 153; 3 Bing. 2; Harratt v. Wise, 9 B. & Cres. 712.

Almanacks—The examination of an almanack, that such a day of the month was Sunday, was ruled to be sufficient; and that a trial of this by a jury is not necessary, although it is a matter of fact. Cro. Eliz. 227. But the almanack should be annexed to the common prayer book. 6 Mod. 81.

Almanacks.

The reason why the calendar in an almanack is allowed to be evidence seemeth to be, because the said calendar is part of the book of common prayer, which is established by act of parliament.

Parish Registers—The entry of the names and titles of persons in a Parish register.

Parish register.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

church book, either for marriages or births, is evidence ; but not conclusive of the marriage or birth of any persons, unless the identity of the person (by such entries intended) is fully proved, and also strengthened with circumstances, as cohabitation, the allowance of the parties themselves, and the like. 11 Vin. Abr. 89 ; R. v. North Petherton, 5 B. & Cres. 508 ; 4 D. & R. M. C. 79. S. C.

But a day-book from whence the register is made up was not allowed as evidence to contradict the latter in a question of legitimacy : for though it was insisted that one was the original entry, the other was the only register, and there cannot be two registers in one parish. May v. May, 2 Str. 1073 ; Bull. N. P. 247. And in Doe Warren v. Bray, 8 B. & Cres. 813, it was held, that an entry in the register-book, by the minister of the parish, of the baptism of a child which had taken place before he became minister, or had any connexion with the parish, and of which he received information from the parish-clerk, was not admissible in evidence, nor was the private memorandum of the fact made by the clerk who was present at the baptism.

A parish register, containing an entry of baptism as to the time of a child's birth, is not evidence of the age, Wiher v. Law, 3 Stark. 63. Nor is the register of the christening of a child in a particular parish evidence, when not accompanied by other circumstances, that the child was born in the parish. R. v. North Petherton, 5 B. & C. 508 ; 8 D. & R. 325 ; 4 D. & R. M. C. 79, S. C. ; 12 Vin. Abr. 89. supra.

The entry may be proved by an examined copy from the entry in the register, or by production of the register itself. B. N. P. 247. The attesting witness to the register need not be subpoenaed. Dougl. 182.

We have just seen, that some evidence of identity of the parties, concerning whom the entry is made, must be established ; this may be effected by calling the minister, clerk, or attesting witness, or any other person present on or immediately after the occasion, or by proving the handwriting of the party to the entry, if indeed he signed it. Dougl. 162 ; Roscoe, 50. If a marriage be proved by a person who was present, it is not necessary to prove the registration, or licence, or bans. Allison's case, R. & R. C. C. 109.

52 Geo. 3. c. 146.

By stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 146, s. 7, it is enacted, that copies of the register books, verified by the officiating minister of the parish, shall be transmitted annually by the churchwardens, after they or one of them shall have signed the same, to the registrars of the diocese within which the church is situated. See tit. Parish Registers, Vol. V.

The copy of a register of a dissenting chapel is not evidence to prove a marriage, as it is not a public document. Newnham v. Raithby, 1 Phill. 315.

Foreign registers.

It may be as well here to observe, that the copy of a register of a foreign chapel is not admissible to prove a marriage abroad. Leader v. Barry, 1 Esp. 353. Neither is the copy of a register of baptism kept in the island of Guernsey. Huet v. Le Mesurier, 1 Cox's Ca. 275.

Other public books, &amp;c.

Other Public Books, Entries, &c.—Entries in public books are frequently evidence, and they are proveable either by production of the books themselves, or by examined copies of the entries.

Navy office.

Thus entries in books of the Navy office are sufficient evidence that a person of a particular name is dead, proving also the usage to return such persons dead, and the identity of the party. Bull. N. P. 249 ; Wallace v. Cook, 5 Esp. 117 ; Rhode's case, 1 Leach, 24.

Excise.

Excise books, transcribed from the master's specimen papers, are evidence against him, without calling the officers who have transcribed them, as it is said, ex necessitate rei. R. v. Grimswood, 1 Price, 369.

Customs, land-tax, bank.
East India Company, &c.

So entries in the books of the Custom-house, land-tax commissioners, Bank, East India Company, or South Sea Company, or the like, are evidence. See 2 Ld. Raym. 851 ; 2 T. R. 234 ; Peake, 30 ; 2 Stra. 954. 1005 ;

6 Hardw. 128. So is an entry in the book at Lloyd's sometimes evidence. 2 Esp. 242; Bain v. Case, 3 C. & P. 496. So is an entry in the poll-books at an election. Mead v. Robinson, Willes, 424; 1 Stra. 307.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

Post-office marks in town or country, proved to be such, are evidence, that the letters on which they are impressed were in the office to which those marks belong, at the dates those marks specify. R. v. Plumer, R. & R. C. C. 264; Fletcher v. Braddyll, 3 Stark. 64.

Lloyd's list.
Poll-books.
Post-office.

Rolls or ancient books in the Heralds' office are evidence to prove a pedigree; but an extract of a pedigree, proved to be taken out of records, shall not; because such extract is not the best evidence in the nature of the thing, as a copy of such records might be had. Bull. N. P. 248; 3 Blac. Com. 105. The heralds' visitation books of counties are evidence on a question of pedigree. Pitton v. Walker, 1 Stra. 162.

Heralds' office.

Documents affecting the possession or revenues of the duchy of Cornwall are public acts, and evidence of the rights of the crown. Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & Cres. 743.

Duchy of Cornwall.

The copy of an official paper, containing an entry of the number of passengers on board a vessel, made in pursuance of an act of parliament by the captain, and deposited at the East India House, is admissible to prove the number and description of the persons on board the vessels. Richardson v. Mellish, R. & M. C. N. P. 66; 2 Bing. 220. S. C. So the log-book of a man-of-war is evidence to show when a certain ship came under her convoy. D'Israeli v. Jowett, 1 Esp. R. 427.

Ship's papers.

Entries in the books of the clerk of the peace of deputations (many years since granted to gamekeepers by the owner of a manor) are evidence to show that the party there mentioned exercised the right of appointing gamekeepers, by applying to the clerk of the peace to get certificates, without production of the deputations themselves. Hunt v. Andrews, 3 B. & A. 341; Rushworth v. Craven, 1 Mac. & Y. 417.

Clerk of peace books.

The book from the Master's office in the King's Bench is admissible to prove a person an attorney of that Court without production of the roll. R. v. Crossley, 2 Esp. 524. So the books of the King's Bench and Fleet prisons are admissible to prove the dates of the commitment and discharge of prisoners. R. v. Aicles, Leach, C. L. 436; but not the cause of the commitment, of which the commitment itself is the best evidence. Salte v. Thomas, 3 B. & P. 188.

Master's office, King's Bench.

The books of the Fleet prison are not, as it seems, evidence to prove a marriage, for they are not made by public authority. Peake, 231, 1 Esp. 213, S. C. Peake, 233, n. Roscoe, 93: sed vide Peake, 231; 1 Esp. 197; 16 Ves. 49.

Fleet prison.

Corporation books, so far as they concern the public government of a town, when publicly kept, and the entries made by a proper officer, are admissible as evidence of the facts contained therein. Peake, 97; Marriage v. Lawrence, 3 B. & A. 142; R. v. Mothersell, 1 Stra. 93. And corporation books are, it seems, in all cases, as between members of the corporation, admissible in evidence. Mayor of London v. Mayor of Lynn, 1 Hen. Bla., 214, n. If the books are ancient, it must be shown that they came from the proper custody, as from a chest which has been always in the custody of the clerk of the corporation. Mercers of Shrewsbury v. Hart, 1 C. & P. 114. It is not sufficient if they were brought from a chest found in the house of a former clerk after his death; id. The entries may be proved by examined copies, 1 Stra. 308, or by the books themselves. If the entries do not relate to corporate acts, the contents must be proved by other means. R. v. Gwyn, 1 Stra. 401.

Corporation books.

When an instrument being a corporate act, and intended to be proved as such, is adduced in evidence, the seal of the corporation must be proved to be genuine by a witness acquainted with it, 8 T. R. 307; but it is not necessary to call a witness who saw the seal fixed, id. The seal of the corporation of London proves itself, 1 Esp. 53.

Entries in parish books are sometimes evidence, as an entry in the parish register; as to which see ante, 37, 38.

Parish books.

PUBLIC

Apprentices.

By the 42 Geo. III., c. 46, ante, Apprentice, Vol. I., the particulars of parish indentures are directed to be entered in a book; which book shall be deemed sufficient evidence in courts of law, of the existence and particulars of such indentures, in case it shall be proved the originals are lost or destroyed.

Poor rates.

By 17 Geo. II., c. 38, s. 14, true copies of all rates and assessments, made for the relief of the poor, are to be entered in a book provided for that purpose by the churchwardens of every parish, post, Poor, Vol. IV.

Vestry books.

Entries in vestry books are sometimes evidence: thus an entry in a vestry book, stating that A. was duly elected treasurer of the parish at a vestry duly held in pursuance of notice, is evidence of such election. R. v. Martin, 2 Camp. 100; and see Price v. Littlewood, 2 Camp. 288; ante, 37, 38.

Inspection.

Though inspection of public books and writings is in general granted in civil cases, it is not so in criminal cases; where it would have the effect of making a defendant furnish evidence to criminate himself. 1 W. Bla. 351, 37; 1 Wils. 239; 1 Ld. Raym. 705; 2 id. 927; 2 Stra. 1210. See as to Inspection, post, Inspection, Vol. III.

Inscriptions.

Inscriptions on Tombs—Inscriptions on monuments and gravestones are frequently evidence of the truth of the facts stated in such inscription on questions of pedigree, subject to the common rules respecting proof of identity. 3 Bla. Com. 105. See Cowp. 594; 4 Camp. 404; T. Raym. 84.

Public surveys.
Doomsday book.

Public Surveys—Surveys, taken on public occasions, are also evidence to ascertain the rights of individuals not named in them. Thus Doomsday book, which was a survey of the king's lands made in the time of William the Conqueror, is the only evidence to prove whether a manor is held in ancient demesne; that is, whether it was part of the socage tenure, in the hands of Edward the Confessor, or not; and so high is the credit of this book, that the inspection is made by the court. So if a question arise as to the extent of the ports, there lies in the Exchequer a particular survey which ascertains it: and in many instances, where a commission has been confined to a particular place, it has been received as admissible evidence; and even when the commission has been lost, the survey taken under it has been allowed as evidence. Hob. 188; Gilb. Ev. 78; 1 Phill. Ev. 403, 7 ed.

Histories.

Histories—Books and chronicles of public history are not admissible in order to prove particular facts or customs. But they are evidence to prove a matter relating to the kingdom at large, as being the best evidence of which the matter is capable. B. N. P. 249; 1 Stark. Evid., Part II., p. 180. Camden's Britannia was rejected on the question, whether, by the custom of Droitwich, salt-pits could be sunk in any part of the town, or only in a certain place. Stainer v. The Burgesses of Droitwich, 1 Salk. 281; Skin. 623. So on a question, whether the Abbey de Sentibus was an inferior abbey or not, Dugdale's Monasticon was refused for evidence, because the original records might be had in the Augmentation Office. Cited in 1 Salk. 281.

But in Neale v. Fay (cited in Salk. 282, and Bull. N. P. 249, as Neale v. Jay), in order to show that a deed was forged which bore date 1 Ph. & M., in which all the titles were given to Philip which he used after the surrender of Charles the Vth, chronicles were admitted to show that he did not take those titles upon him till six months after the date of the deed. And in the case of St. Katherine's hospital, 1 Salk. 282, Lord Hale admitted Speed's Chronicles to prove a particular point of history in the time of Edward III. Id., and see Lord Brounker v. Sir R. Atkins, Skin. 14.

The year books may be evidence to prove the course of the court. 1 Salk. 282; 1 Stark. Ev. Part II., p. 181.

Dugdale's Baronage is not evidence to prove a descent. Piercy's case, 2 Jon. 164; 1 Phill. Ev. 423, 7 ed.

PUBLIC

Ancient Maps—An ancient map will be received as evidence where it has accompanied possession, and agreed with the boundaries as adjusted by ancient purchases. If two manors are in the hands of the same person, and a map is made by him, and afterwards one of the manors is conveyed to another person, and then, at a distant time, disputes arise as to the boundaries, the map so taken will be evidence; but if the person under whose direction the map was taken was possessed of only one manor, or a lord describes the boundaries of his waste, or the churchwardens cause a copperplate map to be made, wherein they describe land which an individual claims, to be a public highway, the map so taken is not evidence against the rights of persons not parties to the making of it. Peake's Ev. 87, 95, and cases there cited.

Ancient maps.

Terriers—An old terrier, or survey of a manor, whether ecclesiastical or temporal, may be given in evidence when proved to have come from the proper repository; for there can be no other way of ascertaining the old tenures or boundaries. Bull. N. P. 248; 1 Phill. Ev. 419; Rosc. 51.

Terriers, &c.

A terrier of glebe is not evidence for the parson, unless signed by the churchwardens as well as the parson; nor these either, if they be of his nomination: and though it be signed by them, yet it seems to deserve very little credit, unless it be likewise signed by the substantial inhabitants. But, in all cases, it is certainly strong evidence against the parson. Bull. N. P. 248.

An ecclesiastical terrier is evidence of the possessions of a church, if it has been regularly made and preserved in the proper repository. Ecclesiastical terriers are constantly received in questions of tithes: they are ecclesiastical records, made in perpetuam rei memoriam, and are as solemn instruments as any that can be produced on such subjects. Drake v. Smyth, 5 Price, 380; 1 Phill. Ev. 419, 7th ed.

Unless an ecclesiastical terrier be proved to have come from either the bishop's register office, 4 Gwill. 1406, 2 Anstr. 386; or the registry of the archdeacon of the diocese, 4 Gwill. 1450, 3 Anstr. 795; or from the church chest, Armstrong v. Hewitt, 4 Price, 216; it cannot, in general, be admitted in evidence. A paper, therefore, purporting to be a terrier, found in the charter chest of a college, which had property in the parish, was thought to be inadmissible to disprove a modus. 4 Gwill. 1406.

Under particular circumstances, this rule respecting the custody of the terriers has been relaxed, and a terrier has been admitted, though not brought from one of the regular repositories, when the custody in another place has been satisfactorily explained. 1 Phil. Ev. 419. A terrier found in the registry of the dean and chapter of Lichfield has been admitted as evidence against a prebendary of Lichfield. 2 Anstr. 387.

A book kept in the chapter house of the dean and chapter of Sarum, purporting to contain copies of leases granted by the dean and chapter, is, as a public book, evidence of those leases, for the purpose of reputation, without proof of possession under those leases. Coombs v. Coether, M. & M. C. N. P. 398.

Book of dean and chapter.

Court Rolls—The rolls of a court baron, or customary court, are evidence between the lord and his copyholders or tenants; Gilb. 67. Ancient writings, though not properly court rolls, but found among them, and delivered down from steward to steward, purporting to be made ex assensu omnium tenentium, have been held to be good evidence, to prove the course of descent within a manor; and this, although not signed by any of the tenants. Denn Goodwin v. Spray, 1 T. R. 466, 1 Phil. Evid. 417.

Rolls of manor.

Ship's Register—By the 6 Geo. IV., c. 110, s. 43, it is enacted, "that the collector and comptroller of His Majesty's customs at any port or place, and the person or persons acting for them respectively, shall, upon every reasonable request by any person or persons whomsoever, produce and exhibit, for his, her, or their inspection and examination, any oath or affioath taken or sworn by any such owner or owners, proprietor or proprietors, and also any register or entry in any book or books of registry, required by this act to be made or kept relative to any ship or vessel, and shall, upon every reasonable request by any person or persons whomsoever, permit him, her, or them to take a copy or copies or an extract or extracts thereof respectively; and that the copy or copies thereof respectively be allowed and received as evidence upon every trial at law, without the production of the original or originals, and without the testimony or attendance of any collector or comptroller, or other person or persons acting for them respectively, in all cases as fully, and to all intents and purposes, as such original or originals, if produced by any collector or collectors, comptroller or comptrollers, or other person or persons acting for them, could or might legally be admitted or received in evidence."

(2.) Records and Proceedings in Courts.

Records in general.

Records—Records are the memorials of the proceedings of the legislature, and of the king's courts of justice, preserved in rolls of parchment; and they are considered of such authority that no evidence is allowed to contradict them. 1 Inst. 117, b. R. v. Hopper, 3 Price, 495; 1 Phill. Ev. 7 ed. 316. Thus on an indictment for assisting the escape of a convict out of prison, if the record of the conviction is produced by the proper officer, evidence is not admissible to dispute the statement in the record, or to show that it has never been filed among the records of the county, even although the indictment refer to it with a prout patet as remaining among these records. Rex v. Shaw, 1 Russ. & R. C. C. 526.

But records are only conclusive evidence, generally speaking, against those who are parties to them, or their privies, and not strangers. See Duchess of Kingston's case, 20 How. St. Tri. 538. In matters of general concern, as customs, tolls, public ways, &c. they are conclusive. Rosc. 80. They are not evidence of matters coming collaterally in question, nor of any matter incidentally cognizable, nor of any matter to be inferred by argument from the record. 20 How. St. Tri. 533.

As to the effect of convictions, see post, 51.

Proof by record itself, or by exemplification.

Proof by Record itself, or Exemplification—When a record is the very gist of an issue in criminal cases, as in a plea of autrefois acquit or convict, it should be proved by production of the record itself, if it be a record of the same court in which the record is pleaded: or if a record of another court, by an exemplification under the great seal, which is of itself a record, and needs no further proof—Gilb. Evid. 14; 10 Co. 93; or by an exemplification of it under the seal of the court, which needs no further proof. Gilb. Evid. 19; Sayer, 297.

The record of an inferior court, when the gist of the issue is proved by an exemplification of the record, certified under a writ of certiorari, issued by the superior court. Tidd, 804.

In order to obtain an exemplification of a record of a concurrent superior court, a certiorari should be issued by the cursitor, directed to the chief justice of the superior court, requiring him to certify the record to the Court of Chancery; and the record being thereupon certified, an exemplification of it under the great seal is thence sent by mittimus to the court requiring the exemplification, to be there used—Tidd, 804; Gilb. Evid. 14, 15; and the same practice should be observed to obtain an exemplification of the record of a superior court to be produced to an inferior one.

So where the exemplification of the record of an inferior court is desired to be obtained for the purpose of evidence in a superior court, as the King's Bench, a certiorari should be sued out either with the cursitor, or with the proper officer of the Court of King's Bench, directed to the chief justice, judge, or officer of the inferior court, in whose custody the record is supposed to be, requiring him to certify the record to the Court of King's Bench; and thereupon an exemplification of the record, under the seal of the inferior court, will be transmitted to the Court of King's Bench, to be there used as evidence.

RECORDS, &c.

On indictments for a subsequent felony, after a previous conviction for felony, the legislature has dispensed with the usual formal proofs of the former conviction, thus: By statute, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 11, upon an indictment for a subsequent felony, after a previous conviction for felony, a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous felony, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, is, upon proof of identity, sufficient evidence of the first conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same.

On indictments for subsequent offence.

And see a similar provision in the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 40, as to certain misdemeanors provided for by that act. Post, Malicious Injuries, (to Persons), Vol. III.

In these cases the mere production of the certified copy would suffice without further proof.

Proof by examined Copy—When the record is not the gist of the issue, but is merely matter of inducement, as is most generally the case in criminal proceedings, it may be proved by an examined copy, or sometimes by an office copy. Gilb. Evid. 26.

Examined copy.

To make the copy sufficient the record must be complete, which is not so until delivered into court on parchment. Thus, to prove an allegation of an indictment having been found, it must be done by production of a caption regularly drawn up of record: and the minute-book kept by the clerk of the peace is no evidence of the finding of the bill, though no record be drawn up. R. v. Smith, 8 B. & Cres. 341; and see 3 C. & P. 572.

Record must be complete.

A minute-book from which an entry of the proceedings at sessions is made, and from which book the roll containing the record of such proceedings is subsequently made up, is not a record. R. v. Bellamy, R. & M. 171.

So the judgment in paper signed by the master is not evidence, for it is not yet become permanent. B. N. P. 228; and see 1 M. & P. 236; 5 Esp. 177; 2 N. R. 474.

The sworn copy should contain the whole of the record, B. N. P. 228; 3 Inst. 173: unless in cases provided for by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 30. relating to indictments for a subsequent offence, supra.

A copy of a copy is not evidence. B. N. P. 226.

Copies of records are to be proved as other transcripts, by a witness who has compared the copy, line for line, with the original, or who has examined the copy, while another person read the original. Reid v. Margison, 1 Campb. 470; Rolf v. Dart, 2 Taunt. 52. And it ought to appear that the original came from the proper place of deposit, or out of the hands of the officer in whose custody the records were kept. Adamthwaite v. Synge, 1 Stark. N. P. 183; 4 Camp. 372, S. C.; 1 Phill. Ev. 366.

Where the original record is lost, then a copy vetustate temporis aut judiciarii cognitione roborata, may be given in evidence. Bull. N. P. 228.

Proof by Office Copy—An office copy is, in the same court and in the same cause, equivalent to a record; but in another Court or in another cause it is not so; and in that case either the record itself, or an exemplification, or an examined copy, in case the record be not the gist of the issue should be produced and proved. Denn v. Fulford, 2 Burr. 1179.

Office copy.

It is a general rule, that a copy authenticated by a person appointed for that purpose (viz. an office copy), is good evidence of the contents of the original, without any proof of its being an examined copy. 1 Phill. Ev. 367; see 2 Campb. 390; B. N. P. 229.

Copy made by authorised officer.

RECORDS, &amp;c.

But where the officer of the court is only intrusted with the custody of records, and is not authorised to make out a copy, he has no more authority for that purpose than a common person, and the copy must be regularly proved in a strict and regular mode. 1 Phill. Ev. 368.

The chirograph of a fine is evidence of the fine, the chirographer being appointed to make that copy; but it is not evidence of the proclamations, for of them the chirographer is not appointed to make a copy. B. N. P. 229; Gilb. Ev. 23. The date of enrolment of a deed of bargain and sale indorsed by the enrolments, is conclusive evidence of the date. R. v. Hopper, 3 Price, 495; and see 1 Dougl. 56; 8 B. & Cres. 755.

A copy of the depositions of a witness taken at a judge's chambers, signed by the judge, and delivered out by his clerk, is admissible without proof of examination with the original. Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 101.

Verdict and postea.

Verdict and Postea—No verdict shall be given in evidence as binding on a person unless he be a party or privy to it; because otherwise a man would be bound by a decision, who had not the liberty to cross-examine; and nothing can be more contrary to natural justice, than that any body should be injured by a determination which he or those under whom he claims was not at liberty to controvert. B. N. P. 232.

A verdict will not be admitted in evidence, without likewise producing a copy of the judgment founded upon it; because it may happen that the judgment was arrested upon a new trial granted. But this rule doth not hold in the case of a verdict on an issue directed out of Chancery; because it is not usual to enter up judgment in such case; and the decree of the court of Chancery is equally proof that the verdict was satisfactory, and stands in force. B. N. P. 234. And if it be required to prove merely that a certain trial was had, the nisi prius record, with the postea indorsed on it, and regularly stamped and marked, is sufficient evidence for that purpose. Barnes, 449; Pitton v. Walter, 1 Stra. 162; and see, 2 Stark. 364, 5. Where the nisi prius record was produced, with the minute of the verdict indorsed thereon by the associate, it was held sufficient proof of the trial, though no postea was drawn up; the associate stating none could be so, as a motion was pending for a new trial. R. v. Browne, 3 C. & P. 572; M. & M. C. N. P. 315, S. C. And see 8 B. & Cres. 541.

Inquisitions.

Inquisitions—On inquisitions of general concern, such as the return to the commission in Henry VIII.'s time, to inquire of the value of livings, the commission is a thing of such general notoriety that it requires no proof. B. N. P. 228; and see 8 B. & Cres. 747. But, in general, on inquisitions of private matters, it is necessary to show that the inquiry has been made under proper authority, besides proving the return. Vin. Ab. Ev. 42, (A. b.) A copy of the judgment roll, containing an award of an elegit, and the return of the inquisition, is evidence of the elegit and inquisition. 2 M. & S. 565. An inquisition post mortem is evidence, but not conclusive. Earl Thanet v. Foster, T. Jones, 224.

The inquisition in general of a private matter affects only those persons who are parties or privies to it. But an inquisition of lunacy is evidence against third persons, though not conclusive. 2 Alk. 412; 3 Camp. 126. As to the sheriff's inquisition to ascertain the ownership of property, see 2 H. Bla. 437; 3 M. & S. 175.

Writ.

Writ—Where a writ is the gist of the issue, which however is rarely the case in criminal proceedings, it must be returned into the court from whence it issued, and being then a record, should be proved by the record itself, or else, as is more usual, by an examined copy. B. N. P. 234. But if the writ be matter of inducement merely, it is not necessary that it should be returned or proved by an examined copy, when not returned. Gilb. Ev. 39; but the writ itself may be given in evidence.

If it has been returned, it should, in general, be proved by the record itself, or an examined copy. To entitle a party to go into secondary evidence of a writ after its return, it must be shown that search has been made in the Treasury, and that subsequently to the return day the writ was in the possession of the opposite party, on whom notice to produce it has been served. Edmonstone v. Plaisted, 4 Esp. 160. A copy of the judgment roll, containing an award of an elegit, and the return of the inquisition, is evidence of the elegit and inquisition. Ramsbottom v. Buckhurst, 2 M. & S. 565.

RECORDS, &c.

Affidavits—An affidavit, whether voluntary or not, is evidence as an admission on oath against the party who made it. Gilb. Ev. 51, 56; 7 Taunt. 577; and though proved only to be signed by the party, it will operate in evidence as an admission by him. Id. B. N. P. 238.

Affidavits.

When filed of record in the superior courts, they should be proved by examined copies, or produced. Affidavits not so filed can be proved only by production of the affidavits themselves, and by parol evidence of their having been sworn. Gilb. Ev. 56; B. N. P. 238. Upon an indictment for perjury in an affidavit, the affidavit must in all cases be produced, whether filed or not, and it must be proved in the same manner as an answer to a bill in equity under the same circumstances. Infra, B. N. P. 238.

Rules and Orders of Courts of Law—Rules of court are proved by office copies; 1 L. Raym. 745; 1 Camp. 102. 471, n.: it is not necessary to have them examined. A rule of court is evidence that the court have ordered as is therein stated; but it is not evidence of any matters in it which are the mere suggestions of the party who obtained it. 6 Taunt. 19. A judge's order may be proved by the production of the order itself, or by an office copy of the rule by which it has been made a rule of court. 4 Camp. 17.

Rules and orders of courts of law.

Letters Patent—Letters patent should be proved by producing the letters patent themselves, or the exemplification of them under the great seal, which will be sufficient evidence without further proof. 1 Phill. Evid. 445.

Letters Patent.

Proceedings in Chancery—There are public matters that are not records, as transactions in Chancery and court roll: and of these copies may be given in evidence. B. N. P. 234.

Chancery proceedings.

The reason why the proceedings in Chancery are not records is this, because they are not the precedents of justice; for the judgment there is according to equity and good conscience, and not according to the laws and customs. And the reason why any record is of validity and authority is, because it is a memorial of what is the law of the nation: now Chancery proceedings are no memorials of the laws of England, because the chancellor is not bound to proceed according to the laws. B. N. P. 235.

Bill—A bill in Chancery will not be evidence, except to show that such a bill did exist, and that certain facts were in issue between the parties, in order to introduce the answer or the depositions of witnesses. 1 Phill. Evid. 341. It is not to be admitted as evidence in courts of law, to prove any facts either alleged or denied in the bill. Case of the Banbury Peerage, 2 Selw. N. P. 685; Roscoe, 84.

Bill.

Answer—An answer in Chancery is good evidence against the defendant as an admission upon oath, and it must be taken together; therefore if, upon exceptions taken, a second answer has been put in, the defendant may insist on having that read, to explain what he swore in his first answer. B. N. P. 237; Gilb. Evid. 50; Roscoe, 84. An answer will be evidence against all persons privy to the party making it; 16 East, 334: but the answer of a guardian is no evidence against an infant, nor is the answer of a trustee against the cestui que trust. B. N. P. 237. As to the answer of a co-defendant, see 3 P. Wms. 311; of a partner, Peake, 203; 7 Price, 198.

Answer.

The answer may be proved by the production of the bill and answer, or of examined copies of them from the Six Clerks' office. Gilb. Evid. 56; and see 1 B. & A. 182; 3 Camp. 401. On an indictment for perjury in an answer, the answer itself must be produced, and it must be proved either that the party was sworn to it, or that the name subscribed to it is his handwriting, and that the name subscribed to the jurat is the name and handwriting of a master, or other person having authority for that purpose. 2 Burr. 1189; 2 Camp. 508. The identity of the parties should be proved. Such identity may be established by a witness who has seen the handwriting of the defendant to the original answers, though it is not produced in court. Dartnall v. Howard, R. & M. C. N. P. 169. If the name and description of the defendant at law agree with the name and description of the party answering in equity, it is prima facie evidence of identity. Hennell v. Lyon, 1 B. & Ald. 182; and see M. & M. 176.

The answer may be read without the bill, if the bill has been lost and the proper officer prove he cannot find it in the proper office. Gilb. Evid. 55; and see 8 B. & Cres. 765: unless on an indictment for perjury in the answer, supra.

When the answer is offered in evidence merely as an admission of the party on oath, it will suffice to prove it by an examined copy, without proof of a decree or of the party's handwriting. Dartmouth v. Roberts, 16 East, 334; and see Ewer v. Ambrose, 4 B. & Cres. 25; 6 D. & R. 127, S. C.

Depositions in Chancery.

Depositions in Chancery—Depositions in Chancery are admissible in evidence in an action in the same matters between the same parties or their privies, where the witness is dead, insane, or cannot be subpoenaed, or has fallen sick by the way. B. N. P. 239; Gilb. Evid. 60. But the mere circumstance of a witness being too ill to attend the trial is not, it seems, sufficient ground for reading his deposition in Chancery. Doe v. Evans, 3 C. & P. 219, cor. Vaughan, B. They are also admissible against strangers in questions of a public or general nature, as relating to customs or tolls, &c. B. N. P. 239: so they are so admissible when used to impeach the testimony of a witness who made the depositions. Id. 240. When depositions are made before an answer put in, they are in general inadmissible; B. N. P. 240; when otherwise, 1 M. & S. 4.

In order to prove the depositions, in general, the bill and answer must be first proved, and then the depositions must be produced and proved like other affidavits, not of record, proving the party's handwriting thereto, and that he was sworn, and that the name subscribed to the jurat is the name and handwriting of a master, or other person having authority for that purpose. It should be proved that the party making the depositions is dead, insane, or cannot be found, or has fallen sick by the way. But it is not necessary to do this, or prove the bill and answer, if the depositions are offered in evidence as an admission merely, or to contradict a witness. 1 Phill. Evid. 375.

If the bill and answer are ancient and cannot be found, on proving that fact and due search, the production will be dispensed with. Gilb. Evid. 64; 2 Price, 234, n.; and see 8 B. & Cres. 765, where answers to interrogatories were allowed to be read, without producing the interrogatories, which could not be found. But generally depositions taken on interrogatories under a commission are not evidence without production of the commission, unless the depositions are of long standing. Bayley v. Wylie, 6 Esp. 85.

As a general rule, it may be said, that in order to render depositions taken under any judicial proceedings evidence against a party, he must have had an opportunity to be present at the examination, and to cross-examine the witness. Attorney General v. Davison, 1 Mac. & Y. 160.

Decree.

Decree—A decree in Chancery is evidence between the same parties or their privies. B. N. P. 243.

The decree may be proved by an exemplification, or by a sworn copy, or when in paper by a decretal order, with proof of the bill and answer. Trowel v. Castle; 1 Keb. 21; B. N. P. 244; 1 Phill. Evid. 373; Peake, Evid. 74; Rosc. 46.

Proceedings in Ecclesiastical Courts—The sentences of ecclesiastical courts in matrimonial causes are in all cases evidence, and conclusive of the facts they therein establish, except in suits of jactitation. Duchess Kingston's Case, 20 How. St. Tri. 538, 540, 543; Bunting's Case, 4 Rep. 29 a.

RECORDS, &amp;c.

Proceedings in ecclesiastical courts.

Depositions taken in an ecclesiastical court, in a cause within its jurisdiction, seem to be admissible in evidence upon the same footing as depositions in the Court of Chancery, the parties being the same, and having had an opportunity of cross-examining the deponents. 1 Phill. Evid. 359, 360. So a deposition taken in a cause between other parties will be admitted to be read, to contradict what the same witness swears at a trial. B. N. P. 240.

The libel, answer, depositions, and sentence, in ecclesiastical courts, are proveable in the same manner as the proceedings in Chancery, ante, 45, 46; Gilb. Ev. 66, 67; Com. Dig. Ev. C. (3.) In general, to prove a sentence in such courts, the libel and answer should be produced. 1 Esp. 5. The minute-book of the Consistorial Court has been held sufficient evidence of a decree for alimony, without such decree being drawn up in form. 2 C. & P. 25.

The practice of these courts is, it seems, proveable by parol evidence. 3 Camp. 388.

Probate—The probate of a will, under the seal of the ecclesiastical court, is good evidence of its contents, where the will itself is of chattels, for there the probate is an original, taken by authority, and of a public nature; nor is the original will admissible for that purpose: but the probate of a will, devising real property, is not evidence of the contents of the will as to such property, even though the original is proved to be lost; the spiritual court having no power to authenticate such a devise, as far as it relates to land. B. N. P. 245; 1 Phill. Evid. 325; Doe d. Ash v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 389; Doe v. Nathrop, 3 Salk. 154; 1 L. Raym. 154.

Probate of a will.

Such probate of a will of personalty is also evidence of a party's being executor or the like. Id.

The mere production of the probate under the seal of the ecclesiastical court will suffice without further proof. Kempton v. Cross, Rep. T. Hardw. 108.

An examined copy of the probate is evidence of the person there named being executor, as the probate is an original, taken by authority, and of a public nature (3 Salk. 154; 1 Ld. Raym. 154); but a copy of the will would not be evidence of that fact. B. N. P. 246, supra.

It is not the practice in the ecclesiastical courts to grant a second probate if the first should be lost; but only to grant an exemplification from the record of the court, which exemplification will be evidence of the proof of the will.

The probate unrepealed is in general conclusive evidence of the facts whereof it is evidence: therefore the party shall not be permitted to allege that the will proved is not the last will and testament of the deceased. Allen v. Dundas, 3 T. R. 125; Gilb. Evid. 73; T. Raym. 404, 406. But he may give in evidence that the probate is forged, or that it was obtained by surprise, or revoked. Gilb. Evid. 73, 74; T. Raym. 404; 2 Sid. 359. And in a late case an indictment for forging a will, probate of that will, though unrepealed, was held not conclusive evidence of its validity, so as to bar the prosecution. R. v. Buttery, R. & R. C. C. 342; R. v. Gibson, id. 343; overruling; R. v. Vincent, 1 Stra. 481. And the probate may be impeached, by showing that the ecclesiastical court had no jurisdiction, as that there were no bona notabilia within its jurisdiction; B. N. P. 247; or that the supposed testator is alive. 3 T. R. 130.

To prove the probate revoked, an entry of the revocation in the book of RECORDS, &c. the Prerogative Court is good evidence. Ramsbottom's case, 1 Leach, C.C. 30, n. 3d ed.

Letters of administration.

Letters of Administration—Such letters are evidence of the facts actually stated therein, but not of facts which can only be inferred therefrom, as the testator's death, &c. Thomson v. Donaldson, 3 Esp. 63; 20 How. St. Tri. 533. The observations already made, ante, 47, as to a probate being conclusive evidence, will here apply.

The ecclesiastical court never grants an exemplification of letters of administration; but only a certificate that administration was granted. Such certificate, merely produced, would be of itself good evidence. So would the book of the ecclesiastical court wherein was entered the order for granting administration. Kempton v. Cross, Rep. T. Hardw. 108; B. N. P. 246; 8 East, 187. And an examined copy of the act book, stating the grant of letters of administration to the defendant, is proof of his being administrator, without notice to produce the letters. Davis v. Williams, 13 East, 232. The letters themselves would be good evidence. R. T. Hardw. 108.

Proceedings in Admiralty courts.

Proceedings in Admiralty Courts—The sentence of this court on a question of prize, over which it has exclusive jurisdiction, is conclusive of what is positively affirmed thereon; and being a proceeding in rem, binds all strangers as well as parties thereto. Park Ins. 490; 2 Camp. 228; 1 Camp. 418; Dougl. 574. So is such a sentence of a foreign court. 2 Show. 232; 5 East, 160. But the sentence of an Admiralty Court sitting under a commission from a belligerent power in a neutral country, will not be recognised here. 8 T. R. 268; 1 Camp. 429; Roscoe, 83.

As to how far the libel, answer, and depositions are evidence, see ante, 45, 46, as to those proceedings in equity.

The libel, answer, depositions, and sentence, in the Admiralty Court, are proved in the same manner as the bill, answer, depositions and decree in a court of equity. Com. Dig. Evid. 1, (C.) ante, 45, 46.

Proceedings in foreign courts and foreign laws.

Proceedings in Foreign Courts—It seems that the sentence of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction, if evidence abroad, would be evidence here, on the same question and between the same parties, see 1 Ves. 159; 2 Stra. 733; 2 Bingh. 380; 4 M. & S. 20. The court will, in general, presume the sentence to be according to the justice of the case; 3 Bingh. 353. But if it appears in the face of the proceedings, or it could be otherwise shown, that the court had no jurisdiction, or that the sentence is founded on injustice, as where it appeared the defendant had never been summoned, the sentence would be inadmissible as evidence here; 9 East, 192; 1 Camp. 63; 3 B. & Cres. 786; 1 M. & P. 663; 1 Stark. 525. And it does not seem that the sentence is in any case conclusive evidence here, not being a record in this country. See 1 Dougl. 1, 5; 2 H. Bla. 410; 4 B. & Cres. 411; 4 Bingh. 486; 1 M. & P. 663, S. C.: unless perhaps in the case of a sentence of a foreign Admiralty Court on a question of prize, supra.

The certificate of a vice-consul has been compared to a foreign judgment, but it will not be admitted as evidence of the facts stated in it. 3 Taunt. 162.

The proceedings in a foreign court, whether in colonies belonging to this country or not, are to be proved by exemplifications under the seal of the court, if indeed it has a seal. The genuineness of the seal must be proved. Henry v. Adey, 3 East, 221; and the seal must be used, though worn out. 1 Stark. 525. A copy signed by the clerk of the court would not be sufficient, even though it should be proved the court has no seal. 2 Stark. 6; 6 M. & S. 34. If there be no seal ever used for the purpose of authenticating the proceedings of the court, then the proceedings must be proved by examined copies; 6 M. & S. 36: or distinct evidence should be given (if the fact) that the court has no seal, and verifies its judgments by the signature of the judge proving such signature. 4 Camp. 28.

RECORDS, &c.

Records of the courts in Ireland may be proved by examined copies, &c., in the same manner as the records in this country. Such copy must be examined with a record; and, where the witness produced to prove the copy stated that he examined it with a parchment roll shown to him in a room over the four Courts at Dublin, without seeing from whence it was taken, or knowing the person who produced it to be an officer of the court, Lord Ellenborough refused to receive it in evidence. 4 Camp. 372; 1 Stark. 183. An Irish judgment is no record here. 4 B. & Cres. 411; 6 Dowl. & R. 471, S. C.

Irish records.

Foreign Laws—If an act done abroad be invalid by the law of the foreign country, it is so here. See 1 B. & P. 141; 8 T. R. 609; 5 East, 124; but not vice versa. Our courts here take no notice of the revenue laws of a foreign independent state, not belonging to our sovereign. See James v. Catherwood, 3 D. & R. 190, and cases there cited. Chit. on Bills, 7th ed. 57, n. (e); nor do they take notice of foreign penal laws. 6 M. & S. 99.

Foreign law.

The laws of a foreign country, if not written, may be proved by the parol evidence of witnesses of competent skill; sed vid. 3 Esp. 58; if written, a copy properly authenticated must be produced. 3 Camp. 166; 4 Camp. 155; per Gibbs, C. J., R. v. Picton, 20 How. St. Tr. 514, 494; 3 Stark. 198. The acts of state of a foreign government must be proved by copies examined with the public archives abroad; a copy printed and published abroad by the authorised printer of the foreign government will not, it seems, be sufficient. 1 Camp. 65, n.

An instrument, purporting to be a divorce under the seal of the synagogue at Leghorn, is not admissible, without previous proof of the law of the country; but Lord Kenyon permitted the party divorced to give parol evidence of her divorce at Leghorn, according to the ceremony and custom of the Jews there. Ganer v. Lady Lanesborough, Peake, 17.

Proceedings in Inferior Courts—The judgment of an inferior court of record is as available, and conclusive in evidence for the same purposes, as a judgment of a superior court. The judgment of an inferior court, not of record, is equally available, save that it is not conclusive evidence, but may be controverted and avoided. See Walker v. Witter, Dougl. 5. But the latter doctrine appears somewhat doubtful from the cases in 2 Burr. 1009; 2 Bingh. 216; 1 Stark. Evid. 208; Roscoe, 86. It is submitted, however, as correct. Where it appears on the face of the proceedings that they have not been fair and regular, the judgment will not be available, as where it appeared the defendant had not been summoned, or the like. 3 B. & Cres. 786. See as to Convictions and Orders, post, 51, 52.

Proceedings in inferior courts.

In general.

The judgment of commissioners of Excise, on an information for an offence against an Excise law, is conclusive as to all the world, being upon a proceeding in rem. Fuller v. Fotch. Carth. 346; Roberts v. Fortune, Hay, &c., Harg. Law Tracts, 468; 1 Phill. Ev'd. 355.

The sentence of expulsion of a member of a college, by the master and fellows, is conclusive evidence of that fact, and cannot be impeached in a court of law. R. v. Grundon, Cowp. 315; and see 1 Id. Raym. 5; Harg. Law Tracts, 464.

The mere production of a diploma of doctor of physic, under the seal of one of the universities, is not of itself evidence to show that the party therein named is entitled to that degree. Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 303.

Judgments, and the proceedings in a court baron, county court, or other inferior court, not of record, may be proved by producing the books in which they are entered; or, it should seem, by examined copies. See Gilh Evid. 74, 20; Com. Dig. Evid. (C. 1); 1 B. & A. 185; Peake, Evid. 80.

How proved.

In proving the judgment, evidence of the previous proceedings should
VOL. II. E

RECORDS, &c. be adduced. Com. Dig. Evid. (C. 1); 2 W. Bla. 836. See ante, 42, 43, as to the mode of proving records.

Court baron rolls.

Court Baron Rolls—The rolls of a court baron are evidence; for they are the public rolls by which the inheritance of every tenant is to be preserved: and they are the rolls of the manor court, which was anciently a court of justice relating to all property within the district. Bull. N. P. 247; Doe v. Hall, 16 East, 208.

The copy of the court roll of a manor, under the steward's hand, duly stamped, is good evidence; so is an examined copy of the court roll, if sworn to be a true one. For where the original itself is evidence, the immediate copy thereof is also good evidence. Skinner, 584; Hoe v. Nathorp, 1 Ld. Raym. 154; Bull. N. P. 247; Gilb. 75.

Bankruptcy proceedings.

Bankruptcy Proceedings—Proceedings under commissions of bankrupt are proved either by producing the proceedings themselves, or (if entered of record, as directed by stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 96—7) by copies duly signed and attested. And any person may procure the proceedings to be entered of record upon petition to the Lord Chancellor. But depositions before the commissioners may be given in evidence against the person who made them, by producing and proving them, as in the ordinary case of an affidavit, without having the proceedings recorded. Arch. Bank. L. by Flather, 257—8; Jansen v. Wilson, 1 Dougl. 257. See the enactments of the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16. relative to evidence, ante, Bankrupt, Vol. I.

Insolvency proceedings.

Insolvency Proceedings—A proceeding of the Insolvent Debtors' Court may be proved by the production of an office copy of it, under the seal of the Court. By 7 Geo. IV. c. 57, s. 19, a copy of the assignment of the insolvent's property to the provisional assignee, and of the counterpart of the assignment by the provisional assignee to the assignee subsequently appointed, purporting to have the certificate of the provisional assignee, or his deputy, appointed for that purpose, indorsed upon it, and sealed with the seal of the Court, is evidence of such conveyance and assignment, and of the title of the provisional and other assignee or assignees under the same—in all courts, and before commissioners of bankrupt and justices of the peace, without further proof of any other proceeding in the Insolvent Court. And by the same stat., s. 76, a copy of the petition, schedule, order of adjudication, and other orders and proceedings, purporting to be signed by the officer having the custody of them, or his deputy, certifying the same to be a true copy, and sealed with the seal of the Court, is admissible in the same manner, without further proof that the same is sealed with the seal of the Court. See the provisions, in full, post, Insolvent, Vol. III.

A paper, purporting to be a copy of the original discharge of an insolvent, and signed by the clerk of the proper officer of that Court, with the impression of the seal affixed to it, is admissible in evidence, to prove such discharge without the production of the certificate thereof, or proof of its being an examined or attested copy. Carpenter v. Waite, 3 Moore, 231; Neal v. Isaacs, 4 B. & C. 335; 6 D. & R. 484, S. C.: and see 3 Car. & P. 625. Such discharge could not be proved by parol evidence, or by an admission of the insolvent. Scott v. Clare, 3 Camp. 236. The identity of the insolvent should in general be proved.

Judgment of quarter sessions in appeals.

Judgment of Quarter Sessions—A judgment by the quarter sessions, discharging an order of removal (not for defect of form, but upon the merits), is conclusive as between the contending parishes, that the settlement of the pauper was not in the appellant parish at the time of the removal; but it is binding only on these parishes, not on a third parish. An order of removal executed, and not appealed against, is conclusive of the pauper's settlement at the time of the order even as between third parishes who were not parties to that order. R. v. Corsham, 11 East, 888. And a judgment by the quarter sessions, confirming an order of removal, is conclusive upon the appellant parish as to all the world, and may be given in evidence against them by a third parish on any subsequent appeal. Here it may be observed, the party, against whom the judgment was pronounced, had an opportunity of discharging themselves by proving the liability on a third parish; and this not having been done, and the court of quarter sessions having confirmed the order of removal, the last settlement is adjudged to be in the appellant parish; and this point being once determined, the judgment must be final, that there may be some end to litigation. 1 Phill. Ev. 311, 312.

Convictions, &c.]—Convictions must be proved, like other records. See ante, 42, 43. In general they may be proved by examined copies. A copy of a conviction for killing game was agreed to be evidence in bar of an action brought for the same offence, and the defendant is entitled to such copy. R. v. Midlam, 3 Burr. 1720, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. A copy may be obtained from the clerk of the peace. In prosecutions for second offences of a similar kind, the legislature has, in some instances of misdemeanors, as by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 40, made a copy of the former conviction certified by the proper officer to be a true copy, good evidence of such conviction, ante, 43; post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.; and as to convictions for second felonies, ante, 43. In such cases the mere production of such a copy would suffice.

Convictions.

A conviction in a court of criminal jurisdiction is conclusive evidence of the facts contained in it, if it comes collaterally in controversy in a court of civil jurisdiction: yet an acquittal in such court is no proof of the reverse. Bull. N. P. 245.

Effect of, in evidence.

But where the conviction has been procured on the evidence of the party who seeks to avail himself of it in a civil action, such conviction is inadmissible; and it even seems doubtful whether it is admissible when it has been procured not on the sole evidence of the party, or even where it has been procured entirely on the credence of others. Hillyard v. Grantham, 2 Ves. 246; Gibson v. Maccarty, R. T. Hardw. 311; 1 Camp. 151; 3 Bingh. 300; 11 Moore, 63, S. C.; Roscoe, 81.

With respect to how far a conviction will protect the convicting magistrate, it is a general rule and principle of law, that where justices of the peace have an authority given to them by an act of parliament, and they appear to have acted within the jurisdiction so given, and to have done all that they are required by the act to do, in order to originate their jurisdiction, a conviction, drawn up in due form, and remaining in force, is a protection in any action brought against them for the act so done. Per Abbott, J. C., in Basten v. Carew, 3 B. & Cres. 652; 5 D. & R. 558, S. C. In trespass against magistrates for taking and detaining a vessel, a conviction by them, under the bum-boat act, is conclusive evidence that the vessel in question is a boat within the meaning of the act, and properly condemned. Brittain v. Kinnaird, 1 B. & B. 432; Gow's C. N. P. 164, S. C. So, where, in trespass against two magistrates, for breaking and entering the plaintiff's close, in the parish of A., and seizing his sheep, it appeared that the defendants, upon the complaint of the surveyor of the highways, appointed for the whole parish, convicted the plaintiff of neglecting to do statute duty, and issued a warrant to levy the penalty under which the act complained of was done; it was held, the conviction being good on the face of it, was a sufficient defence, and that the plaintiff could not, in this action, try the question whether the land which he occupied was exempt from the burden of repairing the roads in other parts of the parish. Faurcett v. Fowlis, 7 B. & Cres. 394; 1 M. & R. 102, S. C. So where, in trespass against two magistrates, for giving the plaintiff's landlord possession of a farm, as a deserted farm, the defendants produced in evidence a record of their proceedings, under the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 16, which set forth all such circumstances as were necessary to give them jurisdiction, and by which it appeared that they had pursued the directions of the statute, it was held such record was not traversable, and was a conclusive answer to the action. Basten v. Carew, 3 B. & Cres. 653; 5 D. & R. 558, S. C.; and see Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. R. 631; 16 East, 21.

On the other hand, where, upon the face of the conviction, it appears the magistrate has assumed a jurisdiction over a matter which is altogether out of his cognizance, or has been guilty of plain and manifest excess of his jurisdiction, the conviction will not protect him. See cases in Gow, C. N. P. 167. Where a person was convicted in four several convictions for exercising his ordinary calling on a Sunday, contrary to 29 Car. II., c. 7, it was held, that, as a man could only commit one offence under the statute on the same day, the three latter convictions were void; and it being an excess of jurisdiction, an action lay against the magistrate. Crepps v. Durden, Cowp. 640; 16 East, 21; and see Hill v. Bateman, 1 Stra. 710; post, Game, Vol. II.; Groome v. Forrester, 5 M. & S. 314; 1 Mac. & Y. 469; Rosc. 403.

As to the mode of drawing up convictions, and the party's remedy when improperly drawn up, see ante, Conviction, Vol. I.

Acquittal.

Acquittal—The acquittal of a party cannot afford evidence like a conviction, for it does not ascertain any precise fact, and may have proceeded merely on the ground that sufficient evidence was not produced. 1 Phill. Evid. 338, B. N. P. 245, ante, 51. See Acquittal, Vol. I.

An acquittal, where directly put in issue by the pleadings, should in general be proved by an examined copy of the record of acquittal, and that would be the correct mode of proving it in all cases where a record of acquittal has been formally drawn up as it ought to be.

Orders of justices.

Orders of Justices—Orders of magistrates do not, it seems, in general come within the above doctrine of evidence relative to convictions, and parol evidence is admissible to support or controvert them, where the party disputing them is no party to them. In Welsh v. Nash, 8 East, 402, Lord Ellenborough said, with regard to an order of justices for diverting a highway, that justices cannot make facts by their determination, in order to give themselves jurisdiction contrary to the truth of the case; and see 1 B. & P. 439. In a late case, where an order of justices, requiring the stewards of a friendly society to re-admit A. B., who had been expelled, recited that it had appeared to the justices that the rules of the society had been enrolled at the quarter sessions; on the trial of an indictment against the stewards for disobeying the order, it was held the recital was no evidence of the enrollment of the rules; the defendants never having concurred in, or assented to, the order. R. v. Gilkes, 8 B. & Cres. 439; see post, Order, Vol. III.; R. v. Clayton, 3 East, 58.

An order of sessions, upon an appeal between two parishes, respecting the settlement of pauper A., is not admissible on the trial of an appeal touching the settlement of B., his sister, another pauper, on a suggestion that the point at issue was precisely the same in both appeals. R. v. Knaptoft, 4 D. & R. 469; 2 B. & C. 883, S. C.

On the other hand, it seems that where the party disputing the order is a party thereto by his having obtained such order, or appeared to resist it, such order, unappealed against, is conclusive against him. R. v. Hinxworth, and R. v. Caling, Cald. 42. 472. So, an order quashed is conclusive between the parties. R. v. Leigh, id. 29.

Certificates of justices, &amp;c.

Certificates of Justices, &c.—The certificate of a justice of the peace, as to a highway being in repair, has been received in evidence. Rex v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619.

The certificates of bishops with respect to marriage, general bastardy, excommunication, orders, and other the like matters, are received in evidence; Co. Lit. 74; 6 T. R. 637; Rosc. 89; so are the certificates of the judges in Wales, respecting the practice of their courts, 6 T. R. 638.

The certificate of a British consul abroad is not admissible as evidence here. 3 Taunt. 162; 1 D. & R. 324, ante, 48. The certificate from commissioners under the act for settling the debts of the army has been held conclusive evidence of the facts found therein. 1 Stra. 481, Attorney-Gen. v. Davison, 1 Mac. & Y. 160. So has an old parish certificate. R. v. Whitchurch, 7 B. & Cres. 573; 1 M. & R. 472, S. C.; R. v. Ryton, 5 T. R. 259; post, 60.

Depositions, &c. before Magistrates—The information and depositions of witnesses upon oath taken before magistrates in felonies and misdemeanors, when put into writing, and certified, and returned as directed by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, 53 (post, Examination, Vol. II.), are evidence of the facts deposed to.

Depositions before magistrates.

But, in order to make them such evidence, it must be proved that the party deposing is either dead, unable to travel, 1 Hale, 586; Kel. 55; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 15; 1 Chit. C. L. 586, or kept away by the defendant's contrivance, Kel. 55, or that he cannot be found, B. N. P. 239; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 18; sed vid. Kel. 55; 3 C. & P.; so that there is no possibility of obtaining his attendance. They could not, it seems, be read in the case of petit treason, if the witness were living, even although they were unable to travel, or were kept out of the way by the prisoner, or by his procurement; for the stat. 5 & 6 Ed. VI., which extends to all treasons, requires that the witnesses, if living, shall be examined in person upon the trial, in open court. Fost. 337. In order to make them evidence, they must also have been duly taken according to the requisitions of the statute; in the presence of the defendant, 1 Salk. 281; 5 Mod. 183; 1 Leach, 502; on the oath of the accuser and witnesses, 1 Hale, 586; B. N. P. 242; and reduced into writing: 1 Leach, 309; in which case they will be admissible, although the witness was not at the time apprehensive of approaching dissolution; 1 Leach, 458. It is not necessary they should be signed by the witness, R. v. Fleming, 2 Leach, 996. Where the depositions were not wholly taken in the presence of the prisoner, but the witness afterwards in his presence was re-sworn, and the depositions repeated and signed, the judges held that they were, under these circumstances, admissible evidence, for the prisoner had an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. R. v. Smith, R. & B. C. C. 339; 2 Stark. 208; Holt, C. N. P. 614, S. C. And where the testimony of a person, under apprehension of immediate dissolution, has been taken by a magistrate in the absence of the party indicted, though it cannot be read as an examination under the statute, it may be received as a dying declaration with the same degree of authority as if made to a private individual. 1 Leach, 361, 503, 3 T. R. 713. And the information of an accomplice, duly taken, may, in case of his death, be read in evidence against the prisoner, 1 Leach, 12, though it will not be conclusive, unless corroborated by other testimony. Ib. As to Dying Declarations, see ante, 33.

In order to make the depositions evidence, they must be proved by the magistrate or his clerk, or otherwise to have been truly taken. Kel. 55; Fost. 337; post, 54.

They may be used by the defendant as well as against him. 2 St. Tri. 622, &c.; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 22.

The depositions of a witness taken in a judicial proceeding, in the presence of the party there charged, is not admissible in another proceeding against that party, on the ground that he was present and had the opportunity of cross-examining. Melon v. Andrews, M. & M. C. N. P. 336.

In R. v. Reed, M. & M. C. N. P. 403, it was held, that though the examination of a prisoner taken in writing is inadmissible by reason of ir-irregularity, parol evidence of what he said at the time of the examination might be received.

Before coroners.

Depositions before Coroners—The depositions taken before coroners on inquisitions, when put into writing, and certified and returned as required by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, ante, Coroner, Vol. I., are evidence of the facts deposed to, under the same conditions as depositions before magistrates are evidence, ante, 53. It seems, however, that they differ from those taken before justices in this respect, that they are admissible though taken in the absence of the prisoner; because the coroner is an officer appointed on the behalf of the public, and will be presumed to have acted properly in all matters within his jurisdiction. 3 T. R. 713, 722; B. N. P. 242; ante, Coroner, Vol. I.

On prosecutions
abroad.

Depositions on Prosecutions for leaving Seamen abroad—By the statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 30, depositions taken under commissions granted by the Court of King's Bench, for the examination of witnesses abroad, in prosecutions for leaving seamen behind in the colonies or elsewhere, are made evidence, post, Seamen, &c., Vol. V.; Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

Depositions under mutiny act as to settlement.

Depositions under Mutiny Act as to Settlement—In the Mutiny Acts there is always inserted a clause rendering the examination of a non-commissioned officer or soldier, under certain circumstances, legal evidence to be received upon a question of settlement.

Such enactment usually is as follows: "That it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace, for the county, town, or place where any non-commissioned officer or soldier shall be quartered in that part of G. B. called England, in case such non-commissioned officer or private soldier have either wife or child, or children, to cause such non-commissioned officer or soldier to be summoned before him, in the town or place where such non-commissioned officer or soldier shall be quartered, in order to make oath of the place of his last legal settlement (which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer); and such non-commissioned officer or private soldier as aforesaid is hereby directed to obey such summons, and to make oath accordingly; and such justice is hereby required to take the examination of such non-commissioned officer or soldier in writing, and to give an attested copy of the examination so taken before him to the person so examined, to be by him delivered to his commanding officer, in order to be produced when required; which said examination and such attested copy shall be at any time admitted in evidence, as to such last legal settlement, before any of H. M.'s justices of the peace, or at any general or quarter sessions of the peace: although such non-commissioned officer or soldier be dead or absent from the kingdom: Provided always, and in case any non-commissioned officer or private soldier shall be again summoned to make oath as aforesaid, then, on such examination or such attested copy thereof being produced by him, or by any other person on his behalf, such non-commissioned officer or soldier shall not be obliged to take any other or further oath with regard to his legal settlement, but shall leave a copy of such examination, or a copy of such attested copy of examination, if required."

This enactment is to be construed strictly; and therefore no other attested copy is legal evidence, while the original is in existence, except that given to the soldier. R. v. Clayton le Moors, 5 T. R. 706; 1 Phill. Evid. 358.

The original examination may be evidence. R. v. Worley, 6 T. R., 534; but it must be authenticated as being genuine by proof that the persons attesting are magistrates, or at least that the signatures are the hand-writing of those whose they purport to be, or the like. R. v. Bilton cum Harrowgate, 1 East, 13.

The examination of the soldier is to be received in evidence as to his settlement, though he be dead or absent from his country when the appeal as to such settlement is tried. R. v. Warminster, 3 B. & A. 121.

In a late case, where an examination of a soldier taken before two magistrates was tendered in evidence to prove his settlement, but it did not appear by the examination itself, or by other proof, that the soldier at the time when he was examined was quartered in the place where the justices had jurisdiction, it was held not admissible. R. v. All Saints, Southampton, 7 B. & Cres. 185; 1 M. & R. 663, S. C.

Depositions of infirm Paupers as to Settlement—By stat. 49 Geo. III., c. 124, s. 4, it is enacted, That whenever it shall happen that any pauper is, by age, illness, or infirmity, unable to be brought up to the petty sessions to be examined as to his or her settlement, it shall be lawful for any one magistrate acting for the district where such pauper shall be, to take the examination of the said pauper, and to report the same to any other magistrate or magistrates acting for the said district, and for the said magistrates upon such report to adjudge the settlement of the said pauper, and make and suspend the order of removal, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the said pauper had appeared before two magistrates. Vide Poor, Vol. IV.

Depositions of Prisoners as to Settlement—And by stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 28, it is enacted, That it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to take in writing the examination on oath of any person having a wife or child, who shall be a prisoner in any gaol or house of correction, or in the custody of the keeper of any such gaol or house of correction, or who shall be in the custody of any constable or other peace officer, by virtue of any warrant of commitment, touching the place of his or her last legal settlement: and such examination shall be signed by such justice taking the same, and shall be received and admitted in evidence, as to such settlement, before any justices, for the purpose of any order of removal, so long only as the person so examined shall continue a prisoner. Vide Poor, Vol. IV.

prisoners as to their settlements.
59 G. 3. c. 12.

As observed by Mr. Phillips in his valuable treatise on Evidence, Vol. I. p. 376, the general rule, respecting the admissibility of depositions after the death of the witness, is, that they are not evidence, unless they have been taken judicially, and unless the party, whose interests would be affected by them, had an opportunity of being present and cross-examining the deponent. It is, therefore, now clearly established that the ex parte examination of a pauper concerning his settlement, taken on oath before magistrates, is not admissible upon a question of settlement, as evidence against the appellant parish. R. v. Nuneham Courtenay, 1 East, 373; R. v. Ferry Frystone, 2 East, 54; R. v. Abergwilly, ib. 63. The objection against their admissibility is, not that the magistrates have no power to administer an oath, but that the examination is ex parte, obtained at the instance of overseers, whose parish would be benefited by the removal, and behind the backs of the appellants, who received no notice of the proceeding, and had not the benefit of a cross-examination. See R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 725. And there are no words (under which paupers in the statute 13 & 14 Car. II., c. 12, are removed) expressly requiring the justices to take down any examination in writing. 1 Phil. Evid. 7 ed. 376.

Depositions after death of witness.

Examinations in Bastardy—It has been held, that where a pregnant woman died after examination taken under stat. 6 Geo. II. c. 31, but before an order of filiation, such examination is admissible in evidence on an application to the quarter sessions to make an order of filiation on the putative father; and that, if not contradicted, it ought to be considered as conclusive. R. v. Ravenstone, 5 T. R. 373. It is to be observed, however, that in the case of R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 707, where two justices had taken the examination of a pauper relative to his settlement, but did not remove him thereon, and he afterwards became insane, the judges of the

&c.

Court of King's Bench were equally divided on the question, whether two other justices could remove his family on that examination.

(3.) Private Writings.

Private writings.

The next class of written evidence consists of private writings, as deeds, entries in private books, and other writings made by individuals, relating to themselves or others, in their own private capacity.

We have already noticed the doctrine that the best evidence is required in all cases; also, that written evidence is superior to verbal evidence: such being the case, it is a general rule that, where a party, in making out his case, shows that any part of it rests on written testimony, as a deed, agreement, or other instrument of a private nature, he must produce and prove it. Fenn v. Griffiths, 6 Bing. 533; Brewer v. Palmer, 3 Esp. 213. In some cases, however, as we have seen, as where the original is lost, or in the hands of the opposite party, who refuses after notice to produce it, secondary and sometimes parol evidence thereof is admissible. For those cases, and the course to be pursued therein, see ante, 24 to 28.

We will now consider the mode of proving the execution of a deed, agreement, or other written instrument of a private nature.

Proof of execution.

Proof of Execution—It is not absolutely necessary that the witness should see the deed or instrument absolutely executed; as if the obligor of a bond sign a bond, and then tell a certain person that he had signed it and sealed it, and bid him witness it, which he does: that is a sufficient proof of due execution of the bond. Powell v. Blackett, 1 Esp. 97; Park v. Mears, 2 Bos. & Pull. 217; 1 Phil. Evid. 468.

Proof of handwriting will afford presumptive evidence of the due execution. Grellier v. Neale, Peake, 146; Adams v. Kerr, 1 Bos. & P. 361.

An attesting witness may refresh his memory as to the execution from seeing his own attestation. 8 B. & Cres. 16.

Sealing is essential to a deed, but it is not material with what seal it is sealed. Any number of parties may use the same seal. Com. Dig. Fait (A 2). If there be twenty to seal one deed, and they all seal upon one piece of wax and with one seal, yet if they make distinct and several prints, this is a sufficient sealing, and the deed is good. Shep. Touchst. c. 4, p. 55; 1 Phil. Ev. 7 ed. 467.

No particular form or ceremony is necessary as to the delivery of a deed. It will suffice if a party testifies his intention in any manner to deliver the deed into the possession of the other party. 1 Phil. Ev. 467. Thoroughgood's case, 9 Rep. 137—Com. Dig. Evidence (A 3).

Identity.

Some evidence to identify the party who executed the instrument must be given. B. N. P. 171; Middleton v. Sandford, 4 Camp. 34. Proof of the party's signature proves only this fact, that the instrument in question was executed by a person in a certain name; it does not prove the other important fact, that the party who signed is that person. Slight evidence would be sufficient. Evidence that the party was present when the instrument was prepared by the subscribing witness will serve to connect him with the instrument. Nelson v. Whittall, 1 B. & A. 19. 1 Phil. Evid. 466. 475. The place of residence of the party described in the instrument will frequently afford evidence of identity. M. & M. 176. Where the attesting witness's personal attendance cannot be had, the proof of signature of such witness dispenses with other proof of identity of the party executing. See 3 C. & P. 555; M. & M. 286.—79.

Where an attesting witness.

Where there is an attesting Witness—If the execution of the instrument was attested by a subscribing witness, he alone is competent to prove the execution, because he may be able to state the time of the execution, and some circumstances of the transaction, which may be material, and unknown to other persons. On an indictment, therefore, against an apprentice for inlisting himself in the army, all the judges held, that the indenture of apprenticeship could not be proved by the master, but that it was necessary to call one of the subscribing witnesses. R. v. Jones, 2 East's P. C. 822; 1 Leach, 174, S. C.; see also R. v. Harringworth, 4 M. & S. 350; 1 Phill. Evid. 446; 7 T. R. 266. A notice, if attested, must be proved by the attesting witness, see Doe v. Durnford, 2 M. & S. 62. So must a warrant or other instrument. Higgs v. Dixon, 2 Stark. 180.

The subscribing witness must be called, even though the party has admitted the due execution of the instrument, unless where the execution is made an admission in the cause. Call v. Denning, 4 East, 53; 1 Esp. 89; 1 Camp. 375. To prove a deed, the attesting witness must be called, though it be an issue directed to try a question as to the date, and not the existence, of the deed. Edinburgh v. Crundell, 2 Stark. N. P. 284. And even if the deed be cancelled, the subscribing witness must be called to prove the execution. Per Ld. Kenyon, C. J., in Breton v. Cope, Peake's Rep. 30; 1 Phill. Evid. 446, 447.

Subscribing witnesses are not essential to a deed. Com. Dig. Fait. (B. 4) Peake's Evid. 96.

Where there are two or more subscribing witnesses, it suffices to call one of them. See Peake's Evid. 103; 1 Esp. 391; Skin. 413; 2 Stra. 1253.

A subscribing witness to any instrument is compellable to give evidence respecting it; for the person, by subscribing his name, undertakes to give evidence at a proper time and in a proper manner. 10 Mod. 333.

If the subscribing witness be dead, it is sufficient to prove his handwriting: but it must also be proved that he is dead. 12 Mod. 607; 1 B. & A. 19.

Where proof by

Illness is not a sufficient reason for dispensing with the attendance of a subscribing witness: such a relaxation of the rule has not yet been made, and it would obviously be liable to great abuse. Harrison v. Blades, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J.; 3 Camp. 458; 1 Phill. Evid. 456; see Jones v. Brewer, 4 Taunt. 46. If the subscribing witness be blind, Wood v. Drury, 1 Ld. Raym. 734, or insane, Currie v. Child, 8 Camp. 283, he need not be called, after proving these facts and his handwriting. So if he be absconded from his creditors, Crosby v. Percy, 1 Taunt. 364; 1 Camp. 303. S. C. So, if by some criminal act he, subsequently to the execution of the deed, become incompetent as a witness in a court of justice. Jones v. Mason, 2 Stra. 833. So, if he become so by interest subsequently accrued by operation of law; Buckley v. Smith, 2 Esp. 697; Godfrey v. Norris, 1 Stra. 34; Goss v. Tracy, 1 P. Wms. 289; but not by interest given to the witness by the party desirous to prove the execution, Hovill v. Stephenson, 5 Bing. 493; Forrester v. Pigou, 1 M. & S. 9; or by interest at the time of the execution, Swire v. Bell, 5 T. R. 371; unless that was known to the party who requested the witness's attestation. Honeywood v. Peacock, 3 Camp. 196. So, if the witness denies all knowledge of his attestation or execution, Talbot v. Hodson, 7 Taunt. 251; Boxer v. Rabeth, Gow's C. N. P. 175; 2 Camp. 435, or where the name is fictitious, Fasset v. Brown, Peake, 23, or where he attested, not knowing what he was about, M'Craw v. Gentry, 3 Camp. 232, he need not be called on proving those facts.

If the attesting witness be out of the jurisdiction of the Court, as not to be amenable to its process, as in Ireland or elsewhere, Prince v. Blackburn, 2 East, 252; Hodnett v. Forman, 1 Stark. 90; or where he cannot be found after diligent inquiry, Cunliffe v. Sefton, 2 East, 183, his personal attendance may be dispensed with.

Strict proof is required of such diligent inquiry; and the sufficiency of the inquiry is a question for the jury; Bampton v. Paulin, 4 Bing. 264. Where it was proved, that a commission of bankruptcy had been taken out against the attesting witness, a bankrupt, to which he had never appeared, Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., said this was sufficient, as he would presume from his not surrendering, that he was out of the kingdom. Wardell v. Fermor, 2 Camp. 282. A witness, on being subpoenaed, said he would not attend, and the trial was twice put off in consequence of his absence: search was then made at the defendant's house and in the neighbourhood; and upon information at the defendant's, that the witness was gone to Margate, and inquiry made there without success; under these circumstances his personal attendance was not required. Burt v. Walker, 4 B. & A. 697. An ineffectual inquiry after an attesting witness to a bond, at the residences of the obligor and obligee, has been held sufficient. 2 East, 183. So has an inquiry after witness at his usual place of residence, and information there that he has absconded. 1 Camp. 303; sed vid. Pytt v. Griffith, 6 Moore, 538, which is to the contrary. So has an inquiry at the Admiralty, and information there, by the last report, that the witness was serving on board a ship. Parker v. Hoskins, 2 Taunt. 223. So where the witness went abroad twenty years ago, and has never since been heard of. Doe v. Johnson, 1 Phill. Evid. 453, ante, 29. And other circumstances, from which it may be fairly inferred he has left the kingdom, will suffice: as, where a witness expressed an intention of leaving the kingdom, having reason for so doing, to avoid a criminal prosecution, and his relations not having since expressed his intention of going. Ray v. Brookman, 3 Car. & P. 555.

witness does not attend.

As to the mode of proving the execution of the instrument, where the subscribing witness does not attend the trial, and such attendance is dispensed with, that will be effected simply by proving the handwriting of the attesting witness, as also the circumstances which are necessary to dispense with his attendance. There is no necessity for proving the handwriting of the party himself. Ray v. Brookman, 3 Car. & P. 555; Nelson v. Wittal, 1 B. & A. 19; Gough v. Cecil, Selw. N. P. 516, n. Proof of the absent attesting witness's signature will suffice, though the party to the instrument executed only by his mark. Mitchell v. Johnson, M. & M. C. N. P. 176, and see Page v. Mann, id. 79. Some evidence of the identity of the absent subscribing witness should be given. As to the mode of proving the attesting witness's handwriting, see infra.

Where party re-
an attested document.

If a party, after notice, refuses to produce a document which is proved to be in his possession, the opposite party may give secondary evidence of its contents, as in other cases, without calling the subscribing witness. Cook v. Tanswell, 2 Moore, 513; 8 Taunt. 450; 1 Moore, 465, S. C.

Where no attesting

Where there is no attesting Witness, &c.]—In cases where there is no subscribing witness to the instrument, or where the subscribing witness has not any knowledge of the execution (which is the same thing as if there were no witness at all), Fitzgerald v. Elsee, 2 Camp. 635; Lemon v. Dean, ib. 636, n. per Le Blanc, J., (in the case of a promissory note); Talbot v. Hodson, 7 Taunt. 251; ante, 57, or where the name of a fictitious person is inserted; Fasset v. Brown, Peake's Rep. 23; ante, 57, or where the attesting witness was interested at the time of the execution of the deed, or becomes so subsequently, and continues so at the time of the trial, Swire v. Bell, 5 T. R. 371, ante, 57, or where the person who has put his name as subscribing witness did so without the knowledge or consent of the parties, M'Craw v. Gentry, 3 Camp. 232; 4 Taunt. 220; ante, 57, the execution may be proved by proving the handwriting of the party to the deed; or by any person present at the execution, though he is not indorsed as a witness; Com. Dig. tit. Evidence, (B. 3.) or by proof of an admission of the party himself that he executed that deed.

Handwriting.

Handwriting]—In general, the witness, to prove a handwriting, should have gained his knowledge from having seen the party write; but under some circumstances that is not necessary; as where the handwriting to be proved, is of a person residing abroad, evidence by a party who has frequently received letters from him in a course of correspondence would be admitted to prove it, though he had never seen him write. Bull. N. P. 236.

Belief.

It is not necessary that a witness should swear that the writing intended to be given in evidence is actually the handwriting of any particular individual; but his belief that it is such is sufficient.

This belief must be founded upon rational grounds: either he must have seen the individual in question often write his name, or have received letters from him in a course of correspondence, not having actually seen him write, or the like.

PRIVATE WRITINGS.

But he is to form his opinion merely and that only from looking at the handwriting in question.

Handwriting.

In a case where a witness who had never seen the defendant, but had corresponded with a person of the defendant's name living at Plymouth Dock, where defendant resided, and where, according to other evidence, there was no other person of that name, stated that the handwriting of certain letters was that of the person with whom he had corresponded, it was held, that this evidence was sufficient to admit the letters to be read against the defendant. Harrington v. Fry, 2 Biag. 179; 9 Moore, 344; 3 Stark. C. N. P. 90; R. & M. C. N. P. 90, S. C.; and see Tharp v. Giuburne, 2 C. & P. 21.

To prove the handwriting of a member of parliament, the opinion of a clerk employed to inspect franks, who never had occasion to apply to the member to verify his handwriting, has been held insufficient. Batchelor v. Honeywood, 2 Esp. R. 714.

Mere opinion.

Where a witness stated that he had merely seen the party subscribe his name to another instrument to which he was attesting witness, and was unable to form an opinion respecting the handwriting in question without examining such other instrument, it was held insufficient; for it was evident he could not speak to the handwriting except by comparison. Filliter v. Minchin, Manning's Index, 131.

It seems to be generally holden, since the reversal of the attainder of Algernon Sidney, that similitude of hands is not evidence in any criminal case, whether capital or not capital. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 15; 1 Id. Raym. 39; 9 Howell's St. Tri. 817; 4 Esp. 37; Allport v. Meek, 4 C. & P. 267. Unless perhaps where the writing is so ancient that no witness can be found to prove it. 1 Phill. Evid. 492, 7 ed.; Peake, N. P. C. 20; B. N. P. 236; 8 Price, 652; R. & M. C. N. P. 143. As where a parson's book was produced to prove a modus, the parson having been long dead, a witness who had examined the parish books, in which was the same person's name, was permitted to swear to the similitude of the handwriting, for it was the best evidence for the nature of the thing, as the parish books were not in the plaintiff's power to produce. B. N. P. 236. Or unless perhaps where there is already contradictory evidence of the fact as to the handwriting. See Allesbrook v. Roach, 1 Esp. N. P. C. 352; Da Costa v. Pym. Peake Evid. If evidence by comparison be properly admitted in such cases to prove the genuineness of a signature, the same kind of evidence must also be admissible to prove that the signature is not genuine. 1 Phill. Evid. 492.

hand.

A witness who has seen a party write may refer to that writing to refresh and strengthen his recollection, and not merely for the purpose of comparison. Burr v. Harper, Holt, C. N. P. 420; 8 B. & Cres. 16. See post, as to refreshing memory.

Refreshing memory.

The best evidence to prove a signature or writing to be a forgery is to be derived from calling the party himself whose writing is alleged to have been forged, provided he be a competent witness.

Imitated handwriting.

Inspectors of franks, clerks of the post office, and other persons of skill, practised in examining handwriting and in detecting forgeries, have been in some cases allowed to give their opinion from their general knowledge of handwriting whether a particular specimen of handwriting is in a genuine or imitated character. Goodtitle dem. Revett v. Braham, 4 T. R. 497; R. v. Cator, 4 Esp. 117. 145; Kemp v. Mackiull Sayer, 132; Stringer v. Searle; 1 Esp. N. P. C. 14; 1 Phill. Evid. 493.

Inspector of franks,
&c.

But such evidence has been since rejected, and great doubts entertained as to its admissibility. Gurney v. Langlands, 5 B. & A. 330. At all events it should, in general, have but little weight. Id.

Ancient deeds, &amp;c.

Proof of Execution when dispensed with—If a deed be thirty years old, it may be given in evidence without any proof of the execution of it. However, there ought to be some account given of the deed, as to where it was found, &c.: and if there be any blemish in the deed, by rasure or interlineation, the deed ought to be proved, though it were above thirty years old, by the witnesses, if living, and if they be dead, by proving the hand of the witnesses, or at least one of them, and the hand of the party, in order to encounter the presumption arising from the blemishes of the deed; and this ought more especially to be done if the deed imports a fraud. B. N. P. 255. There is no fixed rule upon this point, but a deed has often been allowed as evidence where it was but twenty-five years old. 12 Vin. Abr. 57. Other old writings besides deeds are also subject to this rule of evidence. Fry v. Wood, Selw. N. P. 517, n. It has been held sufficient to produce a certificate of settlement thirty years old, without showing that it had been kept in the parish chest. R. v. Ryton, 5 T. R. 259; and see R. v. Whitchurch, 7 B. & Cres. 573; 1 M. & R. 472, S.C.; ante, 53. Even though the attesting witness be alive, and capable of being produced, it seems unnecessary to call him where the deed is thirty years old. March v. Collett, 2 Esp. 665; B. N. P. 255. In a late case, a will of thirty years old was allowed to be read as proved, although the testator had died within thirty years, and some of the subscribing witnesses were proved to be still living. Doe v. Woolley, 8 B. & Cres. 22. Where a deed enrolled (and of which enrollment was necessary) is given in evidence, it is not necessary to prove the execution of it by the subscribing witness; but it may be proved by the enrollment indorsed on it, or, if the deed be lost, by an examined copy of the enrollment. See ante, 42 to 44.

Where one deed or instrument is recited in another, proof of the second deed or instrument is deemed proof of the one recited, as against the parties to the second deed or instrument and their privies. 2 Bac. Ab. Evid. F. So would be the recital in a deed of the payment of money conclusive proof at law of such payment as against the parties to it or their privies. Lampon v. Corke, 5 B. & Ald. 606; 1 D. & R. 210, S. C.; 2 Taunt. 141.

Where a party producing a deed under a notice to produce claims a beneficial interest under it, it will not be necessary for the party calling for the deed to prove the execution of it. Pearce v. Hooper, 3 Taunt. 62; Orr v. Morice, 3 B. & B. 139; 6 Moore, 347, S. C. But where the party producing the deed does not claim any interest under it, the party calling for it must prove it in the regular way. Id. Jordan v. Secretan, 8 East, 548; overruling; R. v. Middlezoy, 2 T. R. 41. See Burnett v. Lynch, 5 B. & Cres. 589; 8 D. & R. 368, S. C.; Doe v. Heming, 6 B. & Cres. 28; 9 D. & R. 15, S. C.

In Vacher v. Cocks, 1 B. & Ald. p. 145, it was decided that a party, producing at the trial of a cause a deed which had been some months in his possession, is not excused from proving the execution because he received such deed from the adverse party, who formerly claimed a benefit under it.

It is not necessary to prove the execution of an instrument against the spoliator of, or wrongdoer as to it. R. v. Ellins, R. & R. C. C. 188.

Stamps.

It may be laid down as a general rule, that whenever an instrument becomes in any way the direct subject of a prosecution, it cannot be given in evidence unless it have the proper stamp, because, by the stamp acts, without a stamp it cannot be read as a genuine instrument. Thus an agreement to assign an apprentice cannot, if unstamped, be received in evidence to prove a settlement, even after the expiration of the term of apprenticeship. R. v. Bedford, 6 T.R. 452. Various other instances might also be cited.

If indeed a party can get through his case without giving the opposite party any opportunity of showing that there was a written instrument, if the latter wishes to avail himself of it, then he must produce it duly stamped. R. v. Rawden, 8 B. & C. 710; Reed v. Deere, 7 B. & Cres. 266; Chit. Stamp Laws, 43; ante, 25.

When a party is desirous of giving secondary evidence of an instrument which requires a stamp, which has been lost or destroyed, or in the custody of the opposite party, who has had notice to produce it, there must be positive or presumptive evidence that it was properly stamped. 1 Stark. Evid. 354, 33, id. 1379; Chit. Stamp Laws, 35. Where a party refuses to produce an instrument after notice to do so, it will be presumed as against him that it was properly stamped, until the contrary appear. Crisp v. Anderson, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 35; 2 Stark. Evid. 80; and see Munn v. Godbold, 3 Bingh. 292, ante, 26. Where an apprentice had regularly served under an indenture executed thirty years ago, and the parish in which the apprentice was settled under that indenture had relieved him for the last twelve years, it was held that the sessions had rightly presumed, that the indenture was duly stamped, although it was proved on the other side by the deputy registrar and comptroller of the apprentice indentures, that it did not appear that any such indenture had been stamped or enrolled. R. v. Long Buckby, 7 East, 45; 3 Stark. Evid. 1379. For the presumption of law is omnia rite esse acta; and against the negative evidence the parties below might reasonably set the possibility of an irregular entry in the return made to the office. Id.

Should, however, it appear by the examination or cross-examination of the party's witnesses, that the instrument was not properly stamped, then, although it has been lost, R. v. Castle Morton, 3 B. & Ald. 588, or destroyed even fraudulently by the party who objects to the want of the stamp, no secondary evidence therefore can be admitted. Rippiner v. Wright, 2 B. & Ald. 478; 2 Stark. Evid. 80. For it is the duty of the parties to the instrument to take care that when it is executed it is properly stamped, and it is one of the risks attendant on an omission to do this, that if any accident happen to the instrument before the stamp is affixed, there is no remedy whatever on the instrument itself. Id.

For some collateral purposes, an unstamped instrument (though it requires a stamp) is admissible in evidence, as to defeat fraud, or prove an offence or crime. Thus, in support of an indictment for forgery, R. v. Hawkswood, 1 Leach, 257; East's P. C. 955, 6; R. v. Gibson, 1 Taunt. 97; Chit. Stamp Laws, 53; or knowingly uttering a forged instrument, R. v. Reculist, 2 Leach, 703; it may be read in evidence, though unstamped. And an unstamped check is admissible for the purpose of identifying other property stolen, in support of an indictment for larceny. R. v. Pooley, 3 B. & P. 316; R. & R. C. C. 31.

In general, however, an unstamped instrument cannot be read in a criminal case, as evidence of the purpose for which it was intended. 3 Stark. Evid. 1382; R. v. Hall, 3 Stark. 67, n. Thus, in an indictment for setting fire to a house with intent to defraud an insurer, an unstamped policy is not admissible in evidence to prove the contract of insurance. R. v. Gibson, 1 Taunt. 95; R. & R. C. C. 138; 2 Leach, 1007. And upon an indictment against a clerk for embezzling his master's money, an unstamped receipt given by the servant to the debtor who paid him the money is not evidence against the prisoner. R. v. Hall, 3 Stark. 67. So in a prosecution on the 7 Geo. III. c. 50. (which made it a capital offence for any person employed in receiving letters to secrete any letter containing a bank note, or any warrant or draft for the payment of money), it was held not competent to the prosecutor to give in evidence any instrument of that description unstamped. R. v. Pooley, 3 B. & P. 311; 2 Leach, 900, 904; R. & R. C. C. 31, S. C.

But for a collateral purpose such a writing may be produced in evidence; and, therefore, if the prisoner be indicted for stealing a letter in which it was folded, it may be brought forward to fix him with having purloined the letter, id. And where the act requiring the stamp does not expressly prohibit the unstamped paper from being given in evidence, it may for collateral purposes be read, as in the case of a newspaper, which, though unstamped, may be read in evidence in support of an indictment for a libel in another newspaper to prove the defendant's malice; and Ld. Kenyon said this is not the case of deeds and agreements, when the acts of parliament expressly declare, that no such instrument shall be read in evidence until stamped, and though the publisher would be liable to a penalty for not getting the paper stamped before publication, yet it may be given in evidence. R. v. Pearce, Peake's R. 75, 76; Chit. Stamp Laws, 53, 4, 5.

The seeming contradictions in admitting unstamped instruments in support of indictments for forgery, and rejecting them upon other indictments, will be found reconciled in Chit. Stamp Laws, 55, 6.

In some cases, as in the instance of an unstamped receipt, although the unstamped instrument is not admissible in evidence, it may, nevertheless, be shown the witness to refresh his memory, and enable him, from his recovered recollection, with more certainty to give his parol evidence. See Maugham v. Hubbard, 8 B. & C. 14; 2 M. & R. 5, S. C.; 1 East, 460; 3 Stark. 3; Chit. Stamp Laws, 46, 47.

When a party gives in evidence an instrument unstamped, but which in general requires a stamp, and relies on some facts entitling the instrument to an exemption from the stamp duty, he should prove those facts; and the mere recital in the instrument of such facts will not in general suffice. Therefore, where an unstamped indenture of apprenticeship recited that a premium of 12*l.* had been paid by the parish officers, but added, that it was paid out of a charitable donation fund belonging to the parish, and the master being called, proved that the premium had been paid by the parish officers, who told him, at the time of paying it, that it was charity money; it was held, that the fact of payment being proved, the recital in the indenture, and the declaration of the parish officers, were not admissible in evidence, so as to bring the case within the exemption in the stamp act, and that the indenture, being unstamped, was void. R. v. Skeffington, 1 B. & Ald. 382. But if there had been no evidence but the deed and the declaration of the parish officer, and the fact of payment by him had not been proved by the master, it seems there would have been sufficient evidence that the money was paid out of the charity fund. Id.

Except, however, in the case of exemptions, it is incumbent on the party who relies on the objection to show that the facts bring the case within the operation of the law requiring a stamp. 5 Esp. R. 182; 3 Car. & P. 26.

IV. Modes of Proof by Witnesses.

Division of subject.

This division of the subject will be considered with reference to, 1st. How many witnesses are requisite. 2d, Their competency. 3d, Their credibility. 4th, How they may be compelled to attend. 5th, The examination of them on the trial. And lastly, Their expenses and privileges.

The law respecting the examination and compelling the attendance of witnesses before magistrates on summary proceedings will be found, post, under tit. Examination, Vol. II.

(1.) Number of Witnesses required.

The common law does not require any certain number of witnesses for the trial of any crime whatsoever except in perjury. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 2.

What number of witnesses are required.

And before a justice of the peace, in divers cases, one witness is sufficient to convict an offender; the same being directed by special statutes.

But by stat. 7 Wm. III. c. 3, s. 2, in case of high treason, whereby corruption of blood shall be made, no person shall be attainted but upon the oaths of two witnesses, either both to the same overt act, or one of them to one, and the other of them to another overt act of the same treason. But in Gahagan's case, at the Old Bailey Jan. sess. 1748, 1 Leach, 42, it was determined, that a conviction of high treason may be upon the evidence of one witness, in all cases where there is no corruption of blood. In misprision of treason there must be two witnesses, unless the defendant willingly and without violence confess the offence. 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, s. 22. See further, 1 Chit. C. L. 560.

On an indictment for perjury there must be two witnesses; one alone is not sufficient, because there is in that case only one oath against another. 10 Mod. 194; Stra. 1230. But if the assignment of perjury be directly proved by one witness, and strong circumstantial evidence be given by another, or be established by written documents, this would perhaps be sufficient, although it does not appear as yet to have been so decided. Also, if the perjury consist in the defendant's having sworn contrary to what he had before sworn upon the same subject, this is not within the rule above mentioned; for the effect of the defendant's oath in the one case is neutralized by his oath in the other; and proof by one witness will therefore make the evidence against the defendant preponderate. Arch. Cr. Plead. & Evid. 110; 5 B. & Ald. 929, n. (a.) See post, Perjury. Vol. V.

In those courts which proceed by the rules of the civil law, as the spiritual court and the courts of equity, two witnesses are generally required; and the reason why the civil law requires two witnesses is, because their trial is by witnesses, and not by a jury of twelve men.

1 Inst. 6 b.; Plowd. 12. a.

By stat. 29 Ch. II. c. 3, s. 5, devises of lands shall be attested by three witnesses at the least.

(2.) Competency of Witnesses.

The exceptions to a witness are of two kinds; 1st, to his credit on account of facts, which do not at all disable him from being sworn, but yet may blemish the credibility of his testimony; and in such case the witness is to be allowed, but the credit of his testimony is left to the jury; 2nd, to his competency on account of facts, which exclude him from giving his testimony; and of these exceptions the court is the judge. 2 Hale, 276, 277.

Competency of witnesses.

As to what will affect the credit of a witness, see post, 78.

The Incompetency of a Witness may arise either from Want of Discretion, Want of Religion, from Infamy, from Relationship, from Confidential Communications, from Interest, from being Parties to the Prosecution, &c.

How incompetency may arise.

(1.) WANT OF DISCRETION]—Want of discretion is a good exception against a witness; on which account alone it seems that an infant may be excepted against. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 27. But if an infant be of the age of fourteen years, he is as to this purpose of the age of discretion to be sworn as a witness; and even if under that age, yet if it appear that he hath a competent discretion, he may be sworn. 2 Hale, 278. And in many cases an infant of tender years may be examined, where the exigence of the case requires it; which possibly, being fortified with concurrent evidences, may be of some weight; especially in cases of such crimes as are practised

(1.) Want of discretion.

Infants.

WITNESSES'
COMPETENCY.

Competency.

upon children. 2 Hale, 279, 284. In Brazier's case, 1 East's P. C. 443, 444; 1 Leach, 199. On an indictment for assaulting an infant of five years of age with intent to ravish her, it was agreed by all the judges, that children of any age may be examined on oath, if capable of distinguishing between good and evil: but that they cannot be examined in any case without oath. 2 Stra. 700; 1 Atk. 29; 4 Blac. Com. 214. When the child has appeared not sufficiently to understand the nature and obligation of an oath, judges have often thought it necessary, for the purpose of justice, to put off the trial of the prisoner, directing that the child in the mean time shall be properly instructed. Vide 2 Bac. Abr. by Guillim, 577, notis. Where the child cannot be sworn, the account which it has given of the transaction to others is not admissible. R. v. Tucker, 1 Phill. Evid. 19; R. v. Pike, 3 C. & P. C. N. P. 598; 1 Chit. C. L. 589, 590; and see post, Rape, Vol. V.

Lunatics, &amp;c.

Lunatics and other persons who are subject to temporary fits of insanity may be witnesses in their lucid intervals, if they have sufficiently recovered their understandings.

And a person deaf and dumb is not on that account incompetent, but, if he has sufficient understanding, may give evidence by signs, with the assistance of an interpreter. Ruston's case, 1 Leach, 408; 1 Phill. Evid. 18, 20; and see post, as to examining him.

(2.) Want of

(2.) WANT OF RELIGION]—A man who has no religion whatever, or no religion that can bind his conscience to speak the truth, is excluded from being a witness. B. N. P. 292; Omichund v. Barker, Willes, 549; 1 Atk. 44. It is not, indeed, essential that the witness should be a Christian, or believe in the Old Testament; it is sufficient if he believe in a God, in a future state of rewards and punishments, and in the moral obligation of the oath he is about to take. Id. Gentoos, Willes. 549; Cowp. 390; Jews, 2 Stra. 821; Mahometans, Turks, and Moors, Stra. 1104; 1 Leach, 64; may be witnesses. Atheists, and such like infidels, professing no religion that can bind their consciences to speak the truth, cannot. B. N. P. 292; Willes, 549. The affirmations of Quakers and Moravians are now made sufficient instead of an oath. 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 1, post.

As to the mode of administering the oath to persons not Christians, &c., see post.

The circumstance that a principal witness, although an adult and of sufficient intellect, has no idea of a future state of rewards and punishments, is not a sufficient ground for discharging the jury, though this appears as soon as the jury is charged, and before any evidence is given. R. v. Wade, R. & M. C. C. R. 86.

The proper mode of examining a witness, for the purpose of trying his competency in religious principle, is not to question him as to his particular opinions (as to whether he believes in Jesus Christ), but whether he believes in God, the obligation of an oath, and a future state of rewards and punishments. Per Buller, J., R. v. Taylor, Peake, 11. The witness's answer in the affirmative of such question will make him competent in respect to his religion. Id.

(3.) Infamy, &amp;c.

(3.) INFAMY, &c.]—It seems agreed that an attainder, judgment, or conviction of treason, felony, piracy, premunire, perjury, or forgery, on stat. 5 Eliz., and also a judgment in attainder for giving a false verdict, or in conspiracy at the suit of the king, and also judgment for any heinous crime, to stand on the pillory, or to be whipped or branded, are good causes of exception against a witness, while they continue in force. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 19; Bull. N. P. 291. And in Bushel v. Barrett, R. & M. C. N. P. 434, it was considered, that a judgment for a conspiracy to bribe a person (summoned as a witness on an information against the revenue laws) not to appear before the justices of the peace, renders the person convicted incompetent as a witness.

But a party convicted of a crime not of a heinous nature, as for keeping a gaming-house—R. v. Grant, R. & M. C. N. P. 270; for publishing a libel, or seditious works, or the like—Gilb. Evid. 140; 3 Lev. 428; is not incompetent on that account. Nor will a conviction for conspiracy to raise the funds by false rumours, or to commit a fraud, render the party convicted incompetent. Crowther v. Hopwood, 3 Stark. 21; D. & R. N. P. C. 55, S. C.; Park v. Strockley, 4 D. & R. 144. Case of the Ville de Varsovie and others, 2 Dods. Rep. 174.

In the case of Pendock v. Mackindor, 2 Wils. 18, the question was whether a person convicted and whipped for petit larceny should be allowed to be a witness. And the court were clearly of opinion he should not; and laid it down as a rule, that it is the crime that creates the infamy, and not the punishment for it. But by stat. 31 Geo. III., c. 35, it was enacted that no person shall be an incompetent witness by reason of a conviction of petit larceny. That act is repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 27; and see now the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 2, abolishing the distinction between grand and petit larceny. Post, Larceny, Vol. III. p. 513.

It seems agreed, that it is no good exception against a witness that he is an alien. 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 28.

Outlawry in a civil action is not a good exception against a witness, but outlawry for treason or felony appearing on record by the sheriff's return of the exigent is. R. v. Celier, Sir T. Raym. 396; 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 21.

Excommunication is now no longer a ground for rendering a witness incompetent. See the 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 2, 3.

A pardon of any of these offences has the effect of restoring competency, in as full a manner as if the witness had never been convicted. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 22; Gilb. Evid. 141—2. And this even in the case of perjury at common law, 5 Esp. 94, but not in the cases of perjury on stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9, and conspiracy at the suit of the King; in which cases the incompetency forms a part of the judgment, and is not merely a consequence of it. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 22; B. N. P. 292; but see Hargr. Jurid. Arg. 221.

In general, also, where a capital convict is pardoned, on condition of suffering certain punishment, the endurance of the punishment fulfils the condition, and restores his competency. 2 Hale, 278.

Before the abolition of benefit of the clergy, the allowance of clergy in clergyable felonies, and the endurance of the mitigated punishment, restored the offender to competency. The statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, ante, Clergy, Benefit of, Vol. I. 652, abolishing the benefit of clergy, and affixing punishments directly to the offences, was probably intended to have the same effect; but, as doubts were entertained whether it had distinctly accomplished the object, the stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 3, enacts, that where any offender has been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and has endured the punishment to which he has been adjudged, the punishment so endured shall have the like effects and consequences as a pardon under the great seal as to the felony whereof he was so convicted. (a) And by the same stat., 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 4, a person convicted of a misde-

9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 2.

(a) The words of the act are, sec. 3, "And whereas it is expedient to prevent all doubts respecting the civil rights of persons convicted of felonies not capital, who have undergone the punishment to which they were adjudged; be it therefore enacted, that where any offender hath been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been or shall be adjudged for the same, the punishment so endured hath and shall have the like effects and consequences as a pardon under the great seal as to the felony whereof the offender was so convicted: provided always, that nothing herein contained, nor the enduring of such punishment, shall prevent or mitigate any punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for any other felony."

meanor (except perjury, or subornation of perjury), which renders him an incompetent witness, shall not, after suffering his punishment, be deemed to be, by reason of such misdemeanor, an incompetent witness in any court or proceeding, civil or criminal. (a)

The incompetency of offenders now, therefore, in every kind of offence, except perjury, or subornation of perjury, is removed, when the punishment is suffered, or a pardon granted. And since the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 13, it is not necessary that the pardon should be under the great seal; if it be under the King's sign manual, countersigned by one of his principal secretaries of state, it will suffice. See post, Pardon, Vol. V. p. 3.

It was held in R. v. Badcock, Russ. & R. C. C. 248, that a person who has been convicted of grand larceny, sentenced to be transported for seven years, and confined in the hulks, and discharged at the end of his term, is a competent witness, such confinement operating as a statute pardon, and his having escaped twice from such confinement, for a few hours each time, does not destroy the effect of it.

Mode of proof of conviction, &c.

The party who would take advantage of this objection to the witness's competency must have the record itself, or a copy of the record of conviction, ready to produce in court; for, until the judgment upon the verdict be regularly entered, the witness is not deprived of his legal privileges. B. N. P. 292; 1 Cowp. 3. The conviction without the judgment will not suffice, as judgment might have been arrested; Gilb. Evid. 128—9; and the record will not be complete without a caption. Cooke v. Maxwell, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 183. If it be objected against receiving a person's testimony, that he has been convicted of felony, and his punishment is unexpired, such objection must be supported by the production of the record; and no admission by the party himself will be sufficient. In this case, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "It cannot be seriously argued that a record can be proved by the admission of any witness: he may have mistaken what passed in court, and may have been ordered on his knees for a misdemeanor. This can only be known by the record, and there is no authority for admitting evidence of it." R. v. Castell Careinion, 8 East, 77; see ante, 42; 1 Phill. Evid. 30, 7 ed.

No admission that he has committed a crime of which he has not been convicted, even perjury, will prevent him from being a competent witness. R. v. Teale, 11 East, 309; Rands v. Thomas, 5 M. & S. 244.

(4.) RELATIONSHIP]—It is to be observed, that there be many circumstances that disable a juror, that are not sufficient exceptions against a witness. Thus the exception of kindred is a good cause of challenge against a juror, but not against a witness: therefore the father may be a competent witness for or against his son, or the son for or against his father. These and the like exceptions may be to the credit or credibility of the witness, but are not exceptions against his competency. 2 Hale, 276; 1 Wils. 333; 2 T. R. 263; 6 T. R. 330; Gilb. Evid. 135.

Husband and wife cannot be admitted to be witnesses for each other, because their interests are absolutely the same; nor against each other, ornation of perjury), and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been, or shall be, adjudged for the same, such offender shall not, after the punishment so endured, be deemed to be, by reason of such misdemeanor, an incompetent witness in any court or proceeding, civil or criminal."

However, there are some exceptions to this rule. In the case of high treason, it has been said that a wife shall be admitted as a witness against her husband, because the tie of allegiance is more obligatory than any other. Sed vide 1 Hale, 301; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 82; 1 *Phill. By stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 37 (and previously by stat. 5 Geo. II. c. 30), the wife of a bankrupt may be examined by the commissioners touching his estate, but not his bankruptcy.

If a woman be taken away by force, and married, she may be a witness against her husband indicted on stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 19, against the stealing of women; for a contract obtained by force has no obligation in law. R. T. Hard. 83; B. N. P. 286; ante, Vol. I. p. 7.

So, upon an indictment on the same act, section 22, for marrying a second wife, the first being alive, though the first cannot be a witness, yet the second may, after proof of the first marriage, the second marriage being void. Sir T. Raym. 1; 4 St. Tri. 754; B. N. P. 287; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 72; R. & M. C. N. P. 354; post, Polysamp. Vol. V. p. 146.

In Lord Audley's case, his wife was allowed to be a witness to prove that he assisted to a rape upon her. 1 St. Tri. 393; and see 1 Hale, P. C. 301; 1 Phil. 84.

In Azyre's case on an indictment against him for beating his wife, Lord Raymond suffered her to give evidence. 1 Stra. 633; B. N. P. 287, S. C.

A wife is permitted to exhibit articles of the peace against her husband; B. N. P. 287; and the Court will not receive affidavits on the part of the defendant, to contradict the truth of the articles exhibited against him; and prevent his giving surety. Lord Vane's case, 13 East, 171 (a); R. v. Doherty, ib.

So an affidavit of a married woman has been admitted to be read, on an application to the Court of King's Bench for an information against the husband, for an attempt to take her away by force, after articles of separation. Bull. N. P. 286; 1 Burr. 543; 13 East, 171, n.; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 85.

On the trial of a man for the murder of his wife, her dying declarations are evidence against him. Woodcock's case, 2 Leach, C. C. 363; John's case, 1 East's P. C. 337; 1 Phill. Evid. 85; ante, 33.

And in all cases of personal injuries committed by the husband or wife against each other, the injured party is an admissible witness against the other. R. v. Jagger, 1 East's P. C. 455.

R. v. Wood, M. Sitt. 26 Geo. III. On an indictment for forcibly breaking open the house of a third person, and assaulting the defendant's wife, Lord Mansfield, C. J., admitted the defendant's wife as a witness to prove the assault on her. MS.

On the trial of an appeal against an order of removal (and, upon the same principle, in any suit or proceeding between third persons), a husband or wife is a competent witness to prove a former marriage, even after proof of a second marriage, although, perhaps, the witness would not be compellable to answer such questions. And the reasoning upon which this rule is founded is equally strong to show, that the one may be called as a witness to disprove what has been stated by the other; and that either the party who has called the one, or the opposite party, may call the other for the purpose of contradicting. Indeed, the reasoning is much stronger in this case than in the former, where the husband or wife is allowed to prove the first marriage; for although they may directly contradict each other as to a particular fact, it will not follow that either party has been guilty of perjury. And as the most serious inconveniences might result from a different rule, which would be a bar to the full and complete investigation of the subject, in cases, too, where the property, the character, or even the life of a party may be at stake, it appears to be reasonable, and necessary to the ends of justice, that such evidence should be admitted. 1 *Phill. Woman divorced.

If a woman be divorced a vinculo matrimonii, she cannot prove a contract, or any thing else which happened during the coverture. Any fact arising after the divorce, she may prove. Monroe v. Twisleton, Peake's Evid. App. p. xxxix.

Woman living with the party as
wife.

In Campbell v. Twemlow, 1 Price, 81, it was made a question, but not decided, whether a woman who had passed as the wife of a man, but was not so, could be examined as a witness for him. Lord C. B. Richards cited a case, before Lord Kenyon on the Chester circuit in the year 1782, where, on a trial for forgery, the prisoner called a woman as his witness whom he had himself in court represented to be his wife, but afterwards, on hearing an objection taken to her competency, denied that she was married to him; and Lord Kenyon would not permit him to call her, after having represented her as his wife. 1 Phill. Evid. 88, 7 ed. However, it seems now fully settled by the case of Batthews v. Galindo, 1 Mo. & Payne, 565, that though a woman lives with a man, uses his name, and passes as his wife, she is a competent witness for or against him, such circumstances going only to her credit, and not to her competency; and see 2 Stark. Evid. 711.

Other points.

The wife of a party is an incompetent witness for or against him, though she marry after the subpoena served. Pedley v. Wellesley, 3 C. & P. 558.

A widow cannot be asked to disclose conversations between her and her late husband. Doker v. Haslar, R. & M. C. N. P. 198.

It seems a wife cannot be examined against her husband, even with his consent. 1 Hale's P. C. 47.

In all cases where husband and wife are admissible witnesses against each other, they are admissible also for each other. R. v. Sergeant, R. & M. C. N. P. 352.

(5.) From confidence.

(5.) CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS]—Some persons also are privileged, by reason of their peculiar employment, from being compelled to give evidence.

Attorneys.

Thus an attorney or solicitor ought not to be examined against his client, because he is obliged to keep his secrets; but of his own knowledge before retainer, that is, before he was addressed in his professional character, he may be examined as a witness, if served with a subpoena. Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 4; and Cutts v. Pickering, Ventr. 197; 1 Chit. C. L. 605.

This privilege of confidential communications to an attorney is confined to such as are made to him for the purpose of either commencing, prosecuting, or defending a suit. Broad v. Pitt, 3 Car. & P. 518; R. & M. C. N. P. 233, S. C.; Williams v. Mundie, R. & M. C. N. P. 34; 1 C. & P. 97, S. C.; 2 Swanst. 199, n.; Wadsworth v. Hamshaw, Manning's Index, 374; Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 432: but see Romack v. Heathcote, 2 Brod. & B. 4; 4 Moore, 357, S. C.; and also R. v. Boddington, 4 D. & R. M. C. 233, being to the contrary. Per Best, J., in 3 C. & P. 519:—"I think this confidence in the case of attorneys is a great anomaly in the law. A man is not acting as an attorney when he is consulted about a deed; and I cannot distinguish his situation from that of any other man. I can make a distinction where a person requires information for the purpose of defending himself, or of commencing an action." And this privilege only extends to prevent the disclosure of facts communicated confidentially to the witness in the character of attorney; and therefore it was decided in Spencely q. t. v. Schulenburgh, 7 East, 357, that an attorney may be examined as to the contents of a written notice which he had received in the course of the cause, calling upon him to produce papers in the hands of his clients. For "the privilege is restricted to communications, whether oral or written, from the client to his attorney, and cannot extend to adverse proceedings communicated to him as attorney in the cause from the opposite party, in the disclosure of which there could be no breach of confidence."—Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., S. C.: and see M. & M. C. N. P. 235; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753; B. N. P. 284. An attorney may be called to prove a deed executed by his client which he has attested. Doe v. Andrews, Cowp. 846. So to prove matters communicated to him after the termination of a suit of which they were the subject, without a view to the objects of the suit. Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 431. And a communication made by a client to his attorney, not for the purpose of asking legal advice, but to obtain information as to a matter of fact, is not privileged. Bramwell v. Lucas, 2 B. & Cres. 745; 4 D. & R. 367, S. C. A person who is not an attorney may be compelled to disclose communications made to him under a mistaken idea that he was an attorney. Fountain v. Young, 6 Esp. 113.

WITNESSES' COMPETENCY.

Confidential communication.

This privilege is that of the client, and not of the attorney; and the court will not allow the attorney, though he be willing, to make the disclosure, unless the client consent to the disclosure. B. N. P. 284; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 759.

If the attorney be called by the client, and examined as to a matter which has been the subject of confidential communication, he may be cross-examined as to such matter, though not as to others. Vaillant v. Dodmead, 2 Atk. 424.

Confidential communications made to counsel, when acting as such, are also privileged like those made to attorneys. 4 T. R. 753, and cases above cited.

Counsel.

A person who acts as interpreter—(Du Barre v. Levette, Peake, 78); or as agent between the attorney and his client—(Parkins v. Hawkshaw, 2 Stark. 239); or the attorney's clerk—(Taylor v. Forster, 2 C. & P. 195; 2 D. & R. 347); cannot be called to reveal a confidential communication. Nor can a barrister's clerk be called to prove his master's retainer. Foote v. Hayne, R. & M. C. N. P. 165.

Interpreter.

Agent of attorney.

Clerks.

But this privilege does not extend to the case of an agent or steward. Ib. and 2 Atk. 524.

Nor to the case of a conveyancer. 2 Atk. 525.

Conveyancer.

Nor to the case of medical persons. 4 T. R. 760. There are indeed cases, said Mr. J. Buller in Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 760, to which it is much to be lamented that the law of privilege is not extended; those in which medical persons are obliged to disclose the information they acquire by attending in those professional characters. This point was very much considered in the Duchess of Kingston's case, before the House of Lords, where Sir C. Hawkins, who had attended the duchess as a medical man, was compelled to disclose what had been committed to him in confidence. 20 Howell's St. Tr. 613: and see 1 Phill. Ev. 144, 7th ed.; R. v. Gibbons, 1 Car. & P. 97.

Medical persons.

Nor to clergymen. R. v. Gilham, Car. C. L. 61; 3 C. & P. 519; 20 How. St. Tr. 612; Per Best, J., 3 C. & P. 519:—"I for one will never compel a clergyman to disclose communications made to him by a prisoner; but if he chooses to disclose them, I shall receive them in evidence."

Clergymen.

Where the disclosure of a particular fact, not bearing directly upon the matter in question, may be of detriment to the public service, the Court will not compel a witness to disclose it. In Hardy's case, 24 How Matters of state, &c.

WITNESSES' COMPETENCY.

---

St. Tr. 753, a witness who was employed to obtain information of the proceedings at a meeting of one of the corresponding societies was not allowed to disclose the name of his employer; and see R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 136. Communications between the governor of a colony and his attorney-general are confidential, and cannot be disclosed. Wyatt v. Gore, Holt, 299; Cooke v. Maxwell, 2 Stark. 184. So is a letter written by an agent of government to one of the secretaries of state. Anderson v. Hamilton, 2 Brod. & B. 156 (n).

Other matters.

A letter written by an opposing creditor to the chief commissioner of the Insolvent Court, previous to the hearing of an insolvent's case, is not a privileged communication. Gould v. Hulme, 3 C. & P. 625.

A clerk attending on a grand jury shall not be allowed to reveal that which is given in evidence before the inquest. Tr. per Pais, 387; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 83; and see Lee v. Birrel, 3 Camp. 337.

A grand jurymen has been allowed to be examined in an action for maliciously indicting the plaintiff and others for a conspiracy, as to the fact whether the defendant was the prosecutor of the indictment. Sykes v. Dunbar, 2 Selw. N. P. 1059.

(a.) From interest.

(6.) INTERESTED WITNESS—It is an objection to the admissibility of a witness that he is interested; respecting which it seems an uncontested rule in all cases, that it is a good exception against a witness, that he is either to be a gainer or loser by the event of the cause, whether such advantage be direct and immediate, or consequential only. 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 24.

What such an interest.

And however small the interest may be, the witness would be incompetent. Burton v. Hinde, 5 T. R. 174; but see R. v. Mayor of London, 2 Lev. 231; Peake's Evid. 177.

The witness, however, must have an immediate interest in the event of the proceeding, or must derive a certain benefit from its determination one way or the other. 1 M. & P. 648. A liability to a remote action or prosecution would not suffice to make him incompetent. Id. And if the witness would not incur any loss, nor be liable to a suit, whatever may be the result of the prosecution, his evidence ought to be received. Thus, on an indictment for forging a bank note in the name of a cashier of the bank of England "for the governor and company," the cashier, not being chargeable, may be a witness. Newland's case, 1 Leach, 311; 2 East's P. C. 1001; 1 Phill. Evid. 122.

The judges have, in a variety of cases, resolved that these questions of interest shall, as far as possible, go to the credit rather than the competency of the witness. Peake's Evid. 141.

Witness believing himself interested.
Honorary obligation.

A witness who believes himself interested, but is not so in fact, is competent. Thus a witness who believes himself under an obligation of honour to indemnify the bail, but who has entered into no engagement to indemnify, is competent. Pederson v. Stoffles, 1 Camp. 145. There are, however, authorities that a witness who believes himself legally interested is incompetent: see Trelawney v. Thomas, 1 H. Bla. 307, and Fotheringham v. Greenwood, 1 Stra. 129; and see 1 Phill. Evid. 54 (n); 2 Stark. Evid. 747 (n). In the case of the Amitie Villeneuve, 5 Rob. Rep. 344, Sir William Scott rejected the evidence of a witness who stated that he conceived he would be entitled to share in case his vessel should be deemed joint captor, although he had signed a release. Sir William Scott observed that "he had always understood the distinction to be, that, if the witness says only that he expects to share from the bounty of the captors, he is not disqualified or rendered incompetent, whatever may be the deduction of credit to which he is exposed. But if he thinks himself entitled in law, he acts under an impression of interest, which renders him incompetent, however erroneous that opinion may be."

It is no objection to the competency of a witness that he has wishes or a strong bias on the subject-matter of the issue, or that he hopes or expects some benefit from the result of the trial. Such circumstances may influence his mind and affect his credibility; they are therefore always open to observation, and ought to be carefully weighed by the jury, who are to determine what dependence they can have on his testimony; but they will not render him incompetent. 1 Phil. 47, 7 ed.; Gilb. Evid. 124.

WITNESSES' COMPETENCY.

Witnesses' hope or expectation.

As an exception to the general rule, that persons immediately interested in the event of the cause cannot be witnesses for that party whose claim, if established, will advance their own interest, there is a class of cases determining that where a person is equally interested, either in the event of a verdict for the plaintiff or defendant, he is a good witness. As, for example, where one is intrusted by A. to pay money to B., and does not pay it accordingly, and then B. brings an action against A. for the amount: the agent is a good witness to prove no payment; inasmuch as he acknowledges the receipt of the money from A., and thereby renders himself liable to A. So if an indictment be preferred against a county for not repairing a bridge, and the only question be whether it is in repair, men of the county are good witnesses not only on the general principle, but because it is equally desirable to every man, that the bridge, for convenience of passage, should be repaired when it is necessary, as that the county should not be put to an unnecessary charge; so that they are indifferent, being equally concerned on both sides of the question. 1 Ventr. 351; 6 Mod. 307; Peake's Evid. 169.

Persons interested both ways.

Where a person has made himself a party in interest in the subject-matter for the mere purpose of depriving the party to the suit of the benefit of his testimony, this ought not to exclude him from giving evidence: see Barlow v. Vowel, Skin. 586; Bent v. Baker, 3 T. R. 27; 1 Phil. 137; and in the late case of Hovill v. Stephenson, 5 Bingh. 493, where the plaintiff, in an action on a charter-party, had communicated to the attesting witness an interest in the adventure subsequently to the execution of the instrument, it was held that evidence of his hand-writing was inadmissible, and that he himself ought to be called.

Interest acquired subsequently.

If a trustee takes a beneficial interest, he is incompetent, but without such an interest trustees and executors are competent witnesses. 1 Phill. Ev. 52, 69, and authorities there cited. Trustees being empowered, by act of parliament, to sue in the name of their treasurer, are not competent witnesses for the treasurer suing as such. 1 M. & M. 214.

Trustee.

An heir-at-law may be a witness concerning the title to the land, but the remainder-man cannot; for he hath a present interest, but the heirship is a mere contingency. Smith v. Blackham, 1 Salk. 283.

Heir-at-law.

It is no objection to a steward of a manor, that he has a fee on admission: he is a witness notwithstanding. 3 Keb. 90.

Steward of manor.

In questions as to the rights or immunities of a corporation, the evidence of individuals who are not privately interested, though members of the city, may be received. But where corporators, as such, have private interest, as to be free of toll, rights of common, &c., these being really and substantially interested in the event of the cause are no witnesses. 1 Peake's Ev. 145, 146, 156, and authorities there cited; and see the late case of Doe ex dem. Mayor, &c. of Stafford v. Tooth, 3 Younge & Jerv. 19, where it was held that a member of a corporation is not a competent witness to sustain the claim of the corporation, even though he release his interest in the subject-matter of the suit. In the case of Weller v. Governors, &c. of Foundling Hospital, cited in Peake's Evid., it is to be observed the witnesses were admitted because they were mere trustees, and had not the least personal interest.

Member of corporation.

In Norden v. Williamson, 1 Taunt. 378, it was decided, that if the defendant and plaintiff be willing, the defendant may have the plaintiff as a witness.

Commoner.

One commoner may be a witness for another claiming common, because in effect it charges himself; but if the prescription be, that all the inhabitants of such a place ought to have common there, one of the inhabitants cannot be a witness to prove that another of the said inhabitants ought to have common there, because he would, in effect, swear to give himself right of common there. 1 Lord Raym. 731; Anscomb v. Shore, 1 Taunt. 261; 1 Phill. Ev. 57, 7 ed.

Judge or juror being a witness.

It seems agreed that it is no exception against a person's giving evidence either for or against a prisoner, that he is one of the judges or jurors who are to try him. 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 17. But where a juror is called upon to give his evidence, he ought to give it upon oath openly in court, and not be examined privately by his companions. Bac. Abr. Evid. (A. 2); 3 Black. Com. 375; Kel. 12.

Prosecutor in general.

Prosecutor—The testimony of the party injured is constantly admitted in evidence, because he cannot in any future suit derive any advantage from the record of a conviction. Thus a prosecutor is competent upon an indictment for tearing a promissory note payable to him—Stra. 595; 1 Sid. 431; or for extorting a bond from him—7 Mod. 118; or for usury, although he was the borrower of the money, and has not repaid it—Id.; or for cheating him by false pretences—Salk. 286; or for fraudulently procuring him to execute a cognovit—1 Sid. 431; Ventr. 4; Stark. Evid. Part IV. 772.

In perjury.

It was formerly thought that, on an indictment for perjury, the party aggrieved by the deposition alleged to be false could not be sworn on the trial, even though the record of conviction could not be given in evidence in his favour on any future occasion. 2 Stra. 1043. 1104; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 118. But it seems now to be fully settled that the party in question is competent, even without showing that he has satisfied the judgment obtained against him in the cause in which the perjury was committed, for the conviction of the defendant founded on his evidence is no ground of subsequent relief even in equity. 1 Chit. C. L. 597; 2 Stra. 1230; 4 Burr. 2255; 4 East, 572. But on an indictment for perjury, on the statute of Elizabeth, the person injured cannot be a witness, because the statute gives him 10*l.* Bull. N. P. 289; see Perjury, Vol. V. p. 63.

In forgery.

9 Geo. 4, c. 32.

Formerly, on a prosecution for forgery, the party by whom an instrument purported to be made was not admitted to prove it forged, if he would either be liable to be sued upon the instrument (supposing it genuine), or be thereby deprived of a legal claim against another. R. v. Russell, 1 Leach, 8; Watts's case, Hard. 331; 3 Salk. 172; Rhodes's case, 2 Stra. 728; Caffy's case, 2 East's P. C. 995. But now, by stat. 9 Geo. IV., c. 32, s. 2, on any prosecution by indictment or information either at common law, or by virtue of any statute against any person for forging any deed, writing, instrument, or other matter whatever, or for uttering any deed, writing, instrument, or other matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged, or for being accessory before or after the fact to any such offence, if the same be a felony, or for aiding, abetting, or counselling the commission of any such offence, if the same be a misdemeanor, no person shall be deemed to be an incompetent witness in support of any such prosecution by reason of any interest which such person may have or be supposed to have in respect of such deed, writing, instrument, or other matter. And before this act, as we have already seen, ante, 70, upon an indictment for forging a bank note, the cashier whose name was forged was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. R. v. Newland, 1 Leach, 350. So on an indictment for forging the indorsement of the payee of a bill of exchange, the payee, who was to have paid the produce in discharge of a debt due from the drawer, but who in fact never received the bill, was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. R. v. Sponsonby, 1 Leach, 374; and see Id. 57. So on an indictment against the payee of a bill for uttering a forged acceptance, the first indorsee was held a competent witness, though he has only advanced part of the amount of the bill, and though he releases, during the trial, the person in whose name the acceptance is forged. R. v. Mott, R. & R. C. C. 435. So on an indictment for forging a receipt, the person whose name was forged, having first recovered the money from the defendant, was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. R. v. Wells, Bull. N. P. 289. So on an indictment for forging the name of a person to a power of attorney to sell out stock, where the forgery was detected before the stock was transferred, the person whose name was forged was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. R. v. Wait, 1 Bing. 121; R. & R. C. C. 505, S. C. In R. v. Fauntleroy, a lady who had been a holder of stock in the public funds which had been sold out under a power of attorney in which her name was forged became a competent witness to prove the forgery, on proof that the stock had been replaced in her name, and on production of a release for the dividends thereon (from the time it was sold out) executed by her to the bank of England, who were the prosecutors, and her legal claim against whom would have been destroyed had the instrument proved genuine. The prisoner was convicted and executed. 2 Bing. 413; 1 C. & P. 421, S. C.

WITNESSES' COMPETENCY.

Interest.

Lord Raymond, in R. v. Fox, 1 Str. 652, admitted the prosecutor to be a witness on an indictment for an assault, although he had laid a wager that he should convict the defendant; and the reason seems to be, not because the witness had made the wager at a time when public justice became interested in his testimony, but because it would be against public policy to allow a witness, by any such gratuitous act, to exclude himself from giving evidence. In addition to this it may be observed, that the wager would now probably be considered absolutely void, on a principle of public policy, as tending to produce an improper bias on the mind of the witness, and therefore as directly prejudicial to the administration of justice. 1 Phill. Ev. 139, 7th ed.; and see 4 Car. & P. 7.

Witness laying a wager.

In many criminal cases, from the extreme necessity of the thing, interested persons are allowed as witnesses. As, where the owner prosecutes an indictment of felony for stolen goods, he is concerned in interest, for he will be entitled to restitution, and yet his evidence is admitted; so, on removing an indictment by certiorari from the sessions to the K. B., though the prosecutor in that case, if the defendant be convicted, is entitled to his costs, yet he is allowed as a witness. Q. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 193: see Stark. Evid. Part IV. p. 753. It is the constant practice, on an indictment for robbery, to admit the evidence of the person who has been robbed. 1 Phill. Evid. 120. And the same evidence is admitted in prosecutions for a cheat. Parris's case, 1 Ventr. 42; 2 Sid. 431, S. C.; or for perjury. R. v. Broughton, 2 Stra. 1230.

Witness from necessity.

But upon an indictment founded on the statutes of forcible entry, whereby justices are empowered to give restitution of the possession of the lands entered upon by force, or holden by force, to the respective tenants thereof, the tenant whose land has been entered upon or withholden by force is not a competent witness. R. v. Williams, 9 B. & Cres. 549; and R. v. Beavan, Ry. & M. C. N. P. 242.

In forcible entry.

Persons who become interested in the common course of business, and who alone can possibly have knowledge of a fact, may be called as witnesses to prove it. Thus persons who have been agents employed to pay money may prove such payment. So an agent may prove the terms of a contract, though he be to derive a profit from it; and this upon the ground of necessity. If such evidence were not admitted, the facts would be incapable of proof. Bull. N. P. 289; Dixon v. Cooper, 3 Wils. 40,

Agents, &c.

WITNESSES' COMPETENCY.

B. N. P. 289; 1 Phill. 129; and see as to a surety of collector of rates, Middleton v. Frost, 4 C. & P. 16. But though agents and brokers are competent to prove a sale or contract, they are not competent to prove the contract properly executed in an action against the principal for their negligence. Gevers v. Mainwaring, Holt, C. N. P. 139; M'Braine v. Fortune, 3 Camp. 317; and see 1 Phill. Evid. 130. 56, 7th ed.; 8 B. & Cres. 408.

Person entitled to reward.

In general a person entitled to a reward upon the conviction of the defendant is not thereby rendered incompetent to give evidence against him—R. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 193—whether the reward be given by statute, by proclamation, or by a private person. 1 Ph. Ev. 119. 127; and see R. v. Williams, 9 B. & Cres. 556.

Informers.

Informers—By the common law, informers, who are entitled under penal statutes to part of a penalty, are not competent witnesses. R. v. Tilly, 1 Str. 115; 1 Phill. Evid. 125, 7th ed., and authorities there cited. But by the particular provisions or policy of several acts of parliament, they may be admitted. Where a statute can receive no execution unless a party interested be a witness, there he must be allowed, says Ch. B. Gilbert; for the statute must not be rendered ineffectual by the impossibility of proof. 1 Phill. Evid. 125. Thus by stat. 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 8, against bribery at elections, the legislature, in giving an indemnity and discharge to any person offending against the act who shall discover any other offender so that he may be committed, must also have intended that he should be competent to give evidence at the trial; and therefore in an action for penalties he has been admitted. Bush v. Railling, Say, 289; Mead v. Robinson, Willes, 425; Heward v. Shipley, 4 East, 182; 1 Phill. Evid. 118. So, on a prosecution for penalties under stat. 9 Anne, c. 14, s. 5, the loser of money at cards may prove his loss. R. v. Luckup, Willes, 425, n. (c); 1 Phill. Evid. 126: and see R. v. Williams, 9 B. & Cres. 557; and post, Gaming, Vol. II. p. 977. There are also various other similar provisions, which will be found collected under different titles of offences in this work.

In prosecutions for all offences punishable on summary conviction under the 7th and 8th Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 64, the evidence of the party aggrieved is admissible. See post, Vol. III. p. 553.

If it be a matter of discretion in the Court whether it will inflict a penalty, the witness would not, it seems, be incompetent though he should be entitled to a moiety of the penalty when inflicted. See R. v. Cole, 1 Esp. Rep. 217; Peake Rep. 217; sed vid. R. v. Blackmore, 1 Esp. Rep. 95.

Inhabitants.

Inhabitants—Inhabitants of a county, or other district, are competent witnesses to charge their own county or parish, but not vice versa. R. v. St. Lawrence, 1 Burr. 588. Accordingly it has been held that a party who was liable to a county tax for the support of the suit was incompetent. Shropshire v. Staffordshire, 1 Sid. 192. So, in settlement cases, a rated inhabitant formerly was incompetent to give evidence for his own parish as to the pauper's place of settlement. R. v. Prosser, 4 T. R. 19; and see R. v. South Lynn, 5 T. R. 664; R. v. Kirdford, 2 East, 561.

Inhabitants made competent in cer- tain cases. 54 Geo. 3, c. 170.

But by stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 9, the competency of an inhabitant in these matters is established; and that act enacts "that no inhabitant or person rated or liable to be rated to any rates or cesses of any district, parish, township, or hamlet, or wholly or in part maintained or supported thereby, or executing or holding any office thereof or therein, shall, before any court or person or persons whatsoever, be deemed and taken to be by reason thereof an incompetent witness for or against such district, parish, township, or hamlet, in any matter relating to such rates or cesses; or to the boundary between such district, parish, township, or hamlet, and any adjoining district, parish, township, or hamlet; or to any order of removal to or from such district, parish, township, or hamlet; or the settlement of any pauper in such district, parish, township, or hamlet; or touching any bastards chargeable or likely to become chargeable to such district, parish, township, or hamlet; or the recovery of any sum or sums for the charges or maintenance of such bastards; or the election or appointment of any officer or officers, or the allowance of the accounts of any officer or officers, of any such district, parish, township, or hamlet; any law, usage, statute, or custom to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

WITNESSES'
COMPETENCY.

Inhabitants.

In a late case, this act was expounded liberally, it having been held therein, that on an indictment for the non-repair of a road or bridge on a liability ratione tenuræ, parishioners were admissible witnesses for the prosecution, within the scope of this act. R. v. Hayman, 1 M. & M. C.N.P. 401.

In the case of R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & Ald. 66, which is apparently against the above decision in R. v. Hayman, the question of competency arose only incidentally, and the point was not discussed. 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 402.

In the case of Hendebourcke v. Langston, id. 402, n. it was considered that the inhabitants of a parish are admissible witnesses in an action by the surveyor of the highways against his predecessor, for penalties for not accounting, and for the balance of moneys in his hands. (a)

In an action of trespass against the overseers of a township, where the principal point was, whether the lands in question were vested in the overseers under a local act of parliament, the Court of Exchequer determined that a rated inhabitant of the township was not an incompetent witness on the part of the defendants, although the land in question, if vested in the defendants, would be vested in trust for the township, and in aid of the poor-rates. Meredith v. Gilpin, 6 Price, 146.

Upon a question, whether a certain manor were in the county of S., it was ruled, that any person of the county, if he were not within the hundred where the manor was, might be a witness; for as to the county taxes, every hundred pays its proportion; but as to hundreds there are particular charges. The county of Salop v. the county of Stafford, 1 Sid. 192; Peake's Evid. 156, 157.

Upon an issue, whether a tenement is situate within a chapelry, a witness occupying rateable property in the chapelry is competent to prove the affirmative. Marsden v. Stanfield, 1 M. & R. 669; 7 B. & C. 815, S. C.; et per Bayley, J.:—"The issue in this case is, whether a messuage and lands in the occupation of the defendant were within the chapelry of Littleborough. The question for our consideration is, whether a person having rateable property in the chapelry was a competent witness to prove that it was. The burden of making out that the witness is incompetent lies on the party who makes the objection. It is not stated in this case what are the chapelry burdens, whether it maintains its own poor, roads, or chapel. The witness would not be competent to increase the number of contributors, unless the burden to be borne would thereby be subject to be increased, or his rights damaged by such increase. But the increase of the number of contributors would not only lessen each man's share of the chapel rates, but would lessen also each man's privilege within the chapel by increasing the number of claimants for seats and sepulture; so that there may, perhaps, viewing the case in this manner, be a balance of

(a) It was held, however, in the same case, 10 B. & Cres. 546, that the surveyor could not maintain his action against the late surveyor for the balance remaining in his hands until his accounts have been settled and allowed or disallowed in the manner pointed out by the 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 48.

WITNESSES'
COMPETENCY:

Inhabitants.

advantage and disadvantage; and we are bound to see that an interest does exist before we can say that this witness was incompetent. Now Rex v. Kirdford, 2 East, 559, establishes that the fact of a party being the occupier of rateable property in a parish, but for which he is not rated, does not make him an incompetent witness. Here the case only states that the witness was an occupier of rateable property. Upon the authority of that case, therefore, I am of opinion that he was competent at common law. I also think that this is a very plain case, according to the true construction of the 54 Geo. III., c. 170, s. 9, which enacts that no person rated or liable to be rated to any rates or cesses of any district, &c., shall, before any court, be deemed and taken to be, by reason thereof, an incompetent witness for or against such district in any matter relating to such rates or cesses, or to the boundary between such district and any adjoining district. The substantial question in this case is, whether the owner of certain property was liable to contribute to the rates of the chapelry. That is a question relating to the rates or cesses of the district; and the question whether certain land be situate within the chapelry was a matter relating to the boundary between the district and the adjoining district." See Rhodes v. Ainsworth, 1 B. & Ald. 87; 2 Stark. 215, S. C.

Their declarations.

In R. v. Hardwicke, 11 East, 578, it was decided, in an appeal against the removal of a pauper, that the declarations of a rated inhabitant of either parish concerning the facts in issue are admissible in evidence—not only against himself, but also against the other rated inhabitants of his parish, on the ground that the rated inhabitants are the parties directly and immediately interested in the event of the proceeding, although the appeal is entered in the names of the parish officers. And it is not necessary to make such declarations evidence, that he should first be called as a witness and refuse to be examined. R. v. Whitley Lower, 1 M. & S. 636. It is to be observed these decisions were before the passing of the 54 Geo. III. c. 170.

In the above case of R. v. Hardwicke, Bayley, J. said, "I do not think that in ordinary cases magistrates should give any weight to mere declarations of this kind; though there may be occasions when the declaration of such a party would have great weight, as if a person having gained a settlement by hiring and service were to become a lunatic, the master refuses to be examined, you may in that case give evidence of his declaration."

Non-repair of bridges.

By stat. 1 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 13, the inhabitants of a county may be witnesses upon trial of indictments for not repairing bridges, where the question is whether the county or a private person shall repair. Even before this act it was considered they were admissible. R. v. Carpenter, 2 Show. 47: see also the case of R. v. Hayman, and Hendebourcke v. Langston, ante, 75; and ante, title Bridges, Vol. I.

Actions against hundred.

In actions against the hundred for injuries occasioned by riots, &c. the inhabitants are made competent witnesses for plaintiff or defendant, by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 31, s. 5; post, Hundred, Vol. III.; 4 B. & C. 913; 7 D. & R. 385, S. C.

churchwardens.

In actions against churchwardens or overseers of a parish for the recovery of money mispent by them, inhabitants of the parish, who do not receive alms or any gift out of the parochial collection, are made competent witnesses by stat. 3 Will. III., c. 11, s. 12. See Poor, Vol. IV.

Highway and turnpike acts.

By the highway act (13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 68), in all cases, whether of a criminal or civil nature, the surveyor of the parish, township, or place is a competent witness in all matters relative to the execution of that act, though his salary may arise in part from the forfeitures and penalties thereby inflicted. And by sect. 76 any inhabitant of the parish, township, or place in which an offence shall be committed contrary to that act shall be a competent witness notwithstanding his inhabitation. See post, Vol. III. p. 77.

WITNESSES'
COMPETENCY.

A similar provision to the last will also be found in the 137th sect. of the 3d Geo. IV. c. 126, relative to turnpike roads. And by sect. 59 collectors are made competent witnesses; and by stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 95, s. 84, no person shall be deemed incompetent to give evidence by reason of being a trustee or commissioner, or a mortgagee or creditor of the tolls, or a farmer, lessee, or collector of such tolls, or a treasurer, or clerk, or surveyor, or other officer under such act. See post, Vol. III. p. 209. 211.

Formerly, where penalties were given to the use of the poor, for the benefit and exoneration of the parish or other place, the inhabitants were incompetent; but such incompetency is now removed where the penalty does not exceed 20*l.*, by stat. 27 Geo. III. c. 29, which enacts, that where pecuniary penalties, or parts thereof, are given to the poor, the inhabitant of any place may be a competent witness to prove an offence, though the place may be benefited by the conviction of the offender, provided the penalty does not exceed 20*l.* See R. v. Davis, 6 T. R. 177.

Though the penalty exceed 20*l.*, if the witness paid no rates he would be competent. R. v. Cottrell, 2 Chit. Rep. 487.

Co-defendants—In general one of several defendants standing jointly indicted is not a competent witness for his fellows; and this even though he has suffered judgment by default before their trial. R. v. Lafone, 5 Esp. 155; sed vide 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 18. But where there is no case for the jury against one party, the Court may in its discretion allow of his acquittal in any state of the trial before the reply, in order that he may be examined as a witness—2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 98; but he is not entitled to demand an acquittal until all the other evidence for the defendants is concluded. Emmett v. Butler, 7 Taunt. 607; Wright v. Palin, R. & M. C. N. P. 128. Persons implicated but not joined as defendants are good witnesses, though their credit may be questioned. See 1 Hale, 305; Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 375, 376.

Co-defendants.

Accomplices—It hath been long settled that it is no exception against a witness that he hath confessed himself guilty of the same crime, if he hath not been indicted for it; for if no accomplices were to be admitted as witnesses, it would be generally impossible to find evidence to convict the greatest offenders. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 94; 1 Phill. En. 36, 37, 7 ed.

Accomplices.*

But though accomplices are received as witnesses, their testimony ought to be received by a jury with a sober degree of jealousy and precaution; for, on their own confession, they stand contaminated with guilt, and, in the hope of lessening their own infamy, will be often tempted to throw as much guilt as possible upon the prisoner. They may also, in some cases, be entitled to rewards on the prisoner's conviction, and in all cases expect to earn a pardon: and as fear is usually their motive in giving evidence, the same feeling may tempt them to exaggerate their statement, for the purpose of destroying their former associate, and securing themselves against his vengeance. See 1 Phill. Evid. 37, 7 ed.

And it is generally considered necessary, in order to induce the jury to credit an accomplice's testimony, to give other circumstances confirmatory of at least some of the leading circumstances of his story, from which the jury may be able to presume that he has told the truth as to the rest. See Rudd's case, Cowp. 336; R. v. Birkett, Russ. & R. C. C. 251.

However, if the testimony of an accomplice be confirmed so far as his testimony relates to one prisoner, but is not confirmed with respect to another prisoner, the latter may be convicted on the testimony of the accom-

* See Approver, ante, Vol. I.; 1 Phill. Evid. 36, 37. It is not a matter of course to admit an accomplice as evidence, but a motion is made to the Court by the counsel for the prosecution, which the Court may grant or refuse as in their discretion will best answer the purposes of justice.

WITNESSES' COMPETENCY.

plice, if the jury deem him worthy of credit. R. v. Dawber and others, 3 Stark. R. 34, and n.

The practice, therefore, is to advise the jury to regard the evidence of an accomplice only so far as he may be confirmed, in some part of his narrative, by unimpeachable testimony. It is not necessary that he should be confirmed in every circumstance which he details in evidence; for there would be no occasion to use him at all as a witness, if his narrative could be completely proved by other evidence free from all suspicion. Nor need it appear, from the confirmatory evidence, that he speaks truth with respect to all the prisoners, or with respect to the share which each had in the transaction. But if the jury are satisfied that he speaks truth in some material parts of his testimony, in which they see unimpeachable evidence brought to confirm him, that is a ground for them to believe that he also speaks truly in other parts and with regard to the other prisoners, as to whom there may be no confirmation. By Thomson B. in R. v. Swallow and others, Reports of the Trials at York, Jan. 1813, on special commission, p. 3, 17, 50, 150, 165, 201; 1 Phill. Ev. 41, 42.

If the jury find the prisoner guilty on the single testimony even of a credible accomplice, the Court will sometimes recommend him to mercy. 1 Leach, 466; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 96.

Incompetency from interest removed.

Incompetency from Interest removed—Persons interested may in this, as in other cases be made witnesses by a release; as the supposed obligor in a bond may be a witness when released by the obligee (Dr. Dodd's case, 1 Leach, 155), or the acceptor of a bill when released by the holder. Taylor's case, 1 Leach, 214; and see R. v. Peacock, R. & R. C. C. 278; R. v. Mott, id. 435.

It is said, that if the party who calls a witness tender a release to him, and he refuse to accept it, he may notwithstanding be afterwards examined on the trial. 1 Doug. 139; 3 T. R. 27; Peake's Evid. 174.

(3.) Credibility of Witnesses.

Credibility of witness.

Who a credible witness.

Exceptions to the credit of a witness are such as do not at all disable him from being sworn, but merely affect the degree of belief which the jury will give to his evidence. 2 Hale, 276; 1 Burr. 414; 11 East, 209. In many cases a person may be credible where he is not competent, and competent where he is not credible. 1 Burr. 417. Where, in acts of parliament directing convictions before justices, this word "credible" is introduced, it bears no precise or legal signification; but the magistrate is to judge, like the jury on a trial, how far the witness is sufficiently to be believed to warrant the conviction. 1 Burr. 418; Peake's Evid. 124, &c.; 1 Chitt. C. L. 589.

Who not so.

There may be a variety of circumstances which will shake the credit of a witness, arising from his interest, his integrity, good character, veracity, or knowledge of the facts he swears to. It would be of little or no utility to inquire minutely into these, and state who is or is not a credible witness, for that question must depend on the peculiar facts laid before the Court and jury, and must be decided accordingly. We have, in the preceding inquiries, seen many instances where the credit of a witness may be shaken, notwithstanding his competency. See also Arch. Crim. Pl. & Evid. 104.

Doubts as to credibility to be in favour of witness.

Where there is any doubt as to the competency or incompetency of a witness, the judges are more inclined to turn that doubt to a question of the witness's credibility. See ante, 70.

Evidence not allowed to prove good character of witness when not attacked.

Where the character of a witness has not been attacked, no evidence can be admitted in support of it. Bishop of Durham v. Blackett, 1 Campb. 207. But evidence of the conduct of deceased witnesses when it has been attacked may be received, to attach credit to their testimony, or to destroy its effect. Wright ex d. Clymer v. Littler, infra, cited by Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., 1 Campb. 210. On an indictment for an assault with intent to commit a rape, where the prosecutrix was cross-examined as to crimes committed by her several years before the alleged offence, it was considered evidence might be adduced to show that her character had since been good. R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. N. P. 241; post, Rape, Vol. V. p. 260.

WITNESSES'
CREDIBILITY.

It often happens that the character of the subscribing witnesses to deeds and other written instruments is the subject of inquiry; and upon this point the following cases have occurred. If the subscribing witnesses to a will be dead, evidence given of what was said by one of them, being then in bed of the illness of which he died, thereby impeaching the validity of the will, inasmuch as he declared it was a forgery, was admitted, and afterwards decided to have been rightly admitted; such evidence being given, not to prove the forgery, but to impeach the credit of the subscribing witness. Wright d. Clymer v. Littler, 3 Burr. 1244. And evidence of the character of the subscribing witnesses may be admitted, if an imputation be cast upon the will. Doe dem. Stephenson v. Walker, 3 Esp. 284. And upon the authority of the preceding case, evidence was admitted that the subscribing witness to a bond had in his last moments begged pardon of Heaven for having been concerned in forging it. Per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., in Aveson v. Ld. Kinnaird, 6 East, 195, ante, 34:—These decisions were upon the principle that, if the subscribing witness could have been produced upon the trial, to prove his handwriting, as he might have been cross-examined, so a party may prove his declaration of the fact in contradiction to the presumption of a due execution of the bond from the proof of his handwriting as a subscribing witness. S. C.

Subscribing witness.

It has been agreed that the evidence given by a witness at one trial cannot, in the ordinary course of justice, be made use of against a defendant on the death of such witness at another trial. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 12. See Melcu v. Andrews, 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 336.

Witness varying his evidence at different trials.

But it hath been admitted that, in order to show a variance in the evidence, a deposition taken by a witness before a justice of the peace may at the prisoner's desire be read at the trial, in order to take off the credit of the witness, by showing a variance between such depositions and the evidence given in court.

And for the same reason it seems agreed, that where a witness at one trial varies from his own evidence at another trial, in relation to the same matter, such variance may also be given in evidence to invalidate his testimony at the second trial. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 9; and see R. v. Oldroyd, R. & R. C. C. 88, where it was considered the prosecutor had a right to call for and adduce such evidence.

But nothing shall be admitted as evidence of what was done at another trial till the record of that trial be produced.

When a witness in support of a prosecution has been examined in chief, and has not been asked in cross-examination as to any declarations made by him, or acts done by him, to procure persons corruptly to give evidence in support of the prosecution, it is not competent to the party accused to examine witnesses in his defence to prove such declarations or acts, without first calling back such witness examined in chief, to be examined or cross-examined as to the fact whether he ever made such declarations or did such acts. See The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & B. 311.

If a witness be called on the part of the plaintiff or prosecutor, and give evidence against the defendant or accused; and if, after the cross-examination of such witness, the defendant's or accused's counsel discover that the witness so examined has corrupted or endeavoured to corrupt another person to give false testimony in such cause, the counsel for the defendant or accused is not permitted to give evidence of such corrupt act of such witness without calling back such witness. 2 Brod. & B. 311.

Lord C. J. Abbott, in delivering the opinion of the judges in that case, said, "The usual practice is this: if it be intended to bring the credit of a witness into question, by proof of any thing that he may have said or declared touching the cause, the witness is first asked upon cross-examination whether or no he has said or declared that which is intended to be proved." 2 Brod. & B. 313.

WITNESSES' CREDIBILITY.

Varying evidence at different trials.

Upon the question whether a witness being asked in cross-examination, if in conversation with C. D. he had not informed him "that he was to be one of the witnesses against the defendant," and being re-examined he stated what induced him to mention to C. D. what he had so told him, and the counsel further proposed to ask as to the whole conversation between him and C. D. so far only as related to his being one of the witnesses, the judges (eight against one, Best, J., diss.), were of opinion that the witness having fully and unambiguously explained his motive for so stating, the re-examination could not proceed to the extent sought; and a distinction was made between a conversation with a witness and a party to the suit or prosecution, where the declarations of the latter would be evidence against him, and a conversation with a third party would not. In the latter case, as the conversation of the witness could only become evidence, as it might affect his character and credit with respect to antecedent declarations, or the motives under which he made them, when once every thing which constituted the motive and inducement, and which might show the party's meaning if the declarations were laid before the court, all beyond is irrelevant and incompetent. 2 Brod. & B. 294. 298.

If a witness examined in chief on the part of the plaintiff, being asked whether he remembers a quarrel taking place between A. and B., answers that he has heard of a quarrel between them, but does not know the cause of it, and such witness is not asked, upon his cross-examination, whether he has or has not made a declaration stated in the question touching the cause of a quarrel, the counsel for the defendant cannot, in order to prove such witness's knowledge of the cause of the quarrel, afterwards examine a witness to prove that the other witness has made such a declaration to him touching the cause of such quarrel. 2 Brod. & B. 299.

In order to discredit a witness by proof of a contradictory statement, it is not enough to ask him generally whether he has ever made such a statement; but particulars must be specified to him. Angus v. Smith, 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 473; et per Tindal, C. J., S. C.:—"I understand the rule to be, that before you can contradict a witness, by showing he has at some other time said something inconsistent with his present evidence, you must ask him as to the time, place, and person involved in the supposed contradiction. It is not enough to ask him the general question, whether he has ever said so and so, because it may frequently happen that upon the general question he may not remember having so said, whereas when his attention is challenged to particular circumstances and occasions, he may recollect and explain what he has formerly said."

Where witness has before said or done something contrary to his evidence.

Where a witness swears to a particular fact, a letter written by him, contradicting in effect his testimony upon that fact, may be given in evidence to impeach his credit, the letter being first regularly proved. The witness stated that a certain school, of which he was usher, had been duly conducted as to morals: a letter was then offered in evidence on the other side, and received as such, formerly written by the witness, whilst usher, to a boy then at the school, containing much immoral matter. De Sailly v. Morgan, 2 Esp. 692.

Party not allowed to discredit his own witness.

If a witness is called on the part of the plaintiff who swears what is palpably false, it would be extremely hard if the plaintiff's case should be for that reason sacrificed. The party is not to set up so much of a witness's testimony as makes for him, and to reject or disprove such part as is of a contrary tendency. But if a witness is called, and gives evidence against the party calling him, I think he may be contradicted by other witnesses on the same side, and that in this manner his evidence may be entirely repudiated. Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in Alexander v. Gibson, 2 Campb. 556.

WITNESSES' CREDIBILITY.

But a party will not be permitted, by general evidence, to discredit his own witness; for this would enable him to destroy the testimony of the witness if he spoke against him, and to make him a good witness if he spoke for him. Bull. N. P. 297; Ewer v. Ambrose, 3 B. & C. 749.

The meaning of the rule is, that a party cannot prove his own witness to be of such a general bad character as would make him unworthy of credit. But if a witness suddenly, and without any previous intimation to the party calling him, give evidence against that party, another witness may be called to disprove the truth of that evidence. Therefore where the question was whether the defendant's servant, who had been to sell a horse, had warranted him sound, he swore, on being called by the plaintiff, that he had not given any warranty; and Lord Ellenborough allowed the plaintiff to call another witness to prove, that at the time of the sale he had expressly warranted its soundness. There can be no rule of law, said Lord Ellenborough, by which the truth on such an occasion is to be shut out, and justice perverted. Alexander v. Gibson, 2 Campb. 555; Lowe v. Joliffe, 1 W. Black, 365; 3 B. & Cres. 749; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 309.

A witness's credit may be impeached only by general accounts of his character, and not by proofs of particular facts. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 20; B. N. P. 296. Therefore if a witness, on being questioned whether he has not been guilty of a felony or of some infamous offence, deny the charge, the party against whom the witness has been called will not be allowed to prove the truth of the charge. Rookwood's case, 4 St. Tr. 693; and see Sharp v. Scoging, Holt's N. P. C. 541; R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 149.

Witness's credit to be only impeached by general accounts of his character.

It has been doubted whether, to corroborate the testimony of the witness whose credit has been impeached, evidence is admissible to prove that the witness affirmed the same thing before, on other occasions. Gilb. Evid. 150; B. N. P. 294. Mr. Phillips lays it down that it is not admissible. 1 Phill. Ev. 293; citing De Sailly v. Morgan, 2 Esp. N. P. C. 691; Christian v. Coombe, 2 Esp. N. P. C. 489.

Supporting credit by proof of witness having sworn to same facts.

The mere opinion of a party, unsupported by reasons and facts, as to his not believing a witness on his oath, is entitled to no consideration: when otherwise, see ante, 35.

Mere opinion as to credit not allowed.

A witness cannot be cross-examined as to a fact wholly irrelevant to the matter in issue, if answered affirmatively, for the purpose of discrediting his testimony if he answered in the negative, by calling other witnesses to disprove what he said. Spencely v. De Willott, 7 East, 108; 1 Phill. Evid. 272.

Witness cannot be asked an irrelevant question.

If the witness answer such an irrelevant question before it is disallowed or withdrawn, his answer is conclusive, and evidence cannot be afterwards admitted to contradict him. Harris v. Tippet, 2 Campb. 638.

It would be an irrelevant question to inquire of a witness, in cross-examination, whether he had not attempted to dissuade another witness examined on the opposite side from being present at the trial. Harris v. Tippet, 2 Campb. 637. And the rule laid down in this case seems particularly illustrated by the following case, which occurred at Monmouth Lent Ass. 1811. One Yewin was indicted for stealing wheat. The principal evidence against him was a boy of the name of Thomas, his apprentice. Lawrence, J., allowed the prisoner's counsel to ask Thomas, in cross-examination, whether he had not been charged with robbing his master, and whether he had not afterwards said he would be revenged of him, and would soon fix him in Monmouth gaol. He denied both. The prisoner's counsel then proposed to prove, that he had been charged with robbing his master, and had spoken the words imputed to him. Lawrence, J., ruled, that his answer must be taken as to the former; but that as the words were material to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, evidence might be adduced that they were spoken by the witness. 2 Camp. 638.

WITNESSES.

(4.) How Witnesses compelled to attend.

Having inquired as to the requisite number of witnesses, and as to who are competent and credible, so that the prosecutor and defendant may decide on what witnesses they should respectively call to attend the trial, we will now proceed to point out the mode of compelling such attendance.

Compulsory process.

The compulsory means to bring in witnesses are of two kinds. First, By process of subpœna issued in the king's name by the justices, or others, where the trial is to be, for disobedience to which the person served with the process is liable to an attachment. R. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585. Secondly, Which is the more ordinary and more effectual means (in criminal cases), the justices that take the examination of the person accused, and the information of the witnesses, may at that time, or at any time after and before the trial, bind over the witnesses to appear at the sessions; and in case of their refusal to be bound over, may commit them for a contempt—2 Hale, 282; Bennet and Wife v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1; 1 Phill. Ev. 8; et vide post, 95; and in case of their neglect to attend, in pursuance of the recognizance, such recognizance will be forfeited, and may be put in force. See Recognizance, Vol. V.

Writs of subpœna issued by the clerk of the peace, or the clerk of assize, at assize, were formerly compulsory only within the county where they are granted; and therefore, if the witness lived beyond its limits, application must have been made to the Crown Office, from whence it might issue to any part of England. Cro. C. C. 9, 21. But by the 45 Geo. III., c. 92, s. 3, a writ of subpœna issued from any court of competent jurisdiction to compel the attendance of the witness will be equally valid if served in any part of the united kingdom, and the disobedience of it is punishable in the King's Bench. See further, post, 95.

In general, magistrates have power to compel the attendance of witnesses for the purpose of a summary trial of an offence amounting to a felony or misdemeanor, and this by virtue of the magistrate's commission. Dalt, J., 164. But it is questionable whether they have such power in an offence of less degree created by statute, unless it is specially given by statute, which is usually the case, by the statute creating the offence, and which frequently imposes a penalty on the witness's refusal to attend.

At sessions.

The 38 Geo. III. c. 52, s. 4, provides that the courts of oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery, may issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses on a trial of an indictment, found by the grand jury of the county, for offences committed in the county of a city or town corporate.

The subpœna when sued out is to be regularly served on the witness; and as only four witnesses can be included in one writ of subpœna, several writs are frequently necessary. In order to save expense, it is settled that service of a ticket containing the substance of the writ will be as effectual as service of the writ itself. Goodwin v. West, Cro. Car. 522. In such case, however, the writ ought to be shown. The writ or ticket should be served personally on the witness—Smelt v. Witmill, 2 Str. 1054; and in a reasonable time before the day of trial, that he may suffer the less inconvenience; from the attendance on the court. Hammond v. Stewart, 1 Str. 509; 1 Phill. Evid. 4. See Tidd, 9th ed., 806.

A subpœna in court on the day of trial would do. Indeed it has been considered that a person who is present in court, when called as a witness, is bound to be sworn, and to give his evidence in a criminal case, although he has not been subpœnaed. R. v. Sadler, 4 C. & P. 218.

*Subpœna duces

If there be any papers in the witness's hands, which it is desirable for the party to obtain, a special clause should be inserted in the writ called a duces tecum, by which he will be commanded to attend with the documents in question, and which he ought to obey, even where, from any confidential relation, the court will not, on his appearance, compel him to produce them. 9 East, 485; 6 Esp. Rep. 115. It is no excuse that the legal custody of the instrument belongs to another, if it be in the actual possession of the witness. 1 Camp. 14, 180, n.; 6 Esp. 116; Holt, C. N. P. 239. If the witness, instead of bringing the papers, &c. required, deliver them to the opposite party, by whom they are withheld, the Court will allow secondary evidence of the contents of them to be given, without a notice to produce the originals. 4 Esp. 255; see R. v. Hunter, 4 Cur. & P. 128.

The subpoena may be obtained from the Crown Office, or from the clerk of the peace, or clerk of assize of the Court in which the defendant is to be tried. It is usual and best to obtain it from the Crown Office.

The name of the witness, though not in the original subpoena, may be inserted therein at any time, if he has been regularly served with a copy. Per Gibbs, C. J., Wakefield v. Gall, Holt, C. N. P. 526.

Where a witness is a prisoner in execution for debt, he must be brought up by habeas corpus ad testificandum, to give his evidence—1 Phill. Evid. 5; and so where he is confined on board a ship—3 Burr. 1440; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 72. An affidavit of his being a material witness, and willing to attend, must be made to obtain this writ, as to the form of which, and making the application for it, see 1 Chit. C. L. 611; Tidd's Pract. 9th ed. 809; post, Habeas Corpus, Vol. II.

When a witness resides abroad, or is about to leave the country before trial, he may, by the consent of both parties, be examined on interrogatories: in the former case, before commissioners approved by both of them; and in the latter before a judge in chambers. See 1 Chit. C. L. 612. In proceedings for offences alleged to have been committed in the East or West Indies by persons holding official situations there, witnesses may be examined before the magistrates there on writs of mandamus. 13 Geo. III. c. 63; 42 Geo. III. c. 85, s. 2, 3. Where a party, in a case where consent is requisite, refuses to grant it, the Court will put off the trial, to give time for the attendance of the witnesses. 1 Cowp. 174, Tidd; 9 ed. 813.

In criminal proceedings, the only effectual punishment, and mode of securing the future attendance of the witness, is by attachment for the contempt of the Court from which the process was originally awarded, or by indictment—8 T. R. 585, 1 Stra. 510; 1 Chit. C. L. 614; and this whether the cause was called on or not. 3 B. & A. 598. It is not settled whether magistrates, at sessions, &c. have authority to issue an attachment; and the usual way of punishment in such a case is by indictment or proceeding on the recognizance, if there was one. When the subpoena was not issued out of the Crown Office, the Court issuing the same may, upon proof to their satisfaction of the due service of the subpoena, transmit a certificate of the default of the witness under the seal of the Court, or under the hand of one of the justices thereof, to the Court of King's Bench, which Court is empowered to punish the witness the same as if he had disobeyed a subpoena issued out of that Court. 8 T. R. 585; 45 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 3.

The witness, if taken upon an attachment for his contempt, may be detained till he has given evidence on the trial of the offender, and then he may be set at liberty. Id. n. (a.) The Court will not grant, it seems, an attachment unless the subpoena was personally served, and sufficient expenses tendered if the witness were so poor he could not attend without them. See 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173. It seems, however, the witness on a criminal prosecution is not entitled to have his expenses first paid. R. v. Cooke, 1 Cur. & P. 321. See Tidd, 9th ed. 806; ante, Costs, Vol. I.

An indictment would lie for conspiring to prevent the attendance of a witness. 2 East, 364.

As to the consequences of not attending on civil proceedings, see Tidd, 9th ed. 807, 8; 5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 12.

By stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 140, after reciting that "Whereas writs of habeas corpus have been frequently awarded by the judges of H. M.'s Courts of Record at Westminster, for bringing persons detained in custody under civil or criminal process before magistrates or courts of record, as well for trial as for examination touching matters depending before such magistrates or courts respectively; but doubts have arisen whether such judges have power to award writs of habeas corpus for bringing persons detained as aforesaid before courts-martial, commissioners of bankrupt, commissioners for auditing the public accounts, or other commissioners acting under commission or warrant from H. M.; and whereas it is expedient to make provision for bringing prisoners before such courts-martial or commissioners for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned," enacts, that any judge of the Courts at Westminster may award a writ of habeas corpus to bring any prisoner, in any gaol in England, before a court-martial, commissioners of bankrupt, commissioners for auditing the public accounts, or other commissioners acting by virtue of any commission or warrant from H. The application for a habeas under this act should be made to a judge out of Court. 2 M. & S. 582; Tidd, 9th ed. 809.

By stat. 44 Geo. III. c. 102, any judge of the Courts of K. B. or C. P. of England and Ireland respectively, or any baron of the Court of Exchequer of the degree of the coif in England, or any justice of O. and T. or gaol delivery, being such judge or baron aforesaid, may, at his discretion, award a writ of habeas corpus for bringing any prisoner detained in any gaol or prison before any of the said Courts, or any sitting of Nisi Prius, or before any other court of record, to be there examined as a witness, and to testify the truth before such Courts, or any other grand, petit, or other jury, in any causes or matters, civil or criminal, whatsoever, which now are or hereafter shall be depending or to be inquired into or determined in any of the said Courts. See Tidd, 9th ed. 809, 810.

And see the 45 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 3, 4, for compelling the attendance of witnesses to give evidence in criminal prosecutions in every part of Great Britain.

In Exp. Griffiths, 5 B. & A. 730, the Court of K. B. granted a mandamus to the warden of the Fleet to take the body of a debtor confined there before a magistrate, to be examined from time to time respecting a charge of felony or misdemeanor.

(5.) The Examination of Witnesses.

Who to begin.

Who to begin—He who affirms the matter in issue, whether prosecutor or defendant, ought to begin to give evidence. Co. Lit. 36.

Examination on the voir dire.

Examination on voir dire—Previous to admitting a witness to be sworn, it is often necessary to examine him upon what is termed the voir dire; (a) which is done for the purpose of ascertaining whether there be any objection in law to his being admitted as a witness upon the case before the Court; and it has been said, that a party who is cognizant of the interest of the witness at the time when he is called is bound to make his objection in the first instance. Turner v. Pearte, 1 T. R. 720; 2 Stark. Evid. 757. In general, however, when it appears, in the course of the examination, that the witness is incompetent to give evidence by reason of some civil disability, or by reason of his being directly interested in the event of the cause at issue, or if it is discovered during any part of a trial that a witness is interested, his evidence will be struck out. 1 Phill. Ev. 123; 1 T. R. 720; Wightw. 64; 2 Camp. 14.

If the objection on the score of interest be not taken previous to the examination in chief, the witness cannot be cross-examined as to the contents of a written paper not produced, which might have been done had the objection been taken in the first instance. 2 Camp. 14.

(a) Voir dire, veritatem dicere, is when it is prayed upon a trial at law that a witness be sworn, that he shall true answer make to all such questions as the Court shall demand of him. 3 Black. Com. 332.

Where the witness himself is examined on the voir dire, he may be asked as to the contents of a written instrument, without a notice to produce, or without producing it, though, if the witness produces the instrument on which the objection is founded, it ought to be read. Butler v. Carrer, 2 Stark. R. 434. Accordingly, in the case of R. v. Gisburn, 15 East, 57, on a question of settlement, when the point for the consideration of the Court of King's Bench was, whether a witness, who, after having admitted on his examination upon the voir dire that he was the occupier of a cottage in the appellant township of the annual value of 25s., but that he had never been charged with or paid any public rate or tax in that township, could be examined without producing the rate to show that he was not rated; the Court held that the witness was competent upon the voir dire, that what he answered must be taken for better or worse, and that if he should answer falsely he might be indicted for perjury.

So also it is a rule, that when the objection to the competency of a witness arises from his answer to a question on the voir dire, he may in the same way do away with the objection, and restore his competency by parol: but if the fact appears in any other way, as if the witness is proved by other evidence to have been a bankrupt, in such case it is necessary to answer the objection by the best evidence, that is, by production of the certificate itself. By Ld. Kenyon, in Botham v. Swingler, 1 Esp. 164; The Butchers' Company v. Jones, 1 Esp. 162, S. P.

Examination on Oath—In general no one can be examined as a witness in any criminal proceeding except upon oath—1 Leach, 110; Peake, 11, a. 7 Chit. C. L. 615; and a peer is within this rule. 3 Keb. 61; 1 Salk. 278, post, Beers, Vol. V. A witness brought into Court merely for the purpose of producing a written instrument to be proved by another witness need not be sworn. 1 Phill. Evid. 216; Roscoe, 75; R. v. Brooke, 2 Stark. 472.

Examination on oath.

The oath usually administered to a witness is called a corporal oath. 3 Inst. 165; post, Oaths, Vol. V. The form used at the assizes or sessions is for the clerk of arraigns or of the peace to desire the witness to take the book in his hand, and, when that is done, to say to him, "The evidence you shall give between our sovereign lord the king and the prisoner at the bar shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; so help you God:" upon which the witness kisses the book, and thereby appeals to heaven for the truth of what he is about to disclose. 2 Hale, 279; 1 Chit. C. L. 616. See form, post, 104, (No. 1.)

Form of oath.

But it is not absolutely necessary to use this form if the witness has a conscientious objection to the mode, or professes a religion which binds him by a different obligation. Thus Jews are sworn on the writings of Moses. 2 Keb. 314; 2 Stra. 821. Mahometans are sworn on the Koran; and persons of other religions according to the form prescribed for that purpose by the religion they profess. B. N. P. 292. Christians are sworn with their hats off—Jews, with their hats on. At the O. B. Dec. Sess. 1804, Erpune, a native of China, being examined as a witness before Graham, B., on an indictment against Ann Alsley and Thomas Gunn for felony, was sworn according to the form of Courts of China, viz. by holding a saucer in his hand, which he dashed to pieces at the conclusion of the oath, believing, as he stated, that God would cause his body to be cracked, as he cracked that saucer, if he did not tell the truth. Sess. Pap. 1804 and 1805, p. 62; Peake's Evid. 138, n., 5th ed. In like manner a Scotch covenantor has been permitted to swear by holding up his hand. Mildrone's case, 1 Leach, 412. For oaths are to be administered to all persons according to their own opinions, and as it most affects their consciences.

A witness may be asked, after he is sworn, whether he considers the oath he has taken obligatory upon his conscience; but if he answer in the affirmative, his answer is conclusive, and he cannot further be asked whether there be any other mode of swearing more binding upon his conscience than that which has been used. The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 284. The more correct and proper way, however, is, to ask the witness,

TION OF.

Affirmations of Quakers and

before he is sworn, whether he considers the oath he is about to take obligatory upon his conscience. 2 Brod. & Bing. 284. It is no objection after trial that a Jew was sworn upon the gospel. Sells v. Hoare, 3 Brod. & B. 292; 7 Moore, 36, S. C. And as to what questions may be put to a witness respecting his religious principles, see ante, 64.

Formerly a Quaker was not allowed to give in his evidence on his affirmation, nor was a Moravian on his declaration; but now, by the stat. 9 Geo. IV., c. 32, s. 1, a Quaker or Moravian required to give evidence in a criminal case may, instead of taking an oath in the usual form, be permitted to take a solemn affirmation or declaration in these words: "I, A. B., do solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm," which has the same force and effect in all courts of justice and other places where by law an oath is required, as if such Quaker or Moravian had taken an oath in the usual form. And if any person making such affirmation or declaration shall be convicted of having wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirmed or declared any matter or thing which, if the same had been sworn in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, every such offender shall be subject to the same pains, penalties, and forfeitures, to which persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject.

Presence of Prisoner and Witnesses—The witness must deliver in his evidence in the presence of the prisoner—2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 1; Bac. Ab. Evid. (E); 1 T. R. 125; 2 T. R. 18, especially on trials affecting the prisoner's life: Id.

Before the examination commences, the crown may demand that the witnesses should retire, in order that each may be questioned in the absence of the others. Fost. 47; Bac. Ab. Evid. (E). And the same order will be made on the request of the defendant, but as a matter of indulgence and not of right. 4 Harg. St. Tr. 754; R. v. Vaughan, Holt, 689. It seems questionable whether the Court can in either case compel the witness to retire. Talf. Dick. Sess. 377. By the uniform practice of all Courts, the attorneys on both sides, whose presence is necessary to the conduct of the case or defence, are exempted from the general rule; and it is usual and reasonable to extend the same indulgence to witnesses who are merely to prove matters of form, to medical witnesses, and witnesses of character. Id.

Who may examine.

Who may examine—The witness may be examined by the counsel for the party calling him; or, if none be retained, by the judge or presiding magistrate, who may even recall a witness at any stage of the inquiry before the verdict or conviction. See R. v. Remnant, R. & R. C. C. 136.

It is usual for only one counsel to examine the same witness; but where the junior counsel is embarrassed in his examination, his leader may step in to his assistance, and proceed in questioning the witness. Doe v. Roe, 2 Camp. 280.

The prisoner himself may examine or cross-examine the witnesses.

If an improper question be put, the counsel on the other side should immediately interpose, and object to it. If a witness be asked whether a certain representation was made, the opposite counsel may interpose, and ask him whether the representation in question were by parol or in writing; and if the latter, the writing must be produced. The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 292.

Deaf and dumb
witnesses.

Deaf and dumb Witness—We have already seen where such a witness may be sworn, ante, 64. Though the mode of examining a deaf and dumb witness by means of signs made with the fingers is a mode receivable even in capital cases, yet when the witness can write, it seems it would be better to make him write his answers to the questions put to him. Morrison v. Lennard, 3 C. & P. 127; per Best, C. J.

What questions should be put.

Questions to be put—The rules before laid down as to what should be proved and the degree and kind of proof that should be adduced, will show what questions should in general be put to the witness. If the probable answer to the question would be matter not legally admissible in evidence, such question should be objected to by the opposite party.

WITNESSES,
EXAMINA-TION OF.

Leading Questions—On the examination in chief, the counsel will not be allowed to ask leading questions, that is, such as from their nature instruct the witness what he is to say in reply. Peake Evid. 206; 1 Phill. Ev. 268, 7 ed. But, at the same time, he must state his question in so forcible a way, that it may be perfectly understood, and no material circumstance omitted. And if the witness appears desirous of concealing the truth in order to favour the defendant, the Court will allow a latitude bordering on cross-examination to the prosecutor's counsel. 1 Phill. Evid. 269, 7 ed.; Clarke v. Saffery, R. & M., N. P. C. 126. So in the examination of a witness to contradict the testimony of another, leading questions may be allowed, as whether a written instrument contained certain matter; because otherwise it would be difficult to bring them to any direct contradiction. 1 Camp. 44.

Leading questions.

Questions to which the answer yes or no would not be conclusive are not in general objectionable. Thus a witness called to prove that A. and B. are partners may be asked whether A. has interfered in the business of B. Nicholls v. Dowding, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 81. For though he may have interfered, he may not be a partner. And see 1 Stark. 100; 2 Stark. 128. To identify a person whom the witness has already described, the person may be pointed out to him, and he may be asked in direct terms, if that be not the person he meant. R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 116. Where a witness swears to a certain fact, and another witness is called for the purpose of contradicting him, the latter may be asked in direct terms, whether that fact ever took place. 1 Camp. 43.

Leading questions are allowable in cross-examination, though in general such questions make the answers open to observation. Peake, Evid. 206; 2 Stark. Evid. 132; 1 Chit. C. L. 622.

Irrelevant Questions—No question can be put to a witness, the probable answer to which would have nothing to do with the matter in issue. This rule has already been noticed, ante, 20, 21.

Irrelevant questions.

Questions which need not be answered—Questions tending to expose the witness to criminal accusation, punishment, or penalty, need not be answered. See 1 Phill. Evid. 276, 7 ed.; 1 Chit. C. L. 620; 3 Camp. 210; 8 Ves. 405. A witness may object to answer a question which he thinks will tend to his crimination, though the answer would not lead to an immediate conclusion of guilt. Cates v. Hardacre, 3 Taunt. 424. On an information against several persons for executing an office of trust without taking the oaths, the Court refused a motion for leave to inspect such books kept by the defendants in which they had entered their elections, receipts, and disbursements, as it would have compelled them to give evidence against themselves in a criminal prosecution. R. v. Mead, 2 Ld. Raym. 927; R. v. Worsingham, 1 Ld. Raym. 705; R. v. Cornelius, 2 Str. 1210. And a similar motion was refused, on an information against two overseers for making a rate without the concurrence of the churchwardens. R. v. Lee, cited 1 Wils. 240; 1 Phill. Ev. 7 ed. 432; and see ante, 83, as to other books.

leged from being answered.

A witness is not compellable to say whether he published a particular paper if the contents be libellous. R. v. Barber, 1 Stra. 444.

Upon an appeal against an order of bastardy, a person is not bound to declare whether he is the father of a bastard child. R. v. St. Mary, Nottingham, 13 East, 58, n.

It has been settled that a witness is not compellable to answer questions, the answer to which would probably be degrading to his character. Cooke's Case, How. St. Trials, 334; Friend's case, 13 id. 17; Laver's case, 16

Questions tending

id. 161. And it has been even held a witness is protected from admitting his commission of an offence although he has received a pardon. R. v. Reading, 2 St. Tri. 822; R. v. Earl of Shaftesbury, 3 St. Tri. 439. But this has been of late much doubted; and in Cundell v. Pratt, 3 C. & P. 240, n. (b), 1 M. & M. 108, S. C., Best, C. J., said, "I for one, till I hear it decided by the House of Lords, shall not go so far as to say that the witness is protected by the rules of law from answering such questions as might disparage her character. I shall only prevent your asking such questions as may subject witnesses to a prosecution for crime; but not such questions as merely tend to degrade them in their character."

In the case of Frost v. Holloway, sutt. K. B. after H. T., 1818, Mr. Scarlett, in cross-examining a witness, asked him, whether he had not been tried for theft at Reading. The witness refused to answer, and appealed to Lord Ellenborough, whether he was bound to answer such a question. Lord Ellenborough said, "If you do not answer the question, I will commit you;" adding, "You shall not be compelled to say whether you were guilty or not." 1 Phill. Ev. 283, 7 ed. notis. And in R. v. Edwards, 4 T. R. 440, where a witness had been guilty of an infamous crime and had been punished for it, it was considered he might be asked whether he had not undergone the punishment: and see R. v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589; R. v. Edwards, 4 T. R. 440; where it was held a witness might be asked whether he had stood in the pillory: and see 3 Esp. 94; 2 Camp. 637; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 169; and further, post, Kaye, Vol. V.

forfeiture.

A witness is also privileged from answering any question, the answer to which might subject him to a forfeiture of his estate; and it should seem a party is not bound to answer so as to subject himself to any forfeiture of interest. 1 Phill. Ev. 7 ed.; Lambert v. Rogers, 2 Mer. 489.

Tending to an action or debt.

A witness was not, it seems, formerly compellable to answer any question which might subject him to a civil action, or tend to charge himself with a debt. Pending the impeachment, Lord Melville's cases, 29 How. State Trials, 746. 763; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 279; Cobbell's Parliamentary Debates, vol. 6. p. 167.

46 Geo. III. c. 27.

But now, by stat. 46 Geo. III., c. 27, intituled "An act to declare the law with respect to witnesses refusing to answer;" reciting, "Whereas doubts have arisen whether a witness can by law refuse to answer a question relevant to the matter in issue, the answering of which has no tendency to accuse himself, or to expose him to any penalty or forfeiture, but the answering of which may establish or tend to establish that he owes a debt, or is otherwise subject to a civil suit at the instance of H. M., or of some other person or persons;" it is therefore declared and enacted, "that a witness cannot by law refuse to answer a question relevant to the matter in issue, the answering of which has no tendency to accuse him, or to expose him to penalty or forfeiture of any nature whatever, by reason only, or on the sole ground, that the answering of such question may establish or tend to establish that he owes a debt, or is otherwise subject to a civil suit, either at the instance of H. M., or of any other person or persons."

But the right which the parties to a suit have to refuse answering any question is not in any degree affected by this statute; and therefore, on a question of settlement, a rated parishioner is not compellable by the adverse parish to give evidence, as he is directly interested as party to the appeal, and does not come within the words or meaning of the act. R. v. Woburn, 10 East, 395; and see R. v. Hardwick, 11 East, 579; 1 M. & S. 636. These cases were decided before the 54 Geo. III., c. 170, ante, 74.

Tending to compromise rights.

In general a person is not bound to produce documents, the publication of which may compromise his own or his principal's rights; as to produce for inspection title-deeds or the like. Therefore, on a question of settlement, a mortgagee, a rated inhabitant of the appellant parish, subpoenaed by the respondent parish, is not compellable, under a subpoena duces

tecum, to produce the title deeds of his mortgagor. R. v. Upper Bodington, 4 D. & R. M. C. 233. It was also there held, that his attorney could not be allowed to produce an abstract of the deeds, or to give parol evidence of their contents. And see Copeland v. Watts, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 95.

WITNESSES,

We have already seen what confidential communications to attorneys and counsel are privileged from being divulged in a court, as also certain other communications relating to matters of state, &c., ante, 68 to 70.

If a witness chooses to answer questions which he need not, the answer is conclusive. Watson's Trial by Gurney, 288; Rose v. Blackmore, 1 R. & M. C. N. P. 383.

It has been said, that if a witness answer any question on a matter rendering himself liable to forfeiture or punishment, he cannot afterwards claim his privilege, but must answer throughout. East v. Chapman, 1 M. & M. 47; 2 C. & P. 570, S. C., cor. Abbott, C. J.

What Answers are Evidence—Our preceding inquiries as to what should be proved, and the degree and kind of proof to be adduced, will be here applicable, ante, 19 to 36.

are evidence.

Memorandum to refresh Memory—A witness cannot be permitted to read his evidence—5 St. Tr. 445; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 168; but he may refresh his memory from any book or paper made by himself at the time, or shortly after the occurrence of the facts to which it relates, provided he can afterwards swear to the fact from his own recollection; though if he can only maintain its truth by finding it entered there, the papers must be themselves given in evidence. Doe v. Perkins, 3 T. R. 749; 8 East, 289; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 168. Sed quære if the document need be made by himself. See Id. and Henry v. Lee, 2 Chit. Rep. 124, where it was considered that it need not; but according to the later case of Meagoe v. Simmons, 3 C. & P. 75; 1 M. & M. 121, S. C., cor. Lord Tenterden, C. J., it must be. It has been said he may look at papers, in order to refresh his memory, which were not written by himself, but which he has repeatedly inspected—Burrough v. Martin, 2 Camp. 112; but he will not be allowed to refresh his memory with a copy of a paper made by himself six months after he wrote the original, though the original is proved to be so covered with figures as to be unintelligible. Jones v. Stroud, 2 C. & P. 196. The memorandum being unstamped will be no objection to his looking at it to refresh his memory. 4 Esp. 213; 8 B. & C. 14.

Refreshing memory.

It has been said that it is necessary he should swear absolutely to the fact which he is called to prove, and that a mere persuasion and belief will not be sufficient proof for the consideration of a jury. 1 Dyer, 53, b, n. 15; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 167. But it is now settled that there are cases in which a belief will be available in evidence. Thus a subscribing witness to a deed may swear that he has totally forgotten that he signed it; but on being shown his signature, he may depose that he believes he saw the execution, and the Court will be satisfied with his answer. 3 Wils. 427; 1 Chit. C. L. 617.

If the counsel for defendant, in cross-examination, put a paper into the witness's hand to refresh his memory, the opposite counsel has a right to look at it, without being bound to read it in evidence; and the opposite counsel may also ask the witness when it was written, without being bound to put it in. R. v. Marsden, 2 C. & P. 603, cor. Tenterden, C. J.

Cross-examination—When the examination in chief of the witness is concluded, but not before (Colledge's case, 8 How. St. Tr. 592), the prisoner or his counsel has power to cross-examine him as to every part of his testimony. 4 Bla. Com. 355.

Cross-examination.

When once a witness is sworn, though he give no evidence for the party calling him, he may be cross-examined. Phillips v. Mer, 1 Esp.

N. P. C. 857. However, circumstances may arise which will not give this right to the opposite counsel; as where the plaintiff's counsel called "Captain S.," and "Capt. Hugh S." answered and was sworn; and the plaintiff's counsel, after asking him a few questions, ascertained that it was "Capt. Francis S." whom they meant to examine. This was held not to give the other side a right to cross-examine Capt. Hugh S., as he was only examined by mistake. Clifford v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 16; 1 M. & M. 113, S. C.

If the prisoner is not assisted by an advocate, it is the duty of the Court to ask any questions which they think may tend to his benefit. 1 Chit. C. L. 407. 621.

When not advisable to cross-examine.

If the witness tell the whole truth, a cross-examination may be dangerous, as it may have the effect of rendering his story more circumstantial, and impressing the jury with a stronger opinion of its truth. It is better, in such a case, either not to cross-examine him at all, or to confine the questions to his credibility, by impugning his means of knowledge, his disinterestedness, his integrity, or his veracity. If the witness tell only part of the truth, then the opposite counsel, if the residue be favourable to his client, will immediately proceed to cross-examine him as to it; but if unfavourable, the counsel will either refrain altogether from cross-examining him, or will confine his questions to the witness's credibility, as above mentioned. If, on the other hand, the evidence of the witness be false, then the whole force of the cross-examination must be directed to his credibility; and afterwards the truth may be proved by other witnesses. Arch. C. Pl. & Evid. 116, 117.

What questions
may be put.

With respect to what questions may be put to a witness on cross-examination, the practice appears rather confused; insomuch that no general rule can be well laid down on the subject. Certain it is the opposite party is allowed greater latitude in the cross-examination than the party examining in chief.

Thus leading questions may be asked, though, indeed, the witness must not have put to him the very words he is to echo back again. Peake's Evid. 206; R. v. Hardy, 20 How. St. Tri. 755.

And the questions must not assume facts to have been proved, or that particular answers have been given contrary to the facts. Stark. Evid. Part II., 132; 4 Esp. 74. In strictness a witness cannot be asked if at a former trial he swore differently from what he is now swearing; but an examined copy of the record of the former trial, or at least the Nisi Prius record (if the cause has been tried at Nisi Prius) should be proved—Barnes, 449; 2 Stark. 364; and then it should be proved that the witness swore at that trial, either by having it read from the judge's notes, or proved upon oath from the notes or recollection of any person who was present at the time. 3 Taunt. 262; 12 Mod. 318; Gilb. Ev. 68, 69. So it is not allowable on cross-examination, in the statement of a question to a witness, to represent the contents of a letter, and to ask him whether he wrote a letter to any person with such contents, or contents to the like effect, without having first shown the witness the letter, and having asked him whether he wrote that letter. Queen's case, 2 B. & B. 286. And if, on cross-examination, a witness admits a letter to be of his handwriting, he cannot be questioned by counsel whether statements such as the counsel may suggest are contained in it; but the whole letter must be read. Id. 288. In the ordinary course of proceeding, such letter must be read as part of the cross-examining counsel's case. The Court, however, may permit it to be read at an earlier period if the counsel suggest that he wishes to have the letter read immediately, in order to found certain questions upon it; considering it, however, as part of the evidence of the counsel proposing such a course, and subject to the consequences thereof. Id.

The questions must be either relevant and pertinent to the matter in issue, or calculated to elicit the witness's title to credit. In order to try a witness's credit, facts may be supposed, apparently connected with the cause, which have no real existence except in the imagination of the counsel. Peake's Evid. 206; 1 Phill. Evid. 276; Stark. Evid. Part II. Cross, 135. But how far questions may be asked for the same purpose, which have no seeming tendency to bear on the point in issue, appears still to be dubious. It is, perhaps, better left to the discretion of the Court, in each particular case, to prevent the counsel from too great a digression from the matter in issue. 1 Chit. C. L. 622. At all events a witness cannot be cross-examined as to any distinct collateral fact for the purpose of afterwards impeaching his testimony by contradicting him. Stark. Evid. Part II. 134; 7 East, 108; 2 Stark. 156. And should such questions be put and answered, evidence cannot be afterwards adduced for the purpose of contradiction. 2 Camp. 638; 2 Stark. 156; 1 Chit. C. L. 622, 2nd edition.

WITNESSES,
TION OF.

If a witness, when examined in chief as to the occurrence of a fact, answer that he does not remember it, the counsel on the opposite side cannot give evidence of a former declaration by the witness of the fact having occurred, unless he have in cross-examination questioned the witness as to such declaration; for the fact may have occurred, and the witness have formerly declared his knowledge of it, and yet he may not recollect it at the time of his examination. The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 299.

Re-examination—When the cross-examination is completed, the counsel by whom the witness was called is entitled to re-examine him for the purpose of explaining any matter into which confusion has been introduced by the questions of the adversary; but he can only put questions on matters touched on or referred to in the cross-examination. Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 382. If a witness, upon his cross-examination, admit his having used certain expressions in a conversation with a person not a party to the cause, the opposite counsel, in re-examining the witness, is confined to such questions as may elicit the meaning of the expressions, and the motives of the witness for using them. But where a witness deposes to certain expressions being used by a party to the cause, the counsel for that party is entitled to re-examine the witness as to the whole of the conversation in which the expressions occurred; because the expressions are given in evidence in such a case as an admission of the party, and the whole of the admission should be taken together. 2 Brod. & Bing. 294.

Where any new matter occurs to the counsel who called the witness, which he considers important, and respecting which he is not allowed to examine the witness, he may request the Court to do so; and the Court generally complies with such request. Sometimes, indeed, where the counsel has omitted to bring forward some merely formal proof, the Court will allow it to be afterwards adduced, though the case has been closed.

Evidence for Defendant—After the prosecutor has concluded his case, the defendant, if not entitled to an acquittal on some point of law, is called on to give in his evidence for the defence. See the course of a trial, post, Trial, Sessions, Vol. V. The mode of conducting such evidence may be collected from the preceding observations: and see particularly some points relative to discrediting the testimony of witnesses, ante, 78 to 81; and as to evidence of character, ante, 35, 36.

fendant.

Evidence in reply—When the defendant's evidence is closed, the prosecutor's counsel may offer any evidence in reply which is strictly applicable to the defence, and which could form no part of his original case. Thus he may give specific contradictions to the witnesses on their denials on cross-examination, he may call persons to swear that they would not believe the witnesses on their oaths, and may apply an answer to any matter of excuse which the prisoner has set up, and which he could not anticipate; but he must not make a new case, or seek to fill up the chasms

V. Expenses of Witnesses and their Privileges during Attendance.

Expenses of witnesses.

The expenses of witnesses, and as to how far they may refuse attendance without a payment of them, have been already considered, ante, Costs, Vol. I., and see ante, 83.

Privileges of.

Witnesses, whether subpoenaed, or bound by recognizance to appear, or appearing voluntarily after being asked to do so (1 H. Bla. 636; 8 T. R. 536), are protected from arrest whilst attending the Court, not only on the day mentioned in the subpoena, &c., but also on every day of the same sittings, assizes, or sessions, until the cause is tried. They are also privileged in like manner, during a reasonable time, before and after the trial, whilst coming to or returning from the place where the sittings, assizes, or sessions are held. 2 Bla. Rep. 1113; 2 Stra. 986; Tidd, 9th ed., 195 to 198; 1 Chit. C. L. 614. If a witness under these circumstances be arrested, the Court out of which the subpoena issued, or the judge of the Court in which the cause is to be or has been tried, will, upon application, order him to be discharged. Id.

VI. Bill of Exceptions and Demurrer to Evidence.

Bill of exceptions.

When an exception is made by any party to a witness, which is overruled by the Court, the opposite side have, in civil proceedings, the power of appealing from his decision by tendering a bill of exceptions. But this practice does not obtain in criminal proceedings—at all events in treason and felony. 1 Chit. C. L. 622. See Tidd, 9th ed. 862; Rosc. 109.

Demurrer to evidence.

A demurrer to evidence is a proceeding by which the judges are called upon to determine what the law is upon certain facts which are brought forward in evidence, and is therefore analogous to a demurrer upon facts alleged in pleading. 2 H. Bla. 205; Tidd, 9th ed. 865, 6.—It can be of very little use and is rarely ever adopted in criminal proceedings, since the crown is never compellable to join in demurrer; but the judge directs the jury to find a special verdict, the legal effect of which the Court will afterwards determine. 5 Co. 104; 2 H. Bla. 187.

VII. Forms.

(No. 1.)

Subpoena to give evidence at the sessions.

William the fourth, by the grace of God, of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, king, defender of the faith. To A. B., C. D., and E. F., greeting. We command you and every of you, that all business being laid aside, and all excuses whatsoever ceasing, you do in your proper persons appear before our justices assigned to keep the peace in our county of _____, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, at the [general quarter sessions of the peace] to be holden at _____, in and for the said county, on _____, the _____ day of _____, at the hour of ten in the forenoon of the same day, to testify the truth, and give evidence on behalf of [the inhabitants of the parish of _____, in the said county,] against [A. O., in a case of bastardy.] And this you are in no wise to omit, nor any of you to omit, on pain of one hundred pounds. Witness _____, the _____ day of _____, in the _____ year of our reign.

There may be four witnesses put in one subpoena. 2 Cowp. R. 846; 1 Phill. Ev. 3, ante, 82.

(No. 2.)

To Mr. A. W.

By virtue of his majesty's writ of subpoena to you directed, and herewith shown to you, you are personally to be before his majesty's justices of the peace for the county of , at [the general quarter sessions of the peace] to be holden for the said county at , in the said county, on , the day of next, to testify the truth, and to give evidence on behalf of [the inhabitants of the parish of in the said county,] against [A. O., in a case of bastardy.] And this you are not to omit, upon pain of one hundred pounds. Dated this day of , in the year .

A subpoena ticket thereon.

By the Court,
C.

(No. 3.)

William the fourth, &c. [as in the common subpoena, ante, 92, to the words "to testify the truth," &c. and then proceed as follows:] And also that you, or one of you, do produce and show forth at the time and place aforesaid a certain [bill of exchange, purporting to bear date on, &c. and to be made and drawn by one upon and accepted by one , and whereby the said requested the said , two months after the date thereof, to pay to him the said , or his order, the sum of for value received,] then and there to testify and show, before the grand inquest, of all and singular those things which you or either of you know, or the said bill of exchange doth import, of and concerning a certain bill of indictment to be preferred, &c. (Proceed as in writ, ante, 92.)

Subpoena duces tecum at the sessions.

(No. 4.)

[Commencement as usual, post, Recognizance, Vol. V.]—The condition of this recognizance is such, that if the above bound A. W. shall personally appear at the next general quarter sessions of the peace (or at the next general assize) to be holden at , in and for the said county, and then and there give such evidence as he knoweth, upon [a bill of indictment to be exhibited by A. I., of , yeoman, to the grand jury, against A. O., late of in the said county, yeoman, for the feloniously taking and carrying away , the property of ;] and in case the said bill be found a true bill, then if the said A. W. shall then and there give evidence to the jurors that shall pass on the trial of the said A. O. upon the said bill of indictment, and not depart thence without leave of the Court, this recognizance to be void, otherwise of force.

Examinations by Justices before Trial. (a)

UNDER this title will be considered the mode in which an offence should be investigated by a magistrate on an accused party being brought before him before trial, previous to discharging, bailing, or committing such accused for trial.

As to the examinations of parties on the trial of an indictment, &c., see ante, 84 to 91; as to the examination of them on convictions, see ante, Convictions, Vol. I.

We will divide our considerations under this title as follows, viz.

I. Time and Place of Examination.

Time and place of examination.

The accused being arrested and in custody should as speedily as possible be taken before a justice of the peace of competent jurisdiction, to hear and be examined concerning the offence imputed to him. If it be late in the evening, and no justice of the peace sitting in his public capacity, it is not reasonable, unless in crimes of a very heinous nature, or other peculiar circumstances justify it, that a justice of the peace should be called upon to examine into the charge at such an unreasonable hour.

The examination may take place either in public or private. The justice may exclude an attorney or counsel if he likes—Cox v. Coleridge, 1 B. & Cres. 37; 2 D. & R. 86, S. C. See Daubney v. Cooper, 10 B. & Cres. 237; but not the accused. Dick, J., Examination. In many cases a private examination is desirable.

II. Examination of Witnesses against Accused.

Examination of accusers and witnesses.

The first step in the investigation as to the offence is to call for and examine the witnesses for the accusers.

The whole proceedings of the examination should be in the presence and hearing of the accused. 1 Leach, 202, 309, 500, 503, a. 5 Mod. 163; Rex v. Commins, 4 D. & R. M. C. 94.

The witness should be informed as to the purpose for which he is required to give evidence, or, in other words, that there is a person under charge against whom he is required to give evidence, otherwise the witness could not be punished for refusing to give evidence. Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R. M. C. 42.

Before administering the oath to the witness, the magistrate had better inquire who and what the witness is; and in some cases it would be as well shortly to ascertain what he intends to prove.

It seems that no witness ought to be examined who is not competent, according to the general rules of evidence, to give evidence, and as to which see ante, 63 to 78.

After the competency of the witness is ascertained, he should be sworn before the justice as in other cases; ante, 85. The following is the usual form of oath prescribed to be taken by a Christian: "You shall true answer make to such questions as shall be demanded of you; so help you God." As to the other forms, see ante, 85, 86.

The examination of the witness must be upon oath administered previous to the examination, or such examination will amount to nothing. Dalt, J., c. 164, s. 3; 1 Hale, 586; R. v. Kiddy, 4 D. & R. 734.

Even a peer must be examined on oath, and not upon his honour. Dick's Jus, Examination III.

If a magistrate committed a party without an oath made before him, he would be liable to an action if the prisoner were acquitted. 1 Hale, 586; Dalt, J., c. 164; 1 Leach, 202, 309; 2 T. R. 225, 231.

After the witness, being competent, is duly sworn, the magistrate proceeds to examine him. As to what questions may be asked, see ante, 86, 7. The witnesses should be examined before the accused, and he may cross-examine them; ante, 89, 90. They should, especially if they appear unwilling, be examined separately; and no one who has already been completely examined should be permitted, if it be possible to avoid it, to inform any other who has yet to be examined to what particulars his evidence has extended. Indeed, in most cases, it would be best and fairest to keep all the witnesses away but the one under examination. See Dalt, J., 165; Taylor v. Lawson, 3 C. & P. 543.

The answers to the examinations, as they are given, should be immediately put into writing in a plain and intelligible manner, and as near as possible in the very words used by the witness. Leach, 202, 209. See further, post, 98. See the form of taking such depositions of the witnesses, post, (No. 3.) The examination, when put into writing, is usually read over, and tendered to the witness for signature; and he should sign it, though he is not actually obliged to do so. Such signature is not absolutely necessary, but is only taken for precaution, and facility of future proof. See Fleming's case, 2 Leach, 854; Lambe's case, 2 Leach's C. C. 625; post, 98, 99.

III. Compelling Attendance of Witnesses.

We have already noticed the power of a magistrate to compel the attendance of a witness, ante, 82. If a person who it is supposed can give material evidence against the accused will not voluntarily attend, such attendance may be enforced by a summons issued against him by the justice, and directed to a constable. Such summons should be personally served on him, and the original shown to him at the same time; ante, 82. See the form, post, (No. 4.) He might be indicted for a disobedience to it, or the officer may, it seems, on a warrant against the witness, founded on his refusal to obey the summons, even enforce his attendance. 2 Hale, 282; 1 Chit. C. L. 76: sed vid. Shuttleworth, 8, 9.

Compelling attendance of witnesses.

It should seem that, upon the reasonable request of the defendant, the magistrate has a similar power to bring before him any witness who may be able to give material evidence on his behalf. 3 Inst. 79, 4 Bla. Com. 359.

On the application and notice of two inhabitants of a parish, a constable may be compelled to appear before a magistrate to enter into a recognizance to prosecute a party for keeping a disorderly house within the district. 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 5; and see 58 Geo. III., c. 70, s. 7, ante, Disorderly House, Vol. I., and see various other statutes throughout the titles of this work, compelling the attendance of witnesses.

IV. Witness refusing to answer.

It does not appear to be expressly decided whether a justice of the peace has jurisdiction to commit to prison a person who refuses to be examined on oath and give evidence as a witness touching a charge against a party then before the justice on examination. It seems clear he cannot be committed for such a refusal without there is a person charged with the offence, and without he (the witness) is apprised of that fact and the nature of the charge. Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R. M. C. 42 (a). But it seems he may be committed for such a refusal where there is a person charged, and he is apprised of that fact and the nature of the charge. At all events, it was decided in Bennett v. Watson, 3 Maule & S. 1., that a justice of the peace might commit a feme covert who was a material witness upon a charge of felony brought before him, and who refused to appear at the sessions to give evidence, or to find sureties for her appearance.

ANSWER.

A witness might, it seems, be indicted at common law for the refusal; ante, 91.

V. Examination of Accused.

Examination of accused.

If the slightest case even of suspicion be made out against the accused, he should be asked by the justice if he has any thing to say against the charge. He should not be put on his oath. 1 Hale, 585; 2 Hale, 52, 120, 284; Bull. N. P. 284; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 87. Where the examination of a prisoner before the magistrate purports to have been taken on oath, no evidence on the trial is admissible to show that in fact the examination was not on oath (b).

A prisoner, when taken on suspicion before a magistrate, is to be allowed to speak voluntarily, and give his account freely; and he ought not to be pressed to answer, examined, or questioned by the magistrate like a common witness: and in R. v. Wilson, Holt's N. P. C., 597, when a person had been so examined, his account was rejected by Richards, C. B., as inadmissible, though nothing like a threat or promise had been used. 1 Phill. Ev. 106.

If the offender, upon his examination before the justice of the peace, shall

(a) Et per Bayley, J. *—"The facts found in this case do not raise the question first submitted to our consideration, and therefore I shall studiously forbear giving any opinion upon that point. The question then is, whether the warrant of commitment given in evidence, or even the facts proved, de hors the commitment, show a sufficient cause for the imprisonment. At all events, before the commitment could be justified, it must distinctly appear that the party committed was apprised that there was some person under charge, against whom his evidence was required to be given. Now there is nothing either in or out of the warrant to enable me to say that there had been an information upon oath, or any person charged before the magistrate, so as to render it necessary that the plaintiff should be examined as a witness. The parol evidence upon this subject is very unsatisfactory; and on reading the warrant, I cannot collect that there had been an information on oath before the magistrate against any particular person under charge, for it contains merely a general assertion that the plaintiff was committed for refusing to give evidence touching a certain riot and disturbance committed. I am therefore of opinion that the defendant has not made out a sufficient justification of the alleged trespass."

(b) R. v. Smith and Hornage, York Spring Ass. 1816; 1 Stark. N. P. 242. This was an indictment for sacrilege alleged to have been committed in Sheffield church. The prosecutors tendered in evidence the examination of Hornage before the magistrate previous to his commitment. This was written under the following words, which, except as to the name, were printed:—"The examination of — Hornage, taken on oath before me," &c., and was under-signed by the magistrate. Upon the objection being taken, the examination was rejected because it purported to have been taken on oath; and LeBlanc, J., would not permit a witness to be examined for the purpose of showing that no oath had in fact been administered to the prisoner, saying that he could not allow that which had been sent in under the hand of a magistrate to be disputed.

confess the matter, it shall not be amiss that he subscribe his name or mark to it. Dalt. c. 164.

The examination of the prisoner, when reduced into writing, ought to be read over to him, and tendered to him for his signature: it ought to be subscribed also by the magistrate. See the 7 Geo. IV., c. 64, s. 2, infra. The signature, however, of the prisoner is not essentially necessary, but only for precaution and for the facility of future proof. In Lambe's case, 2 Leach, C. C. 625, it was held, that a written examination containing the prisoner's confession, taken by a committing magistrate, and read over to the prisoner, who admitted it to be true, but refused to sign it, would have been evidence at common law, and was not rendered inadmissible by any provision in stat. 1 & 2 and 2 & 3 Ph. & M. In this case the examination was rendered admissible by the prisoner acknowledging the truth of its contents; but if the prisoner had not made such admission, and had refused to sign it after it had been read over to him, it could not have been received in evidence. R. v. Telicote, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 483. 1 Phil. Evid. 115. 7 ed. Whether he be silent or not, it is best that the justice should put down in writing the facts exactly as they take place before him. See further as to this, infra, and as to the form, post, 104. (No. 3.)

See further as to confessions of the accused, and the care to be adopted by justices in taking and regarding them. Confession, Vol. I.

The accused may, if he choose, call witnesses, and they may be examined on oath, like the witnesses against him—Dalt. c. 165; and their examination should be put into writing, like the rest, 4 Bla. Com. 360.

If more than one person be accused, each of them should be examined apart from the rest, in order that an opportunity may be afforded of detecting any variations in their story. 1 Chit. C. L. 83.

VI. Taking Down Examination in Writing.

By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2—reciting “it is expedient to amend and extend the provisions of two acts, the first passed in the first and second years of the reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, entitled ‘An act appointing an order to justices of peace for the bailment of prisoners,’ and the second passed in the second and third years of the same reign, entitled ‘An act to take examination of prisoners suspected of manslaughter or felony’”—it is enacted, “that the two justices of the peace, before they shall admit to bail, and the justice or justices, before he or they shall commit to prison, any person arrested for felony, or on suspicion of felony, shall take the examination of such person, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or as much thereof as shall be material, into writing; and the two justices shall certify such bailment in writing; and every such justice shall have authority to bind, by recognizance, all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching any such felony, or suspicion of felony, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great session or sessions of the peace, at which the trial thereof is intended to be, then and there to prosecute, or give evidence against the party accused; and such justices and justice respectively shall subscribe all such examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizances, and deliver, or cause the same to be delivered, to the proper officer of the Court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the Court.”

Sect. 3 enacts, “that every justice of the peace before whom any person shall be taken on a charge of misdemeanor, or suspicion thereof, shall take the examination of the person charged, and the information upon oath of Sect. 4 relates to proceedings before coroners; see Coroner, Vol. I. 878.

Penalty on justices and coroners.

Sect. 5 enacts, "that if any justice or coroner shall offend in any thing contrary to the true intent and meaning of these provisions, the Court, to whose officer any such examination, information, evidence, bailment, recognizance, or inquisition, ought to have been delivered, shall, upon examination and proof of the offence, in a summary manner, set such fine upon every such justice or coroner as the Court shall think meet."

Provisions to apply to all justices
and coroners.

Sect. 6 enacts, "that all these provisions relating to justices and coroners shall apply to the justices and coroners not only of counties at large, but also of all other jurisdictions."

Observations.
Enactments.

Observations thereon—We have before had occasion to notice these provisions, ante, 53. The statute wholly repeals the statutes 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13, and 2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 10. No variation is made by these provisions in the law as it previously stood, as it regarded the taking down the examinations of witnesses and the accused in cases of felony; but in cases of misdemeanor it is otherwise, the new law placing the examinations respecting them on the same footing as those in felony. By the old law, the justice was not bound to take any examinations in writing in cases of misdemeanor. R. v. Paine, 1 Salk. 281; 1 Ld. Raym. 729; and 1 Burn J., 24 ed. 1004—5.

Depositions, how to be taken.

Depositions, how to be taken—The depositions should be taken down in writing in the very words used by the witness, or as near as possible in those words, and not in any law technicalities, or words not made use of by him. In almost all cases it would be infinitely better if the depositions were taken in the first person, and that if, after the introductory part, which generally concludes with the words "who saith as follows," the deposition proceeded to state, "I saw, &c., at such a time and place," instead of saying "he, this examinant," and "he, this deponent"—terms which many witnesses do not understand, and perhaps may conceive to mean some other person. Car. C. L. 13.

Only so much as is material need be taken down. See the words of the statute, ante, 97.

Great care should be observed in drawing up the formal parts of the depositions. Great numbers have of late been returned to the judges at assizes, which could not be admitted in evidence if the parties examined were dead, on account of formal errors.

The formal mode of taking down the examination is usually as follows: "The examination of A. B. of, &c., taken on oath, &c." But if the original information and evidence taken before the warrant was issued contain a complete case, it is the practice, after reswearing the accuser and witnesses, to read over their former depositions in their presence and that of the prisoner, and then to state to the latter that he is at liberty to ask the prosecutor and witnesses any questions respecting the charge against him; and, if he declines so doing, the examinations are not again gone over, but a fresh jurat is made to them; and this even before a fresh magistrate. The papers are then to be signed by the parties deposing, and also by the justice before whom they are taken; but these formalities are not absolutely requisite. 1 Leach, 458; 2 Leach, 854; 1 Chit. C. L. 80. The depositions at the police-office, Bow-street, are generally taken in a book, and, when completed, a fair copy is made while the parties wait, and then all of them, as well as the magistrate, again authenticate them by their signature. 1 Chit. C. L. 80.

The magistrate is to put all proper questions to the prisoner, taking down his statement in writing as he proceeds, and, after closing his examination, should read over the whole, and ask him if it be true; and if it contain any admission, should then require him to sign it, and should sign it himself. Dalt. J., 164. And an examination thus taken may be given in evidence against the prisoner on his trial—1 Hale, 586—though not against any other persons whom he may have incidentally accused. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 31 to 34; 1 Chit. C. L. 86.

We have already seen how far these depositions and examinations are admissible in evidence, ante, 53.

During the whole of the proceedings, it is prudent for the justice to have his clerk or other intelligent person present, in order that no difficulty might arise in proving the identity of the deposition in case of a refusal to subscribe it by a witness. Dick, J., Examination, III.

In R. v. Reed, M. & M. C. N. P. 401, it was held, that if the examination of a prisoner, taken in writing, is inadmissible, by reason of irregularity, parol evidence of what he said at the time of the examination may be received. See R. v. Hollingshead, 4 C. & P. 242, and notes.

It is presumed that what is stated on oath before a magistrate is taken down in writing, and therefore parol evidence of such statement is not receivable, unless it be first shown that it was not so taken down. Phillips v. Wimburn, 4 C. & P. 273.

VII. Obstructing the Examination, &c.

If any person obstructs the examination, or is guilty of any other contempt, by insulting the justice or otherwise, he may be committed by such justice to prison, and may be indicted. See 1 Stra. 421; 14 East, 85; 6 T. R. 62, 63, n. ante, Vol. I. p. 757: sed vide Pettit v. Addington, Peake, C. N. P. 62, where Lord Kenyon doubted the justice's power, as he was not sitting except as a ministerial officer. Such a commitment must be in writing—2 Marsh. 377; 7 Taunt. 63; and for a time certain—Rex v. James, 5 B. & Ald. 894; 1 D. & R. 559. S. C.; and not until he retract, or make a personal submission or apology—14 East, 142. As to the justice's power to commit a witness for refusing to be examined, see Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R. M. C. 42, ante, 96.

It may be as well to observe, that a prisoner, when examined before a justice on a charge of felony, is not entitled, as of right, to have a person skilled in the law, or any other, present as an advocate on his behalf, it being a preliminary investigation only, and not conclusive on him. Cox v. Coleridge, 1 B. & Cres. 37; 2 D. & R. S. C.; R. v. Borron, 3 B. & Ald. 432; Daubney v. Cooper, 10 B. & Cres. 237, reported fully, ante, Conbition, Vol. I. p. 829.

Obstructing the examination.

Right of third persons to be present.

VIII. Remanding Accused for further Examination.

The justice should take and complete the examination of all concerned, and discharge or commit the accused for trial as soon as the nature of the case will permit him—Fortes. 142, 143: but he is in all cases allowed a reasonable time for this purpose before he makes his final decision.

There can be no doubt a magistrate may commit for re-examination. Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 32. But the magistrate should take care that he commits for re-examination, and not for the purpose of extorting a confession, or the like.

Remanding accused for further examination.

Power to commit

REMANDING
ACCUSED.

Form of detainer.

If by some reasonable occasion, as the absence of a witness or the like, the justice cannot at the return of the warrant take the examination, he may by word of mouth command the constable or any other person to detain in custody the prisoner till the next day, and then to bring him before the justice for further examination. And this detainer is justifiable by the constable or any other person, without showing the particular cause for which he was to be examined, or any warrant in writing. 1 Hale, 585; 2 Hale, 120: and see Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 32.

Time of detainer.

Where, however, the detainer is for a long time, there had better be a warrant, in writing, for that purpose. See form, post. (No. 4.)

The time of the detainer must be no longer than is necessary for such purpose; and the magistrate ought not arbitrarily to commit the party. Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 28. In Scavage v. Tateham, it was holden that a party could not be detained sixteen days; and it was there said that the space of three days is a reasonable time. Cro. Eliz. 829; 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 12. See the case of Kendal & Roe, 12 Howell's St. Tri. 1376. But there is evidently no precise limitation of the time: all that is to be regarded is, whether the time be reasonable, which is a question of law and fact, and must depend on the circumstances of each particular case; and in the practice of the best-regulated police-offices, there are many instances of prisoners being detained much more than twenty days, between their first being brought before a justice and their commitment for trial, and being brought up for examination several different days during the interval. Dick, J., Examination; Arbuckle v. Taylor, 3 Dow, 184; Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 28. Rex v. Gooding, 1 Burn, J. 24 ed. 1001 n. (a)

(a) Mr. Justice Park, in his charge to the grand jury at Monmouth summer assizes, 1823, said, "You are here assembled as grand jurors, though many of you are magistrates, and through you I must address what I am about to say to magistrates in general. There has been a great irregularity in the commitment of the man in the borough gaol charged with horse-stealing. It is the duty of those who administer justice never to neglect the petitions of the poor; and I received a letter purporting to be signed by this prisoner, stating and complaining that he had been committed on the 27th of May last for further examination, that he never had been further examined, and that he never had been, up to that time (the 25th July), committed for trial! I took for granted it was like many of those letters which persons in my situation often receive; but when the calendar was presented to me on Tuesday morning, at Hereford, I then found he was, on the 30th July, committed for trial; a period of two calendar months and three days after he was first examined! I received from a magistrate of the borough, this morning, an account of various proceedings, and probably satisfactory reasons could be given for this delay, and it is not to find fault with this that I mention it. I do it as a matter of caution to all magistrates, and to state what I conceive to be the law on the subject. That a magistrate may commit for further examination there can be no doubt, because it is not always that the witnesses can be brought forward in the first instance, or the matter may not be ripe for trial; but the further and absolute commitment must be in a reasonable time. What is a reasonable time is a mixed question of law and fact, which those who are to exercise a judgment upon it must decide at the time, but, generally speaking, and without exception almost, two whole months cannot be a reasonable time. A magistrate ought as speedily as possible to make all inquiry. I state that with the greatest confidence, because I can state it on the authority of the twelve judges of England; for a case was submitted to us about two years ago, by H. M.'s command, in which that point incidentally came under consideration; and the judges were of opinion, that a further commitment could only be for a reasonable time, and that the jury must have found the commitment to be only for a reasonable time, otherwise the man would have been acquitted. It is distressing to see in the calendar of so respectable a county a commitment of this description, and that a man committed on the 27th of May, 1823, for further examination, should not have been further examined until the 30th of July following." 1 Burn, J. 24 ed. 1008.

If the examination do not take place in a reasonable time, an action might lie against the justice. Per Lord Eldon, C., in Arbuckle v. Taylor, 3 Dow's Rep. 184:—"What is a reasonable time may be difficult to say; whether one, two, three, four, or five days; for what may be reasonable time in one case may not be so in another: but a magistrate is bound to terminate his commitment for further examination in a reasonable time; and I cannot entertain a doubt that an action might be maintained against a magistrate for committing for further examination, if his view and purpose in so doing were to put the party under the same hardship and oppression as would belong to a commitment for custody in order to trial." And in the late case of Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 28, it was fully settled that trespass would lie against a magistrate for committing a party charged with felony for re-examination for an unreasonable time, though without any improper motive.

It also appears, from that case, that a warrant of commitment for an unreasonable time is wholly void.

It would be as well further to observe, that commitments for further examination stand upon grounds and principles different from commitments for custody in order for trial, which we have already noticed, ante, Commitment for safe Custody, Vol. I. See 3 Dow's Rep. 183. "A commitment for further examination is not a proceeding against the party, but a proceeding for his benefit. It is a proceeding with a view to protect him, against a commitment for trial, if, during a reasonable time for examination, it can be found there is no ground upon which there ought to be a commitment for custody in order to trial. And if you were to say, that where a party is committed for further examination bail shall be required before that further examination takes place, you put him to this inconvenience, that he must give security to stand a trial which he may never have to stand."—Per Lord Eldon, C., 3 Dow. 183, 184. A commitment for further examination must not be made use of as a commitment for custody in order to trial.—Id.

It has been said that the magistrate ought not to detain him in prison in his own house, but should send him to the common gaol of the county; for otherwise, when the justices come to deliver the gaol, he is not in the gaol, and may not be delivered, and so shall lie longer than is reasonable. Cro. Eliz. 830. But according to other authorities, because it may be unreasonable to take the information and examinations presently, or possibly it may take longer time, the prisoner may be continued in the custody of the officer, or may be detained in the justice's house, or committed to some near safe place of custody till the final examinations can be completed. 2 Hale, 120; 1 Hale, 585; Moore, 408; 1 Chit. C. L. 74; Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 32.

IX. Discharging Accused.

If he be charged with suspicion only of felony, yet if there be no felony at all proved to be committed, or if the fact charged as a felony be in truth no felony in point of law, the justice of peace may discharge him; as if a man be charged with felony for stealing of a parcel of the freehold, or for carrying away what was delivered him, and such like, for which, though there may be cause to bind him over for a trespass, the justice may discharge him as to felony, because it is not felony. 2 Hale, 121; Pult. 146, b.

But if there be an express charge of felony, on oath, against the prisoner, though his guilt appear doubtful, the justice cannot wholly discharge him, but must bail or commit him; and it is said, that if a person be killed by another, though it be per infortunium or even se defendendo, which is not properly felony, yet the justice ought not to discharge him, for he must undergo his trial, and therefore must be sent to prison, or admitted to bail. 2 Hale, 121; 1 Hawk. c. 29, 2 id. c. 15; Dalt., J., 164: sed vid. Dick., J., Commitment, II. n. a. And, in modern practice, though exculpatory evidence is received at the instance of the prisoner, and certified with the other depositions, unless it appear in the clearest manner that the charge is malicious, as well as groundless, it is not usual for the magistrate to discharge him, even when he believes him to be altogether innocent. 1 Chit. C. L. 89.

The same observations will, for the most part, apply as to discharging a party accused of a misdemeanor.

X. Bailing, or committing the Accused.

Bailing or committing accused.

As to bailing or committing the accused, see Bail, Vol. I., Commitment, Vol. I.

XI. Recognizance to prosecute and give Evidence.

Recognizance to prosecute and give evidence.

When the justice has decided upon bailing or committing the accused, he should take the recognizance of the prosecutor to prosecute, as also the recognizance of the material witnesses to appear against the party accused at the next court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions, or sessions of the peace, as the case may require. Dalt., J., c. 164. The words of the 7 Geo. IV., c. 64, s. 2 & 3, ante, expressly give the justice power to do so. If more than one are to be bound to prosecute, the recognizances should not be taken separately. Where goods above the value have been obtained by false pretences, the recognizance to prosecute should be in double the value of the goods. 30 Geo. II., c. 24, s. 2.

Infants and married women.

Infants and married women, who cannot legally bind themselves, must procure others to be bound for them. Infancy, however, is no ground for discharging a forfeited recognizance to appear and prosecute for a felony. 13 Price, 673.

Refusing to give evidence.

If the prosecutor or witness refuse to give such recognizance, the magistrate has power to commit him, this being virtually included in his commission, and by necessary consequence upon the above-mentioned statute 7 Geo. IV., c. 64, s. 2 & 3; 3 M. & S. 1; 1 Hale, 586; 2 Hale, 121, 282; 2 Hawk. c. 8, s. 58; and Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R. M. C. 42, ante, 96. This doctrine was confirmed in a late case, where a married woman refused to enter into a recognizance for her appearance at sessions to give evidence against a felon, and the magistrate committed her, and the Court of King's Bench held that the commitment was legal. Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1, ante, 96. But a justice of the peace is not authorised by law to commit a witness willing to enter into a recognizance for his appearance, to give evidence against an offender, merely because such witness is unable to find a surety to join him in such recognizance; nor ought the justice to require such surety: the party's own recognizance (at the peril of commitment) is all that ought to be required. Per Graham, B., Bodmin Summer Assizes, 1817; 1 Burn J., 24 ed. 1013.

Form of recognizance.

The party himself need not sign either of these recognizances. Dalt., J., c. 176; Dick. Sess. 87.

The recognizance is an obligation of record, as soon as it is taken and acknowledged, although not made up by the justice, and only entered in his book. Dalt., J., c. 168; post, Recognizance, Vol. V.

The recognizance is afterwards drawn up on parchment, and subscribed by the justice before whom it is taken. The 7 Geo. IV., c. 64, s. 2 & 3, ante, 97, requires such subscription by the justice.

As to estreating the recognizances, see, post, Fines and Recognizances, Vol. II.

XII. How Examinations, &c. to be kept, and Right of Party to have Copies, &c.

The justice should take due care over the examinations, information, and recognizances, until they be delivered over to the proper officer, in pursuance of the 7 Geo. IV., c. 64, s. 2 & 3, ante, 97. It is discretionary for him to let any one, not properly authorised, see them: even the party accused has no right to demand a copy of the depositions, though in cases of treason or felony he must be put in possession of a list containing the names of the witnesses. R. v. Holland, 4 T. R. 691; 1 Phill. Ev. 7 ed. 427, 8.

How examinations, &c. to be kept.
Right of party to copy of.

A mandamus will not lie to compel a magistrate to produce depositions taken before him on a charge of felony, for the purpose of founding an indictment for perjury against the deponents: the magistrate must be subpoenaed to produce the depositions, which may be read in evidence before the grand jury. In re one of the justices for the county of Bedford, 1 Chit. Rep. 627. In this case, on a motion for a rule to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not be issued, directed to a magistrate for the county of Bedford, commanding him to produce certain depositions taken before him on a charge of felony, in order to enable the party against whom the complaint was made to institute a prosecution against the deponents for perjury—Abbott, C. J. said, "This is an application completely without precedent; and as no case is cited in support of it, I see no reason why we should assume a power which it does not appear the law has afforded us. I am not aware of any thing at all analogous to such a motion. We have no power to issue a mandamus to a magistrate for any such purpose as that stated at the bar."—Bayley, J. "You may subpoena the magistrate before the grand jury; and from hearing the depositions taken before him read, the grand jury may make a presentment." Rule refused.

Compelling parties to produce depositions.

But in the case of R. v. Smith, 1 Stra. 126, a rule was granted, after time had been taken to deliberate, to compel a justice of the peace to cause an examination taken before him to be produced at the trial, and to give the party a copy in the mean time: and in Welch v. Richards, Barnes, 468, in an action for a malicious prosecution, a rule was obtained for the committing magistrate to show cause why he should not permit the plaintiff to inspect and take a copy of the information at his own expense, and cause the original information to be produced at the trial; and after cause shown, the rule was made absolute on the authority of the case in 1 Stra. 126.

And where the plaintiff, in an action on a deed, has had the same taken from him under a warrant against him for a felony, the Court will, on an affidavit of demand upon the magistrate and constable, direct them to give plaintiff a copy to declare on, and to produce the deed on the trial, the plaintiff undertaking to pay the expenses. Harris v. Aldrit, 2 Chit. Rep. 229.

XIII. Certifying the Examinations, &c.

The 7 Geo. IV., c. 64, s. 2 & 3, ante, 97, requires the justice to subscribe the examinations, information, and recognizances, and deliver, or cause to be delivered, the same to the proper officer of the Court in which the trial is to be before or at the opening of the Court.

Formerly the justice used personally to attend with the informations, in order to certify them; but now they are handed over by the clerk of the justices to the clerk of the peace or assizes.

Excise and Customs.*

Customs and Excise defined.

THE Customs are duties payable on merchandize brought into or carried out of the country, or carried coastwise. The Excise duties, on the other hand, are an inland imposition, and are imposed sometimes on the manufacturer or dealer, sometimes on the commodity itself, or the retail sale.

The Custom duties, which are paid on the first introduction of goods into the country, are liable to objection on that account, as the merchant is obliged to charge in the price of the commodity, not only the tax itself, but also a commercial profit on such tax, and the advance of his money in paying the same; and when the goods have to pass through the hands of various dealers, the accumulated profits on the tax may exceed the amount of the tax itself. (a)

The Excise duties fall more lightly on the consumer than Custom duties to the same amount, because they are generally paid in a much later stage. The expense of collecting them is also easier: but the frauds to which this branch of the revenue is exposed have occasioned it to be protected by provisions which some have considered too rigorous and inquisitorial for the temper of a free nation. The frauds that might be committed, unless a strict watch was kept, have made it necessary to give the Excise-officers a power to enter and search the houses of persons who deal in excisable commodities, at any hour of the day, and, in many cases, of the night; and the proceedings for a transgression against the law are so summary and expeditious, that a person may be convicted within a very short time in a very large penalty, by two commissioners or justices of the peace, to the total exclusion of the trial by jury and disregard of the common law. The regulations of the Excise, however, are not without advantages ulterior to the production of revenue, inasmuch as they are the means of preserving some species of goods from adulteration, which might be highly prejudicial to the health of the community. The imposition of heavy duties on articles which may be called the necessaries of life, as on salt, leather, soap, and candles, or on manufactured goods, is liable to objection on account of the influence of such a measure in depress-

* In all the former editions of this work, these subjects have been considered together, because the laws of the Customs and Excise, so far as justices, constables, and other peace officers are concerned, are in some measure connected and interwoven with each other; and though a better arrangement might be adopted, the editor of this edition thinks it is more convenient to adhere to the same order.

For the history and particulars of the laws of the Customs and Excise antecedent to the recent enactments, and for the decisions thereon, many of which are applicable to the existing law, see 3 Chitty's

Commercial Law, 690 to 847; Tucker on Trade, 38; 2 Sinclair on Revenue, 358 to 411; 3 Smith's Wealth of Nations, b. 5, s. 2, p. 347; 1 Bla. Com. 813 to 320; Highmore on Excise, vol. Customs and Excise*, vol. II.

ing trade and industry, and the interest of manufacturers seems also to require that the importation of foreign raw materials should be preserved, as much as possible, unencumbered with duty. (a) The duties on importation constitute, at the present day, the principal branch of those that are levied under the name of Customs, and the goods which are charged with duties on exportation are comparatively few. (b) Formerly, indeed, duties were imposed on the exportation of almost every commodity, under an idea that such duties were not paid by the natives, but by the foreign merchant: but this opinion is now exploded. Experience has proved that foreign nations will not give beyond a certain price for any commodity whatever; and that, by taxing goods exported, we should either force them to give up the consumption, or to trade with other places for a supply. (c) The duties on goods carried coastwise are imposed principally on three commodities; namely, coals, slate, and stone. (d) Indeed, it is one of the principal advantages of the uniform system of taxation, which, with a few exceptions of no great consequence, takes place in all the different parts of the united kingdom, that it leaves the interior commerce of the country, the inland and coasting trade, almost entirely free. The inland trade is almost perfectly free, and the greater part of goods may be conveyed from one end of the kingdom to the other without having occasion for a permit or licence, and without being subject to any question, visit, or examination, from the revenue-officers. There are a few exceptions, but they are such as can give no interruption to any important branch of the inland commerce of the country. Goods carried coastwise indeed, in general, require certificates or coast cockets. But, except coals, slate, and stone, such goods are in general duty free. This freedom of interior commerce, which is the effect of the uniformity of the system of taxation, is highly important in its influence on the prosperity of the kingdom, as every great country is necessarily the best and most extensive market for the greater part of the productions of its own industry. (e) We will consider so much of laws affecting the Customs and Excise as practically interest the public in general, and magistrates and peace-officers in particular, under the two following heads and appropriate subdivisions, viz.:

I. Of the Customs.

BEFORE the year 1787, the multiplicity of enactments relative to the Customs created the greatest difficulty and confusion. These inconveniences were first remedied by the statute introduced in that year by Mr. Pitt, called the Customs Consolidation Act, viz. 27 Geo. III., c. 13, followed by several other acts, and lastly by the 59 Geo. III., c. 52; but at length the present admirable system of legislation was introduced, and all the prior enactments were repealed by the 6 Geo. IV., c. 105, and new duties and regulations were introduced by several other acts of the same sessions, and which were altered by subsequent acts, (a) viz.:

The present law in general, and acts relating thereto.

- 6 Geo. IV., c. 105, An act to repeal the several laws relating to the Customs.
- c. 106, An act for the management of Customs.
- c. 107, An act for the general regulation of the Customs.
- c. 108, An act for the prevention of smuggling.
- c. 109, An act for the encouragement of British shipping.
- c. 110, An act for the registering British vessels (see title Ships), and see further 10 Geo. IV., c. 43, s. 12.
- c. 111, An act for granting duties of Customs.
- c. 112, An act for the warehousing of goods.
- c. 113, An act to grant certain bounties and allowances of Customs.
- c. 114, An act to regulate the trade of the British possessions abroad.
- c. 115, An act for regulating the trade of the Isle of Man.
- c. 116, An act for regulating vessels carrying passengers to foreign parts.
- 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, An act to alter and amend the several laws relating to the Customs.
- c. 53, An act to regulate the importation of silk goods until the tenth day of October, 1828, and to encourage the silk-manufactures by the repeal of certain duties.
- 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, An act to amend the laws relating to the Customs.
- 9 Geo. IV., c. 25, An act to authorise the appointment of persons to act as solicitors, on behalf of His Majesty, in any court or jurisdiction in revenue matters.
- c. 60, An act to amend the laws relating to the importation of corn.
- c. 76, An act to amend the laws relating to the Customs.
- 10 Geo. IV., c. 23, An act to impose duties on the importation of silk and silk goods, and to allow drawbacks on the exportation thereof.
- c. 43, An act to amend the laws relating to the Customs.
- 11 Geo. IV., c. 1, An act for the relief of parishes from the expense of maintaining the wives and families of men convicted under the laws for the prevention of smuggling, and sentenced to serve His Majesty in his naval service.

It would be beyond the limits of a work of this nature to particularize every part of these enactments. (b) It will be found, however, that those which fall within the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and the inferior peace-officers, and which interest the public in general, are fully stated. The subject is arranged under the following heads:

(a) There are some regulations in the Excise act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, which might with propriety be extended to the Customs.

(b) See the acts, collected and printed at length, in 2 Chitty's Col. Stat. tit. Customs.

I. Repeal of the former Enactments.

[6 Geo. IV., c. 105, and 7 Geo. IV., c. 48.]

I. Repeal of former acts,
6 Geo. 4, c. 105.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 105, s. 1, recites, "That the laws of the Customs have become intricate by reason of the great number of the acts relating thereto which have been passed through a long series of years, and that it is therefore highly expedient, for the interests of commerce and the ends of justice, and also for affording convenience and facility to all persons who may be subject to the operation of those laws, or who may be authorised to act in the execution thereof, that all the statutes now in force relating to the Customs should be repealed, and that the purposes for which they have from time to time been made should be secured by new enactments, exhibiting more perspicuously and compendiously the various provisions contained in them:" and the statute then enacts that, "after the 5th July, 1826, so much and such parts of the several statutes thereafter mentioned, made in the parliaments of England and Great Britain respectively, as relate to the trade and navigation of this kingdom, or to the importation and exportation of goods, wares, and merchandise, or as relate to the collection of the revenue of Customs, or prevention of smuggling, as are hereinafter set forth, shall be repealed;" and then, in sections 2 to 387, repeals the provisions in upwards of 380 acts relating to Great Britain, and partly to Ireland; and, in sections 388 to 343, repeals 56 acts relating to Ireland.

7 Geo. 4, c. 48,

The 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 52, still more explicitly declares the repeal of all the former acts, and after reciting "that it is expedient that no doubt should remain whether any, or what if any, former or other acts, relating in any way to the Customs continue to have any force," enacts, "that all statutes and acts, and all parts thereof, made in the respective parliaments of England, of Great Britain, of Ireland, and of the united kingdom, relating to the revenue of Customs, to navigation, or to the prevention of smuggling, in any part of the British dominions, which were in force on 5th July, 1826, besides the several acts and parts of acts expressly repealed by 6 Geo. IV., c. 105, as hereinbefore amended, by this act shall be, and the same are hereby repealed, save and except such acts and parts of acts as are hereinafter mentioned and described, and declared to be saved and excepted from the effect of this general repeal, viz." &c. The excepted acts are then enumerated, viz.: 18 Geo. III., c. 12; 13 Geo. III., c. 31; 51 Geo. III., c. 47; 59 Geo. III., c. 54; 55 Geo. III., c. 26; 1 & 2 Geo. IV., c. 87; 3 Geo. IV., c. 60; 6 Geo. IV., c. 64; 56 Geo. III., c. 127; 59 Geo. III., c. 69; 4 Geo. IV., c. 77; 5 Geo. IV., c. 1; 4 Geo. IV., c. 80; 4 Geo. IV., c. 88; 55 Geo. III., c. 57; 55 Geo. III., c. 141; and the 5 Geo. IV., c. 64; and all other acts relating to the British and Irish fisheries: and the 6 & 7 W. III., c. 10; 15 Geo. III., c. 27; 31 Geo. III., c. 36; 6 Geo. IV., c. 78; 43 Geo. III., c. 25; 4 Geo. IV., c. 25; and 21 & 22 Geo. III., c. 1.

II. Duties of Customs.

II. Present Duties of Customs.

[6 Geo. IV., c. 111; id. c. 113; 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, c. 53; 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56; 9 Geo. IV., c. 76; 10 Geo. IV., c. 43.]

The duties of Customs have been already defined, and distinguished from the duties of Excise. (a) They are now known under the denominations of duties of Customs inwards, duties of Customs outwards, and duties of Customs coastwise.

Importation

The importation duties are more numerous than those levied on exportation; and in order to restrain the introduction of goods of foreign manufacture, and encourage our own manufactures, they are frequently larger in amount in respect of manufactured goods than on such as are imported in a raw state. As, for instance, the duty on ostrich feathers, when dressed, is 1*l.* 10*s.* the pound; but, if undressed, only 10*s.* (b) The duties imposed on goods are not in general demandable upon wearing- apparel accompanying the proprietor, and bonâ fide part of his baggage, and worn and used, provided such articles do not exceed what may be reasonably allowed, according to the rank of the party in whose baggage the same may be found. (a) So British-built carriages, actually in use by passengers, as then travelling, are allowed to pass inwards and outwards without payment of duties, and without entries under the restrictions respecting baggage: (b) and there is an exception in favour of chintzes, calicoes, &c., from the East Indies, actually used and worn; (c) and goods wrecked are not to be deemed imported, so as to be subject to duty. (d) But foreign watches and fowling-pieces, whether new or used, must be regularly entered and charged, though part of the baggage of a passenger. (e)

The duties on exportation observed are fewer than those on importation of manufactured goods, and are to be regulated by the demands of the foreign consumers; because, if the duty upon a particular article should be too high, they would be induced to dispense with it, or to trade with other places for a supply. The necessity of obtaining purchasers of our produce and manufactures became so apparent in the last century, that all the duties on the exportation of British goods and manufactures were repealed by 8 Geo. I., c. 15, s. 7, with a very few exceptions. But since that time many alterations have been made; and it will be found, at present, that a duty of 10s. is imposed upon every 100l. of the value of goods of the growth, produce, or manufacture, of the united kingdom, with a very few exceptions, exported to any port whatever.

Exportation
duties.

The duties payable on goods carried coastwise from one part of the united kingdom to the other are imposed on coal, culm, and cinders, on slate and on stone, the produce of the united kingdom. These charges may be readily ascertained by a reference to the tables annexed to 6 Geo. IV., c. 111, and subsequent acts presently stated, post, 120, &c.

Coastwise duties.

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 111 (entitled "An act for granting duties of Customs"), after reciting the repeal of the prior duties by 6 Geo. IV., c. 105, and the expediency of granting other duties of Customs in lieu thereof, enacts, that "after the 5th January, 1826, this statute (6 Geo. IV., c. 111) shall come into full force and operation for granting duties of Customs:" and then 6 G. 4, c. 111, imposes duties of Customs, and enacts that instead of all other duties of Customs (with certain exceptions), the duties and drawbacks specified in the tables annexed shall be paid.

Sect. 2 enacts, that "in lieu of all other duties of Customs (except the duties upon corn, grain, meal, or flour), there shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid unto His Majesty, his heirs and successors, upon goods, wares, and merchandize imported into, or exported from, the united kingdom, or carried coastwise from one port or place in the united kingdom to another port or place in the same, the several duties of Customs, and there shall be allowed the several drawbacks, as the same are respectively inserted, described, and set forth in figures in the tables to that act annexed, and denominated respectively, 'Tables of Duties of Customs inwards,' Tables of Duties of Customs outwards,' and 'Tables of Duties of Customs coastwise.'"

Sect. 4 enacts, "that the duties and drawbacks by this act imposed and allowed shall be under the management of the Commissioners of His Majesty's customs; and shall be ascertained, raised, levied, collected, paid, and recovered and allowed, and applied or appropriated under the Duties and drawbacks to be under commissioners of Customs.

Sect. 5 enacts, "that it shall be lawful for His Majesty, by and with the advice of his privy council, by his order in council, from time to time to order and direct that there shall be levied and collected any additional duty, not exceeding one-fifth of the amount of any existing duty, upon all or any goods, wares, or merchandize, the growth, produce, or manufacture of any country which shall levy higher or other duties upon any article the growth, produce, or manufacture of any of His Majesty's dominions, than upon the like article the growth, produce, or manufacture of any other foreign country; and in like manner to impose such additional duties upon all or any goods when imported in the ships of any country which shall levy higher or other duties upon any goods when imported in British ships, than when imported in the national ships of such country, or which shall levy higher or other tonnage, or port or other duties upon British ships than upon such national ships, or which shall not place the commerce or navigation of this kingdom upon the footing of the most favoured nation in the ports of such country; and either to prohibit the importation of any manufactured article the produce of such country, in the event of the export of the raw material, of which such article is wholly or in part made, being prohibited from such country to the British dominions; or to impose an additional duty, not exceeding one-fifth as aforesaid, upon such manufactured article; and also to impose such additional duty in the event of such raw material being subject to any duty upon being exported from the said country to any of His Majesty's dominions; and all duties imposed by any such order shall be deemed to be duties imposed by this act."

Drawback on exportation of foreign rice or paddy.

Sect. 6 enacts, "that upon the exportation from the united kingdom of any foreign rice or paddy which shall have been cleaned therein, and which shall have paid the duties payable on the importation thereof under this act, there shall be allowed and paid for every hundredweight thereof a drawback equal in amount to the duty paid on every four bushels of the rough rice or paddy from which the same shall have been cleaned."

Conditions on
back paid.

Sect. 7 enacts, "that such drawback upon rice so exported shall be paid and allowed only upon such clean rice as shall be deposited for the purpose of exportation, within one calendar month from the day on which the duty thereon had been paid, in some warehouse (in which rice may be warehoused on importation without payment of duty), and shall there remain secured until duly shipped to be exported from such warehouse. Provided also, that the exporter of such rice shall make oath before the collector or comptroller that the rice so warehoused for exportation was cleaned from the rough rice or paddy upon which the duties had been so paid."

Drawback on
in U. K.

Sect. 8 enacts, "that such drawback as is mentioned, specified, and set forth in the table of duties inwards to this act annexed shall be allowed upon the exportation of any camphor which shall be refined in the united kingdom from a larger quantity imported unrefined, provided oath be made by the refiner or refiners thereof, before the collector or comptroller, that the said refined camphor was produced solely from camphor which had been imported into the united kingdom unrefined, and for which the duties of Customs had been paid."

Juice of lemons, limes, and oranges, how strength ascertained.

Sect. 9. 'And for ascertaining the degrees of specific gravity of strength according to which the duty on the juice of lemons, limes, and oranges imposed by this act shall be collected and paid;' be it enacted, "that such degrees of such specific gravity or strength shall be ascertained by a glass citrometer, which shall be graduated in degrees in such manner that, distilled water being assumed as unity at the temperature of sixty degrees by Fahrenheit's thermometer, every degree of the scale of such citrometer shall be denoted by a variation of four one-thousandth parts of the specific gravity of such water."

Sect. 10 enacts, "that it shall be lawful to import into the united kingdom any flax, and any wood being eight inches square or upwards, fit for ship-building, and any bark or any solid vegetable extract to be used solely for the purpose of tanning leather, such articles being the growth or produce of the colony of New South Wales, or any of the settlements or dependencies thereof, or of Norfolk Island, or Van Dieman's Land, or of New Zealand, and imported direct from the said places during the remainder of the period of ten years, to be reckoned from the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, without payment of any duty whatever for the same. Provided always, that before such goods shall be entered as being the growth or produce of any of the said places, except New Zealand, the master of the ship or vessel importing the same shall produce and deliver to the collector or comptroller of the Customs at the port of importation a certificate, under the hand of the proper officer at the place where such goods were taken on board, testifying that proof had been made, in manner required or authorized by any law in force for the time being, in such place, that such goods were of the growth or produce thereof, stating the name of the place, and the quantity and quality of the goods, and the name of the vessel in which they are laden, and of the master thereof; and such master shall also make oath before the collector or comptroller of the customs at the port of importation, that such certificate was received by him at the place where such goods were taken on board, and that the goods so imported are the same as are mentioned and referred to in such certificate; and before any such goods shall be entered as being the produce of New Zealand, the master of the importing ship shall make oath, before the collector or comptroller of the Customs at the port of importation, that such goods were taken on board such ship at New Zealand."

Sect. 11 enacts, "that it shall be lawful for the importer of any goods, subject to any of the duties imposed by this act, to warehouse such goods upon the first entry thereof under the laws in force for the warehousing of goods without payment of duty upon such first entry; and that all goods which shall have been so warehoused before the commencement of this act, and shall remain so warehoused after the commencement of the same, shall become liable to the duties imposed by this act, in lieu of all former duties."

Sect. 12 enacts, "that, for the purposes of this act, the Cape of Good Hope, and the territories and dependencies thereof, shall be deemed to be within the limits of the East India Company's charter; and the Island of Mauritius shall be deemed to be one of His Majesty's sugar-colonies, and placed upon the same footing in all respects as His Majesty's islands in the West Indies."

Sect. 13 enacts, "that all goods, the produce of places within the limits of the East India Company's charter, having been imported into Malta or Gibraltar in British ships, shall, upon subsequent importation into the united kingdom direct from thence, be liable to the same duties as the like goods would respectively be liable to if imported direct from some place within the limits of the said charter."

Sect. 14 enacts, "that it shall be lawful to import pease for seed, on payment of the duty imposed by this act, at times when the importation of pease may be prohibited on account of the average price thereof; any thing in any other act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 15 enacts, "that nothing in this act, nor in any other act passed in the present session of parliament, shall extend to alter or affect the right of entering wine for prisage at such reduction of duties as the parties having such right shall be entitled to claim at any of the ports or places in England or Wales, where the right of prisage has not been purchased by the crown."

Sect. 16 enacts, "that nothing in this act nor in any other act passed in the present session of parliament shall extend to repeal or in any way vary or alter or affect an act passed in the fifty-sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, entitled 'An act to reduce the duty on the exportation from Great Britain of small coals of certain descrip-'

Sect. 20 contains a proviso, for the 6 & 7 Wm. III., c. 10; 15 Geo. III., c. 27; 31 Geo. III., c. 36.

Sect. 21 enacts, “that if upon examination of any keel, boat, wain, waggon, barrow, cart, coup, or other vessel or carriage employed in the conveyance of coals, cinders, ashes, or culm for the purpose of being laden or shipped for exportation, or to be carried coastwise, and which shall have been admeasured, weighed, numbered, and marked in manner directed by any act at any time in force for that purpose, there shall be found any greater quantity of coals, cinders, ashes, or culm, than such keel, boat, wain, waggon, barrow, cart, coup, or other vessel or carriage is allowed to carry or convey, according to the numbers, nails, or other marks set thereon, whether such number, nails, or other marks denote the quantity by weight or by measure, every such keel, boat, wain, waggon, barrow, cart, coup, or other vessel or carriage so overloaded, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 22. 'And whereas by the consolidation of the different branches of the public revenue, and of the several duties payable on the importation or exportation of goods, wares, and merchandize, and the appropriation thereof, as directed by the several acts in force in England, the hereditary and temporary revenues of the crown, of subsidies of tonnage and poundage, and of other duties upon goods, wares, and merchandize arising in England, are not now kept distinct and separate at the several offices, but have become blended with other duties of customs and tonnage, both in the collection and appropriation thereof; and whereas it is expedient that provision should be made for ascertaining the annual amount of what such hereditary revenues would have produced in case the same had not been so consolidated, and that an account should hereafter be kept of such annual amount;' be it therefore enacted, "that from and after the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, the lord high treasurer or commissioners of His Majesty's treasury of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being, or any three or more of them, shall cause to be prepared and kept an account of what such hereditary revenue arising in England would have amounted to, in case the same had not been and was not consolidated and collected with other duties of Customs and tonnage in the collection and appropriation thereof, in such manner and form as shall appear to the said lord high treasurer or commissioners of His Majesty's treasury for the time being best adapted to ascertain such amount, which account the said lord high treasurer or commissioners for the time being are hereby required to make out or cause to be made out and laid before parliament, together with the public accounts directed to be laid before parliament pursuant to the provisions of the several acts for directing public accounts to be laid annually before parliament."

Sect. 23. "Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to affect or alter the hereditary revenue of His Majesty, his heirs or successors, in Scotland, or other revenues there granted to His late Majesty King George the Second during his life, and reserved to His present Majesty during his life by an act made in the first year of His present Majesty's reign: but the same, and the civil establishment payable out of the same, shall continue to be paid in like manner as heretofore; any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 24 enacts, "that all the moneys arising by the duties imposed by this act (the necessary charges of raising and accounting for the same excepted) shall from time to time be paid into the receipt of His Majesty's exchequer in Great Britain, and shall be carried to and made part of the consolidated fund of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, except only as by this act is specially provided, and shall be appropriated in like manner and to the same services as the duties by this act repealed would have been if this act had not been passed."

Sect. 25 enacts, "that all moneys arising from any duties of Customs, or any arrears thereof, shall be raised, levied, collected, paid, or received from and after the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, for or on account of any goods, wares, or merchandize whatever, imported or brought into the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or exported from the said united kingdom, or brought or carried coastwise or from port to port within the united kingdom, although the amount of the said duties may have been computed and ascertained as such duties have been computed and ascertained before the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, although the goods, wares, or merchandize whereon any such duties of Customs may have been charged or may be charged may have been imported into or exported from the united kingdom, or brought or carried coastwise or from port to port within the united kingdom, the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, and although any duties of Customs due and payable or chargeable thereon may have been secured by bond or otherwise before the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, shall, from and after the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, be appropriated and applied in the same manner and to the same purposes as the duties of Customs by law granted are directed to be appropriated and applied, except as is in this Act provided; any act or acts of parliament, law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding; and that all moneys arising by any of the duties of Customs hereafter to be paid or allowed, either upon bond or otherwise, either by way of drawback, bounty, certificate, premium, or allowance, by any other legal document whatever, from and after the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, although the amount of the same shall have been computed and ascertained in the same manner in which they have heretofore been usually computed and ascertained, or shall have become due before the said fifth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, shall and may be paid or allowed in like manner by the proper officer or officers of the Customs out of the moneys in their hands arising from the duties of Customs respectively.

Sect. 26 enacts, "that to prevent frauds in colouring and concealing aliens' goods, all wines of the growth of France or Germany, which shall be imported into any of the ports or places in England, Ireland, Wales, or town of Berwick upon Tweed, in any other ship or vessel than which doth truly and without fraud belong to England, Ireland, Wales, or the town of Berwick upon Tweed, and whereof the majority and three-fourths at least of the mariners are English, shall be deemed aliens' goods, and pay all strangers' customs and duties to the officers of the port into which they shall be imported; and that all such masts, timber, or boards, as also all foreign salt, pitch, tar, hemp, flax, raisins, figs, prunes, olive oils, all sorts of corn or grain, sugar, potashes, spirits commonly called brandy, wine, or aqua vitae, wines of the growth of Spain, the Islands of the Canaries or Portugal, Madeira or Western Islands, and all the goods of the growth, produce, or manufacture of Muscovy or Russia, which shall be imported into any of the ports or places in England, Ireland, Wales, or the town of Berwick upon Tweed, in any other than such shipping, and so navigated, as aforesaid, shall be deemed aliens' goods, and pay according to the rates of the town or port into which they shall be imported."

Sect. 27. enacts, "that every merchant or other, passing any goods, wares, or merchandize inwards or outwards, shall, by himself or his servant, factor, or agent, subscribe one or more bill or bills of entry, wherein he shall declare whether such goods are on alien or British account, and if required make oath before the officer appointed to receive the said duties (or if the same be authorised by the charter granted to the said mayor and commonalty or citizens to administer the same); and no entry on alien account shall be permitted by the officers of the Customs to pass, or the goods to be delivered, unless the signature or mark of the city's collector or his clerk appears on the face of such warrant; and if any goods be entered on British account, which are bonâ fide aliens' property, the merchant or others entering the same shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds to be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, in the name of the chamberlain of the said city, on behalf of the said mayor and commonalty and citizens."

and the damages so to be recovered shall be paid into the chamber of London for the use of the said mayor and commonalty and citizens."

Sect. 28. 'And whereas part of the fund called the Orphans' Fund, established by an act passed in the fifth and sixth year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, entitled 'An act for the relief of the orphans and other creditors of the city of London,' consists of the imposition or duty of fourpence metage thereof for ever, over and above what was lawfully paid for the metage thereof, for every chaldron of all coals or culm usually sold by the chaldron imported into the port of London, or members thereof, and of a like duty of sixpence for every ton of such coals sold by the ton, and so imported, and other part of the fund consists of the further sum of sixpence (over and above all other impositions and duties, and the said sum of fourpence) for every chaldron or ton of coals or culm imported as aforesaid; and it was directed by the said act that the said imposition of sixpence should continue from the twenty-ninth day of September, one thousand seven hundred, for the term of fifty years, and the said impositions and duties have since been continued by subsequent acts of parliament for the further terms of thirty-five and forty-six years, and five years and three quarters of a year, making together the term of eighty-six years and three quarters of a year from the expiration of the said term of fifty years; and whereas it is expedient that screened coals and ashes, for which by this act the reduced duty of one shilling per chaldron is made payable as aforesaid (whether alone or intermixed with cinders), and ashes, should be exempted from the said imposition or duty of sixpence for every chaldron or ton;' be it therefore enacted, "that so much of the said recited act of the fifth and sixth years of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, and the act by which the said imposition is continued, as makes screened coals (whether alone or mixed with cinders or ashes), for which the said reduced duty is by this act made payable as aforesaid, subject to the payment of the said imposition or duty of sixpence for every chaldron or ton of coal or culm imported into the port of London, shall be and the same is hereby repealed. Provided nevertheless, that such screened coals, alone or intermixed as aforesaid, shall be liable to the said imposition or metage of fourpence for every chaldron or ton, and to all other duties and charges payable in respect of coals or culm imported into the port of London, and to all the charges, duties, and payments, regulations, restrictions, and provisions touching the vend and delivery thereof in the port of London, imposed and directed by an act of parliament passed in the forty-seventh year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, entitled 'An act for repealing the several acts for regulating the vend and delivery of coals within the cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties thereof, and certain parts of the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, and for making better provision for the same.'"

Sect. 29 enacts, "that all screened coals shall be sold under the name or denomination of small screened coals, with or without the addition of the sort of coals of which they respectively shall be, at the option of the owner thereof; and if any vender or venders, dealer or dealers, shall sell any of the said screened coals, either alone or intermixed with cinders, under any other denomination than the sort of coals of which they respectively shall be as aforesaid, or if any vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall knowingly sell screened coals of any sort for and as another sort of coals which they really are not, within England or Wales, every such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of twenty pounds per chaldron for every chaldron so sold, not exceeding twenty-five chaldrons for the same offence."

The act then gives the three following schedules, containing the duties and drawbacks on imported and exported goods and those carried coastwise, and which have since been varied in the amount of some of the duties, by the 10 Geo. IV., c. 43.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 113, certain bounties and allowances of Customs were enacted, and specified in Schedule. (a)

By 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 35, another table of some duties, bounties, and drawbacks was enacted in lieu of certain duties imposed by the foregoing act of 6 Geo. IV., c. 111.

By 7 Geo. IV., c. 53, new duties on silk imported were imposed.

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 21, a different table of certain enumerated duties was enacted, varying them from the former. And

By 9 Geo. IV., c. 76, s. 10, a new table of certain duties was given, varying from the former duties on the same subject.

By 10 Geo. IV., c. 28, new duties were imposed on silk and silk goods, and drawbacks are allowed on the importation thereof.

By 10 Geo. IV., c. 43, s. 14, further new duties and drawbacks were introduced. (b)

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 107, s. 122, defines what shall be deemed an importation and exportation; and also what shall be deemed the arrival and departure of a ship. The enactment is, "That if upon the first levying or repealing of any duty, or upon the first granting or repealing of any drawback or bounty, or upon the first permitting or prohibiting of any importation or exportation, whether inwards, outwards, or coastwise, in the united kingdom, or in the Isle of Man, it shall be necessary to determine the precise time at which an importation or exportation of any goods made and completed shall be deemed to have had effect, such time, in respect of importation, shall be deemed to be the time at which the ship importing such goods had actually come within the limits of the port at which such ship shall in due course be reported, and such goods be discharged; and that such time, in respect of exportation, shall be deemed to be the time at which the goods had been shipped on board the ship in which they had been exported; and that if such question shall arise upon the arrival or departure of any ship, in respect of any charge or allowance upon such ship, exclusive of any cargo, the time of such arrival shall be deemed to be the time at which the report of such ship shall have been or ought to have been made; and the time of such departure shall be deemed to be the time of the last clearance of such ship with the collector and comptroller for the voyage upon which she had departed."

What to be deemed an importation and exportation, and what an arrival or departure of a ship.

Many decisions have taken place under the repealed acts upon the legal meaning of the terms importation, exportation, and coastwise, which may still be applicable. (c)

A vessel is generally considered to have imported her cargo when she has come within the limits of the port in order to lay the goods on land: (d) as when a ship brought a cargo of bay salt to a haven in England, and sold part of her cargo to another vessel, to which the goods were delivered, and afterwards exported; it was held that an importation had taken place, as well as an exportation, and that duties were payable accordingly on the cargo sold; and it was determined that the discharge of the goods from the vessel in which they were imported, on the sale taking place, was equivalent to putting them on the land, as the delivery was made within the body of the county. (e) A legatee under a bequest of wines which arrived in the port of London in a ship before the death of testator—the report of the arrival of the ship being made before, but the entry of

CUSTOMS,

the wines not being made until after the death of testator—is not subject to the payment of the duties, the executor being bound to pay them out of the assets. (a)

The terms exportation and coastwise have also received judicial construction. Thus when a drawback is payable on exportation, the master is not entitled to it without producing the clearing note, which is the last document that he receives; and on an exportation from London it is not given to the master till after he has delivered all necessary papers at Gravesend, so that an exportation from London is not complete until the ship has cleared at Gravesend. (b) So, unless a vessel has proceeded out of the limits of the port with her cargo, it is not such an exportation of the goods as will protect the cargo from duties subsequently imposed on the exportation of goods of the same nature, although she is not only freighted and afloat, but has gone through all the formalities of clearing, &c. at the Custom House, and has paid the exportation duties. And all such new imposts as are laid on such goods attach while the vessel is waterbound within any part of the port. (c)

The carrying of goods coastwise is not deemed an exportation of them in the ordinary use of that term. (d)

Contingencies,
&c. not provided against.

It was said, in a case under the Excise Laws, that it is a principle of legislation in the revenue acts not to provide for contingencies, or provide for losses, but to impose the duty and leave the party to petition. (e) There are, however, provisions giving power to abate duties upon goods damaged during a sea voyage. (f)

Sugar.

The duties on sugar are continued annually. (g) The act 6 Geo. IV. c. 9, schedule, imposed duties on sugar imported for the service of the year 1825: and that such duties should be levied, collected, and paid as other duties of Customs, and should be applied in manner directed by that act. The 6 Geo. IV. c. 11, schedule, imposed the duty inwards on sugar. The 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 35, schedule, imposed the duties till 7 July, 1827. Then followed annual acts for continuing the duty on sugar, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 7; 9 Geo. IV. c. 36; 10 Geo. IV. 39. The 9 Geo. IV. c. 93, allows sugar to be delivered out of warehouse to be refined, and was continued to 5 July, 1830, by 10 Geo. IV. c. 49, subject to certain regulations and penalties in case of nonabsence.

The 1 Wm. IV. c. 50, regulates the duties till 5 July, 1831.

Wine.

Wine imported by a foreign ambassador, for his own use, is generally duty free by licence from the Treasury; but if, in retiring from the country, he leave it in the hands of an agent to be sold, and the same were sold, it was held that the wines having passed from the hands of the privileged person became liable to the duties. IV. c. 105, contains provisions for the management of the Customs, commencing on the 5th Jan. 1826. These enactments are not immediately connected with the office of justice of peace, excepting the 43d section, relating to the forced sale of buildings and land for the purposes of the Customs. The enactments may be arranged under the following heads:

3. Management of the Customs.

- (1.) The Commissioners in the United Kingdom and abroad.
- (2.) The Officers of the Customs, Hours of Attendance, Fees, &c.
- (3.) The Receiver-General.
- (4.) The administering Oaths.
- (5.) The Offence of bribing Officers.
- (6.) Seizures.
- (7.) Surveyors-General, and the Examination of Witnesses.
- (8.) Commissioners in Ireland.
- (9.) Of Lands and Buildings for the Customs.
- (10.) Of the Signatures of the Lords of the Treasury.

(1.) Of the Commissioners of Customs.

(1.) Of the commissioners.

[6 Geo. IV. c. 106.]

The 4 Geo. IV. c. 23, (a) authorised the king to appoint a board of commissioners of Customs, not exceeding thirteen, for the united kingdom, and assistant commissioners for Scotland and Ireland, and then pointed out the powers and authorities of such commissioners, and subjected the board to the control of the treasury. That act was repealed by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 105, and the present provisions were enacted by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 106.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 106, s. 2, it is enacted that, "It shall be lawful for H. M. from time to time to appoint, under the great seal of the united kingdom, any number of persons, not exceeding thirteen, to be commissioners of H. M.'s Customs for the collection and for the management of the Customs in and throughout the whole of the united kingdom, and of any of H. M.'s possessions abroad; and also to appoint any number of persons, not exceeding four, to be assistant commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, to sit and act in manner hereinafter mentioned in and for Scotland and Ireland; and that each of such commissioners and assistant commissioners, when so appointed, shall have and hold his office during H. M.'s pleasure."

Board of Customs, thirteen commissioners, and four assistant commissioners for Scotland and Ireland.

Sect. 3. "It shall be lawful for the lord high treasurer of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or for the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, from time to time to order and direct any one or more of such commissioners, together with two such assistant commissioners, to sit and act as commissioners for executing and directing the business of the Customs in Scotland and Ireland respectively, under the control and direction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs sitting and acting in England."

Treasury may appoint commissioners and assistant commissioners for Scotland or Ireland.

Sect. 4. "The said commissioners and assistant commissioners so appointed or to be appointed by H. M. shall, in all matters and things relating to the execution of their duties, be subject to the authority, directions, and control of the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, and shall obey such orders and instructions as shall from time to time be issued to them by the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury under the hands of three or more of them."

Commissioners and assistant commissioners subject to the control of the treasury.

Sect. 5. "Every order, document, instrument, or writing, not being for Orders under the hands of commissioners.

(a) See the statute at length, 2 Chit. Col. Stat. tit. Customs.

1. Of the commissioners.

---

Signature of two commissioners to be sufficient without seals.

Commissioners and others not liable to serve parochial and other offices.

the payment of money, required by any law at any time in force to be under the hands of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, being attested by the signatures of two or more of such commissioners in England, and every such order for the payment of money, being attested by the signatures of three or more of such commissioners in England, and every order, document, instrument, or writing, being attested by the signatures of two or more of such commissioners or assistant commissioners in Scotland and Ireland respectively, shall be deemed to be an order, document, instrument, or writing under the hands of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs accordingly."

By stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 2. Every order, document, instrument, or writing required by any law at any time in force to be under the hands and seals of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, which shall be signed by two (a) or more commissioners or assistant commissioners of the Customs, shall be deemed to be an order, document, instrument, or writing under the hands and seals of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs within the meaning of such law.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 2. "No commissioner or assistant commissioner of customs shall, during the time of his acting as such commissioner or assistant commissioner, be compelled to serve as a mayor or sheriff, or in any corporate, or parochial, or other public office or employment, or to serve on any jury or inquest, or in the militia."

By 10 Geo. IV. c. 43, s. 2, the jurisdiction of local boards of Customs in Ireland, and of sub-commissioners in certain cases, was repealed, and the penalties for offences against the Customs in Ireland may be recovered in the Exchequer there, or before justices of the peace.

(2.) Of the officers, &c.

Appointment of subordinate officers of Customs.

Salaries and allowances and securities.

Persons employed by Customs deemed officers for such service.

Duties of officers performed by persons and at places appointed by commissioners.

(2.) Of the Officers of the Customs, Hours of Attendance, Fees, &c.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 106, s. 7. "It shall be lawful for the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or for the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs under the authority of the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, to appoint proper persons to execute the duties of the several offices necessary to the due management and collection of the Customs, and all matters connected therewith, under the control and direction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs; granting or allowing to such persons such salaries or other allowances, or permitting such emoluments for the labour and responsibility in executing the duties of their respective offices or employments, and requiring of such persons such securities for their good conduct therein, as the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury shall deem to be reasonable and necessary; and such persons shall hold their offices during the will and pleasure of the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs sitting and acting in England, in such cases and in such manner as the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury shall direct."

Sect. 8. "Every person employed on any duty or service relating to the Customs, by the orders or with the concurrence of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs (whether previously or subsequently expressed), shall be deemed to be the officer of the Customs for that duty or service." (b)

By 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 3. "Every act, matter, or thing required by any law at any time in force to be done or performed by, to, or with any particular officer nominated in such law, for such purpose being done or performed by, to, or with any person appointed by the commissioners of

H. M.'s Customs to act for or in behalf of such particular officer, the same shall be deemed to be done or performed by, to, or with such particular officer. And every act, matter, or thing required by any law at any time in force to be done or performed at any particular place within any port, being done or performed at any place within such port appointed by the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs for such purpose, the same shall be deemed to be done, or performed, at the particular place so required by law."

2. Of the officers, &c.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 106, s. 9. "If any officer, (a) clerk, or other person, acting in any office or employment in or belonging to the Customs, under the control and direction of the commissioners of the Customs in any part of H. M.'s dominions, shall take or receive any fee, perquisite, gratuity, or reward, whether pecuniary or of any other sort or description whatever, directly or indirectly, from any person (not being a person duly appointed to some office in the Customs), on account of any thing done or to be done by him, in or in any way relating to his said office or employment, except such as he shall receive under any order or permission of the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, every such officer so offending shall, on proof thereof to the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, be dismissed from his office; and if any person (not being a person duly appointed to some office in the Customs) shall give, offer, or promise to give any such fee, perquisite, gratuity, or reward, such person shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

Officers taking any fee or reward not allowed, shall be dismissed.

Penalty 100*l*. for offering fee.

Sect. 10. "All commissions, deputations, and appointments granted to any officers of the Customs, in force at the time of the commencement of this act, shall continue in force, as if the same had been afterwards granted under and by virtue of the authority of this act; and all bonds which shall have been given by any such officers and their respective sureties for good conduct, or otherwise, shall remain in full force and effect."

Previous appointments and securities to remain in force.

Sect. 11. "Every person who shall be appointed to any office or employment in the service of the Customs, under the control and direction of the commissioners of the Customs in any part of H. M.'s dominions, shall, at their respective admissions thereto, take the following oath: (that is to say,)

Oath of office.

I, A. B., do swear to be true and faithful in the execution, to the best of my knowledge and power, of the trust committed to my charge and inspection in the service of His Majesty's Customs; and that I will not require, take, or receive any fee, perquisite, gratuity, or reward, whether pecuniary or of any sort or description whatever, either directly or indirectly, for any service, act, duty, matter, or thing done or performed, or to be done or performed, in the execution or discharge of any of the duties of my office or employment, on any account whatever, other than my salary, and what is or shall be allowed me by law, or by any special order of the commissioners of His Majesty's treasury, or the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, for the time being.

So help me God."

Sect. 12. "It shall be lawful for the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, by their warrant from time to time, to appoint the hours of general attendance of the commissioners and respective officers of the Customs, and other persons in the service of the Customs, at their proper offices and places of employment, and that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs to appoint the times, during such hours, at which any particular parts of the duties of such officers, and other persons respectively, shall be performed by them."

Hours of attendance, and division of service in those hours.

Sect. 13. "No day shall be kept as a public holiday by the Customs, except Christmas Day and Good Friday in every year, and any days appointed by H. M.'s proclamation for the purpose of a general fast or of a general thanksgiving, and also the anniversaries of the birthday of H. M., and of his successors."

Holidays.

2. Of the officers, &amp;c.

Collector in London to pay duties daily to receiver-general.

In London, debentures and orders to be paid by receiver-general.

Payments at outports by collector.

Commissioners may close accounts of collectors.

Fee for passing entries.

Odd pence.

Fee for despatching warrants.
Fee for writing cockets.

Salaries not subject to duties.

Officers of Customs not liable to serve parochial and other offices.

Sect. 14. "The collector of the Customs in the port of London shall pay into the hands of the receiver-general of the Customs the whole of the monies which he shall receive on account of the duties of Customs on the day on which he shall receive the same, or as near the whole as may be, save and except such sum or sums of money as shall from time to time, by virtue of the special order of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, be directed to be deducted, paid, or allowed therefrom."

Sect. 15. "Every sum of money which shall be due in the port of London, upon any debenture, certificate, or other instrument or document whatever, for the payment of any money out of the duties of Customs, shall be paid by the receiver-general of the Customs out of any money in his hands arising from the duties of Customs, and every such payment shall be allowed by the commissioners for the better examining and auditing the public accounts of this kingdom, in the settling or auditing of the accounts of the receiver-general of the Customs; and when any such payment shall become due at any other port in the united kingdom, the same may be paid by the collector at such port, the comptroller being duly apprised thereof, out of any of the monies in his hands arising from the duties of Customs, and under such directions and instructions for the due execution of their offices as shall from time to time be given to them by the commissioners of the Customs."

Sect. 16. "It shall be lawful for the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs finally to settle and close the accounts of any collectors or receivers of any part of the revenue of the Customs or other duties under their management, notwithstanding any erroneous appropriation of any duties of Customs received by such collectors or receivers; and the said commissioners are hereby empowered to correct such appropriation, in order to prevent the accounts of any such collectors or receivers from being kept open; and all such corrections shall be allowed by the commissioners for auditing the public accounts, in the passing the general accounts of Customs, subsidies, or impositions."

Sect. 17. "It shall be lawful for the officers and clerks in the long room of any custom-house to assist merchants and others, at their desire, in framing and passing entries inwards and outwards, and to receive such fee, freely given, for the same, as the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury shall permit; and that it shall be lawful for the receiver of any duties of Customs to receive for his own use, if freely given, so much as, added to any fractions payable upon any entry, shall amount to 6d.; and that it shall be lawful for the clerk of the warrants in the port of London to receive from any person, at whose request any warrant for goods inwards may be despatched before the usual time, the fee of 1s.; and for the receiver of the duties on such warrant to receive from such person the fee of 6d.; and that it shall be lawful for any cocket-writer in the port of London to receive from the person who shall select him to write any cocket for goods outwards any fee which shall be agreed on between them, not exceeding 5s. including the parchment, to be provided at the expense of the cocket-writer."

Sect. 18. "All salaries, allowances, or compensations granted or allowed to any officer, clerk, or other person in the service of the Customs, shall be paid without any abatement or deduction on account of any duties imposed by any act of parliament, unless expressly charged thereon."

9 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 2. "No officer of Customs, or person employed in the collection or management of or accounting for the revenue of Customs, or any part thereof, nor any clerk or other person acting under them, shall, during the time of his acting as such officer, or of his being so employed as aforesaid, or of his acting as such clerk or other person as aforesaid, as the case may be, be compelled to serve as a mayor or sheriff, or in any corporate or parochial or other public office or employment, or to serve on any jury or inquest, or in the militia."

(3.) Of the Receiver-General.

3. Of the receiver-general.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 106, sect. 19, reciting that it is expedient "that regulations should be established by law in the office of the receiver-general of the Customs in England, for depositing in the bank of England all the moneys, bills, drafts, and notes received by such receiver-general on account of the revenue under the management of the commissioners of Customs, except as hereinafter mentioned, until the same shall be paid into the exchequer," it is enacted, "that all monies, bills, notes, and drafts received by or coming to the hands of the receiver-general of the Customs in England, on account of the revenue of Customs in Great Britain, shall be paid by him into the hands of the governor and company of the bank of England; (that is to say), such monies and notes, and such of the bills and drafts as shall be already accepted, or shall not require acceptance (having been first duly endorsed), shall be paid as aforesaid on the day on which the same shall have been received; and such of the bills and drafts as shall require acceptance, and not be already accepted when received (the same having been first duly endorsed where necessary), within three days after the same shall have been accepted; for which monies, bills, notes, and drafts, the entry in the book hereinafter mentioned shall be a sufficient discharge; and all such monies, bills, notes, and drafts, so to be paid to the governor and company of the bank of England, shall be placed to an account to be raised in the books of the said governor and company, and to be entitled 'The account of the public monies of the receiver-general of Customs,' inserting the name of such receiver-general for the time being."

All moneys received by receiver-general of Customs in England shall be paid into the bank of England.

Sect. 20. "Provided that it shall be lawful for such receiver-general to retain and keep in his own hands, for the payment of casual and ordinary and daily demands, out of the monies so received by him as such receiver-general, a sum not exceeding one thousand pounds at the close of each day; and also any further sum which he shall be directed to retain by the said commissioners, not exceeding four thousand pounds; and also any further sum, with the permission in writing of any three or more of the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury."

Money for ordinary payments may be retained.

Sect. 21. "The governor and company of the bank of England, or some person duly authorised in that behalf, shall daily, upon receiving any money, bills, notes, or drafts, from such receiver-general of the Customs, make an entry of the money, bills, notes, and drafts so received, in a book to be provided by the governor and company of the bank of England, which book shall be forthwith re-delivered to the persons making the payments for the Customs, and inspected daily after its return by the comptroller-general of the Customs, or his clerk (such clerk being first duly authorised by him, and for whose conduct he shall be answerable), who shall compare the same with the account of monies, bills, notes, and drafts received by the said receiver-general, for the purpose of ascertaining that the receiver-general constantly pays into the bank all the money, bills, notes, and drafts, which he ought to do under the provisions of this act; and any default which such comptroller-general or his clerk may discover in that behalf shall be immediately reported by him to the said commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, who shall report the same, unless it shall appear to them to have happened by mistake or inadvertence, to the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury."

Bank to keep an account, to be returned to the Customs for inspection.

Sect. 22. "The monies placed to the account of the receiver-general as aforesaid in the bank of England shall be paid into the exchequer from time to time as by law is directed, in manner following: (that is to say), the receiver-general, or his clerk duly authorised by him for that purpose, and for whose conduct therein he shall be answerable, shall make an order weekly upon the governor and company of the bank of England, which order shall be countersigned by the comptroller-general or his clerk, to write off from his account the sum specified; and the said governor and company, or some person duly authorised on their behalf, shall thereupon write off such sum, and deliver a note drawn and cancelled in such manner as shall be approved by the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, for the amount, to the receiver-general or his clerk, who shall pay the same into the exchequer, and the bank-clerks attending there shall receive it as so much cash; and it shall not be lawful for the governor and company of the bank of England to pay or transfer any part of the money so paid in and placed to the account of such receiver-general, from such account, otherwise than into the exchequer in manner aforesaid, and except in the manner hereinafter directed, or to deliver any note or notes, bill or bills of exchange, save and except to the solicitor of the Customs or his clerk, upon his application for the same, together with the receiver-general or his clerk, and the comptroller-general or his clerk, for the sole purpose of taking out an extent for the security of the money for which such bill of exchange or draft shall have been given, or to the said receiver-general or his clerk, any bills, notes, or drafts which may be protested for non-payment, except as hereinafter is mentioned, in which case the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs shall be immediately acquainted therewith, if sitting, by such solicitor, receiver-general, or comptroller-general, or, if not sitting, at the time of their assembling; and such delivery shall be entered by the bank in the book to be kept as is herein directed."

Receiver-general may draw on the bank to pay drawbacks, &c.

Drafts to be countersigned by comptroller-general.

Officers of the exchequer to be furnished with appropriation paper.

• Sic.

On the death or removal of receiver-general, the balance to vest in his successor.

Receiver-general to keep account.

Sect. 23. "In order that the several payments directed by order of the commissioners of H. M.'s customs in England to be made by the said receiver-general to merchants or any other persons on account of drawbacks or bounties, or on any other account whatever, may be made without delay, and for the payment of which the money then in the hands of the said receiver-general shall be insufficient, it shall be lawful for the said receiver-general, or his clerk deputed and authorised by him for that purpose, and for whose conduct therein he shall be answerable, to draw out of the bank of England, as occasion may require, such sum or sums of money as may be sufficient to answer the purpose aforesaid; and that every draft or order on the bank for money for any of the said purposes shall be countersigned by the comptroller-general or his clerk, to be deputed and authorised by him for that purpose, and for whose conduct therein he shall be answerable; and that the said receiver-general shall from time to time account for the monies so to be drawn by him or his clerk out of the bank."

Sect. 24. In order that separate accounts may be kept at the exchequer of the monies paid in on various branches of the Customs pursuant to law, it is enacted, "that the said receiver-general of the Customs shall, on every Monday morning, furnish the proper officers of the exchequer with an appropriation paper, stating the heads under which the receipts of the preceding week is* to be applied."

Sect. 25. "Upon the death, resignation, or removal of the present and of every other receiver-general of the Customs hereafter to be appointed, the balance of cash for which he shall at that time have credit on his account as such receiver-general with the governor and company of the bank of England shall, as soon as a successor shall be appointed to the said office, actually vest in such successor, and, until such successor shall be appointed, in such person or persons as shall for the time being be duly authorised to execute the duties of the said office, in trust for the service of the public, and be forthwith transferred, carried over, and placed to the account of such successor, or other person or persons as aforesaid, to be applied to the said service in pursuance of the like drafts and orders as aforesaid."

Sect. 26. "The receiver-general of the Customs for the time being shall keep the account with the bank of all monies issued by and paid to the bank on his account for the service of the public; and the said receiver-general, observing the rules and regulations hereby prescribed, shall not be answerable for any money, bills, notes, and drafts, which he shall have so paid or caused to be paid into the bank of England; and the governor and company of the bank of England shall be answerable for all the monies, bills, notes, and drafts which shall be actually received by them from and on account of such receiver-general as aforesaid, except such bills as may have been returned in manner aforesaid."

3. Of the receiver-general.

Sect. 27. "If any person or persons shall knowingly and wilfully forge or counterfeit, or cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, or knowingly and wilfully act or assist in forging or counterfeiting, the name or handwriting of any receiver-general of the Customs, or of any comptroller-general of the Customs, or of any person acting for them respectively as aforesaid, to any draft, instrument, or writing whatsoever, for or in order to the receiving or obtaining any of the money in the hands or custody of the governor and company of the bank of England on account of the receiver-general of the Customs; or shall forge or counterfeit, or cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, or knowingly and wilfully act or assist in the forging or counterfeiting any draft, instrument, or writing in form of a draft made by such receiver-general or person as aforesaid; or shall utter or publish any such, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeited, with an intention to defraud any person whomsoever; every such person or persons so offending, being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be and is and are hereby declared and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as in cases of felony without benefit of clergy."

(8.) Of the Commissioners in Ireland.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 106, s. 32. "The district comprehending the city, suburbs, and liberties of Dublin, and the port of Dublin, and several creeks and members thereof, and all parishes, parts, and places of the city and county of the city of Dublin and county of Dublin, and all and every the baronies, parts, and places of the same, shall be subject to the rule and government of the commissioners and assistant commissioners of Customs in Ireland in all matters relating to the collecting, managing, and levying all revenues of Customs within the same; and that all complaints and informations for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, for any offence against or any breach of any act or acts in force in Ireland, relating to the revenues, matters, and things under the management of the said commissioners and assistant commissioners in Ireland, which shall be committed within the said district, shall (subject to such appeal as is hereinafter mentioned) be heard and determined by the said commissioners and assistant commissioners, or any two of them, who shall give judgment and award execution accordingly."

Board of commissioners of Customs in Ireland may appoint sub-commissioners to try offences out of Dublin district.

Sect. 33. "It shall be lawful for the said commissioners and assistant commissioners in Ireland, or any two or more of them, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, from time to time to appoint so many and such subordinate commissioners or sub-commissioners in and for any and every district in Ireland (except in the district of Dublin) as the said commissioners and assistant commissioners, or any two or more of them, shall from time to time find necessary, to be approved of by the lord-lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, for the purpose of hearing and determining all complaints and informations for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture imposed by any act or acts in force in Ireland relating to the revenue of Customs for any offence against or any breach of any such act, and to give judgment and award execution accordingly; and such sub-commissioners shall be removable and shall and may be displaced by the said commissioners and assistant commissioners as they shall think fit, and others placed in their room, with the like approbation of the lord-lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland; and any three or more of such sub-commissioners in their respective districts shall and lawfully may hear and determine any complaint or information for or relating to any offence against any such act or acts as aforesaid; and any judgment or execution which shall be given or awarded by the majority of such sub-commissioners sitting on the trial of any such complaint or information shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Sect. 34. "It shall and may be lawful for any persons, whether informer, claimant, or defendant, who shall think himself or herself aggrieved or injured by, or who shall be dissatisfied with, any judgment or sentence of the said commissioners and assistant commissioners, or any of their sub-commissioners, to make his or her appeal to the lord-lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or to commissioners of appeal to be appointed by such lord-lieutenant or other chief governor or governors, pursuant to an act made in the parliament of Ireland in the fourteenth and fifteenth years of the reign of King Charles the second, for settling of the excise or new impost upon H. M., his heirs and successors. Provided always that such appeal shall be made within the space of two calendar months next after such judgment or sentence shall be given, and that in default thereof no such appeal shall afterwards be received; and that the party who shall make such appeal shall serve the injunction grounded on such appeal within the space of twenty days next after such appeal shall be lodged, or in default thereof such judgment or sentence so appealed from shall be final and conclusive. And when any such appeal shall be brought before any such commissioners of appeal, the commissioners or sub-commissioners by whom such judgment or sentence shall have been had or given shall, within twenty-one days next after service of the injunction to stop their proceedings, transmit under cover, sealed up and directed to the registrar of the said commissioners of appeals, a true copy, attested by one of such commissioners or sub-commissioners, of all the proceedings and proofs in the cause in which such judgment or sentence was given; and in default thereof, such commissioners or sub-commissioners shall respectively forfeit the sum of 10*l.* each, unless the delay be satisfactorily accounted for by affidavit before the commissioners of appeals; and whenever it shall appear on any such appeal that the matter of any case hath not been tried, it shall be lawful for such commissioners of appeals to remand the proceedings to the commissioners or sub-commissioners by and before whom the judgment or sentence appealed against was given."

By 10 Geo. IV., c. 43, the jurisdiction of the local boards of Customs in Ireland, and of sub-commissioners, is in certain cases repealed; and the penalties for offences against the Customs' laws in Ireland may be recovered in the Exchequer there, or before justices of the peace.

or premises required as aforesaid, and suited to the purpose for which such lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises are required; then and in such case *it shall be lawful for two or more justices, or three or more deputy lieutenants (one of whom shall be a justice of the peace), or two or more deputy governors for the county, riding, stewartry, city, or place wherein such lands, tenements, messuages, hereditaments, or premises shall be, to put his majesty's officers in possession of such lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises; and for that purpose to issue a warrant, under their hands and seals, requiring possession to be delivered to such of his majesty's officers as shall be named in the said warrant; and it shall also be lawful for such person or persons so authorized as aforesaid, to require the said justices, deputy lieutenants, or deputy governors of such county, riding, stewartry, city, liberty, or place, to issue their warrant to the sheriff or sheriffs of the county, riding, stewartry, city, or place wherein such lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises shall be situate, to summon a jury; and every such sheriff or sheriffs is and are hereby authorized and required to summon and return a jury, properly qualified, of the number of twenty-four, and in the manner required by the laws of England, Ireland, and Scotland, respectively, who shall meet at some convenient time and place to be mentioned in such summons, out of whom a jury of twelve shall be drawn, in such manner as juries for the trial of issues joined in his majesty's Courts at Westminster and Dublin are drawn by law in England, or Ireland, respectively, and in such manner as juries are drawn by law for the trial of offences in Scotland; and in case a sufficient number shall not appear, the sheriff or sheriffs shall choose others, of the by-standers, or that can speedily be procured, being qualified as aforesaid, and the said jurymen may be challenged by the parties on either side, but not the array; and the said justices, deputy lieutenants, or deputy governors respectively, on the application of the said persons so authorized, or of any parties concerned, may and shall summon witnesses and adjourn any such meeting, if jurymen or witnesses do not attend; and the jury, on hearing any witnesses and evidence that may be produced, shall on their oaths (which oaths, as also the oaths of such witnesses, the said justices, deputy lieutenants, or deputy governors respectively, are hereby empowered and required to administer), find the compensation to be paid for the possession or use of such lands, as the case may be."*

Lands that are suitable may be taken in lieu of such as have been marked out.

Sect. 44. "Provided, that if the owner or owners of any lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises so required, or any person or persons interested therein, shall at any time, before the summoning of such jury as aforesaid, give notice in writing of any other lands situate as aforesaid, and of any other messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises so required as aforesaid, and suited to the purpose for which such lands are required, and which the owner or owners thereof, or persons interested therein, are willing to treat and agree for, then and in such case the jury so to be summoned shall previously find the facts, whether the lands so indicated in such notice are situate within the distance aforesaid, and are suited to the purpose for which such lands, tenements, messuages, hereditaments, or premises may be required, and whether the owner or owners thereof, or persons interested therein, are willing to treat and agree for the same; and if they shall so find, the owner or owners of or persons interested in the lands so surveyed or marked out as aforesaid, or of the messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises so required, shall not be compellable by virtue of this act to sell or dispose of the same. Provided always, that where the owner or owners of or persons interested in any lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises required by virtue of this act to be given up for the purposes aforesaid, shall prefer to sell the same outright, and shall be able to make a good title to the fee-simple thereof, it shall be lawful for them to insist on so doing; and in such case the jury so summoned as aforesaid shall find the value of the fee-simple of such lands, tenements, messuages, hereditaments, or premises, and the same shall be paid to the owner or owners thereof, or persons interested therein, in the manner directed by this act."

Sect. 45. " Provided, that if the said lord high treasurer, or the said commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or any person interested therein, shall be dissatisfied with the verdict of any such jury, it shall be lawful for them, or their attorneys in England and Ireland, to apply to the Court of Exchequer at Westminster or Dublin respectively in the next term, and in Scotland to apply within fourteen days after the finding any such verdict to the Court of Session in Scotland in time of session, or lord ordinary on the bills in time of vacation, and to suggest to the said Courts, or lord ordinary respectively, that they have reason to be dissatisfied with such verdict, and forthwith to give notice thereof to the said lord high treasurer or commissioners, or party (as the case may be), and thereupon in England and Ireland the proceedings that shall have been had, and the verdict of such jury, shall be returned into the said Courts of Exchequer respectively; and if it shall appear to the said Courts to be proper, a suggestion shall be entered on such proceedings as aforesaid, and a writ shall thereupon, by rule of such Court, or order of any judge of such Court, be directed to the sheriff of such county where the lands shall lie, or the messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises shall be, or, if the same shall lie or be in two counties, to the sheriff of either of such counties, to summon either a common or special jury, according to the application that shall have been made on that behalf, and as the Court or such judge shall allow, and who shall respectively be qualified according to law to appear before the said justice of assize or nisi prius of that county at the next assizes or sittings of nisi prius, if the same shall not happen sooner than twenty-one days after such suggestion, otherwise at the next succeeding assizes or sittings; and the compensation to be paid for the possession or use of such lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises, shall at such assizes or sittings be ascertained by such jury, in like manner as any damages may be inquired of upon any inquisition or inquiry of damages by any jury before any judge of assize or nisi prius, and the verdict of such jury shall be returned to the said Courts of Exchequer, and shall be final and conclusive: and in Scotland, if it shall appear proper to the said Court of Session or lord ordinary, upon such application, so to do, the said Court or ordinary shall order and direct the sheriff of the county where such lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises shall lie and be, or, if the same shall lie or be in two counties, the sheriff of either of such counties, to summon another jury in the manner in which juries are summoned in Scotland, properly qualified according to law, to appear before the lords or lord of justiciary at the next circuit, if the same shall not happen sooner than twenty-one days after such application, otherwise at the next succeeding circuit; and the compensation as aforesaid for the land, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, and premises shall, at such circuit, be ascertained by a jury drawn from the jury summoned as aforesaid, in such manner as juries are drawn in Scotland, under the direction of the said lords or lord of justiciary as aforesaid; and the verdict of such last-mentioned juries shall be final and conclusive, without being subject to review or challenge of any kind, unless the Court that shall have allowed such inquiry shall think fit, on any application made within four days after the commencement of the succeeding term or session, if in Scotland, to order any new trial in relation thereto."

If any person be dissatisfied with verdict, appeal may be made to the Court of Exchequer in England or Ireland, or to the Court of Session, &c. in Scotland.

Sect. 46. " Provided that it shall be lawful for any jury empannelled before any justice of the peace, magistrate, deputy lieutenant, or deputy governor, or before any judge of assize or nisi prius, to ascertain the compensation to be paid for any lands under this act, and they are hereby required to ascertain and settle the proportion to be paid out of such compensation to any person or persons having any interest as lessees or tenants at will or otherwise, in any such lands, and the proportion to be paid out of such compensation shall be returned on the verdict. Provided also, that where any such inquiry before any judge of assize or nisi prius, or lords or lord of justiciary, shall be had on the application of any such lessee or tenant at will, or other person having any inferior interest in any such lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises, who may have been dissatisfied with the proportion of compensation settled by the jury to be paid in respect of such interest, it shall not be lawful for the jury in any such case to alter the amount of the entire compensation awarded by any former verdict to be paid for such lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises, but only the proportion thereof to be paid to the person or persons having separate interests therein; and it shall not be lawful for any jury, on any inquiry had before any judge of assize or nisi prius, or lords or lord of justiciary, as to any compensation on the application of the said lord high treasurer or commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, in any case in which the whole compensation awarded by the former jury is confirmed by the jury on such inquiry, to alter the proportion that shall have been settled by any such former jury, as to any separate interest in any such lands, tenements, messuages, hereditaments, or premises."

Security to be given for costs.

Sect. 47. "Provided that it shall be lawful for the Court or judge, or lord ordinary, making any such rule or order, to require that the party, on whose application the same shall be made, shall give such security as shall to such Court, judge, or lord ordinary seem proper, for payment of costs, under such circumstances as shall be specified in any rule or order made for that purpose."

making compensation to the owners.

Sect. 48. "In all cases where any lands shall be taken under the provisions of this act, for any term of years, or for such period only as the public service shall require, it shall be lawful for the lord high treasurer or commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or any other person or persons so authorised as aforesaid, at any time before the possession of any lands which shall have been taken for the purposes aforesaid shall be delivered up to the owner or owners thereof, or other person or persons acting on his, her, or their behalf, to take down and remove all such buildings or other erections which shall or may have been built or erected thereon for the public service, and to carry away the materials thereof; making such compensation to the owner or owners of such lands, or other person or persons acting on his, her, or their behalf, for the damage or injury which may have been done thereto, or to the soil thereof, by the erection of any such buildings, or removing and carrying away the same, or otherwise, in consequence of the same having been occupied for the public service, as the said lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or such other person or persons authorised as aforesaid, shall think reasonable, and as shall be agreed upon in that behalf; and if such owner or owners, or other person or persons acting on his, her, or their behalf, shall not be willing to accept the compensation so offered, it shall be lawful for the said lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or other person or persons so authorised as aforesaid, to apply to and require two justices of the peace of the county, riding, stewartry, city, or place, to settle and ascertain the compensation which ought to be made for such damage or injury as aforesaid; and such justice shall settle and ascertain the same accordingly, and shall grant a certificate thereof; and the amount of such compensation, so settled and ascertained and certified, shall forthwith be paid by warrant of the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or any three or more of them, to the person or persons entitled thereto. Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to alter, prejudice, or affect any agreement which hath been or shall or may be entered into, by any such person or persons authorised as aforesaid, with any owner or owners of any such lands, or other person or persons acting on his, her, or their behalf, in relation to any such buildings or erections, but every such agreement shall remain valid and effectual in like manner as if this act had not passed."

Sect. 49. "In all cases where any money shall have been or shall be agreed, or shall have been or shall be found by the verdict of any jury, to be paid or given for the use or possession of any lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises taken by virtue of this act, belonging to any person or persons under any disability or incapacity, or not having the absolute interest therein, the same shall be paid by warrant of the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or any three of them, into the hands of the proper officer of H. M.'s Court of Exchequer at Westminster, Edinburgh, or Dublin, respectively, for the time being, for receiving the moneys belonging to the suitors of the said court respectively, for the use and benefit of such person or persons; and such officer is hereby authorised and required to receive or accept and to give a discharge for such money, and upon the acceptance or receipt thereof to sign a certificate to the barons or judges of the said Courts of Exchequer respectively, under his hand, purporting and signifying that such money or other consideration was received or accepted by and paid to him in pursuance of this act, for the use and benefit of such person or persons who shall be named and described in such certificate, and the said certificate shall be filed or deposited in the said Court of Exchequer at Westminster, Edinburgh, or Dublin respectively; and a true copy thereof, signed by such officer of such Court, shall and may be read and allowed as evidence for the purposes hereinafter mentioned; and such officer of such Court is hereby required, upon receipt of any such sum or sums of money as aforesaid, to pay the same into the bank of England, or bank of Scotland, or royal bank of Scotland, or bank of Ireland, as the case may require; and immediately upon the filing or depositing of such certificate, the said lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, or premises, shall be vested in or to the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors."

Sect. 50. "The barons or judges of H. M.'s Court of Exchequer at Westminster, and the barons or judges of H. M.'s Court of Exchequer at Edinburgh or Dublin, of the degree of the coif, for the time being respectively, or any two or more of them, shall be and they are hereby authorised and empowered, in a summary way upon motion or by petition for and on behalf of any person or persons interested in or entitled to the benefit of the money so paid to and received by the proper officer of the said Courts respectively, or the interest or produce thereof, and upon reading the certificate directed to be signed by the said officer concerning the same as aforesaid, and receiving such further satisfaction as they shall think necessary, to make and pronounce such orders and directions for paying the said money, or any part of the same, or for placing out such part thereof as shall be principal in the public funds, or upon government or real securities, and for payment of the dividends or interest thereof, or any part thereof, to the respective persons entitled to receive the same, or for laying out the principal, or any part thereof, in the purchase of other lands to be conveyed and settled to, for, and upon the same uses, trusts, intents, and purposes as the said lands so taken stood settled at the time of the payment of such money as aforesaid, as near as the same can be done, or otherwise concerning the disposing of the said money, or any part thereof, and the interest of the same, or any part thereof, for the benefit of the person or persons respectively, or for appointing any person or persons to be trustee or trustees for all or any of such purposes, as the said Courts respectively shall think just and reasonable."

Sect. 51. "Upon the death, removal, or resignation of any such officer of the said Courts of Exchequer, all stocks and securities vested in him by virtue of this act shall vest in the succeeding officer of the Exchequer, for

IV. Regulation of Customs.

[6 Geo. IV., c. 107; 7 and 8 Geo. IV., c. 56; 9 Geo. IV., c. 76; 10 Geo. IV., c. 43.]

IV. Regulations of customs.

The 6 Geo. IV. cap. 107, intituled, "An act for the general regulation of the Customs," after reciting the general repeal of the prior acts by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 105, enacts new general regulations to be in force from the 5th Jan. 1826, in the united kingdom and the Isle of Man. The act contains a succinct and perspicuous series of regulations respecting the importation and exportation of goods liable to the Customs' duties, so as to secure the due payment thereof.

Regulations of importations.

Thus with respect to the mode of and conditions of importation, enactments are contained (a) relative to the ship's manifest, report, and entry, times and places of landing, bill of entry, declaration of value, bill of sight, bill of store, certificate, master's oath, permit, (b) and the forfeitures and penalties incurred by the violation of the several regulations. Then follow what are termed inwards prohibitions, for the due encouragement of trade and manufactures, and for the security of the revenue, viz. prohibitions or restrictions on the importation of certain goods, stated in a table or alphabetical list, with the forfeitures for violations of the rules.

Of exportations.

Then with respect to exportation, there are several enactments (c) that goods shall not be shipped till the vessel and goods have been entered and cocket granted, nor till cleared; with full regulations as to the ship's entry, entry of the goods, certificate inwards, clearance, cocket, debenture of goods, and drawbacks of duties on wine allowed for officers in the navy. Then follow what are termed outwards prohibitions, viz. tables of prohibitions and restrictions against exportation of certain goods, with the forfeitures incurred by unlawful or irregular exportations.

Of coasting trade.

As to the coasting trade, it is declared (d) what trading by sea from one part of the united kingdom to another shall be deemed coastwise, and then authorises the treasury to regulate what shall be deemed trading by sea, and points out the several duties of the master of the vessel, and the forfeitures and penalties incurred by non-observance thereof.

The act then declares how certain terms of enactment shall be construed (a), and directs when and how ship-agents shall be licensed. (b)

Then follow several general regulations, viz. that all duties shall be paid, &c. according to imperial weights and measures—that bonds shall be taken by collectors—the mode of ascertaining the strength of foreign spirits (c)—samples to be taken by officers—the time of importation and exportation is defined—as well as that of the arrival and departure of ships—return of duty overpaid. Tonnage and burthen of ships declared, and penalty for falsifying documents.

Then are inserted directions as to seizures being made by any officer of Customs, and as to the restoration of seized goods, ships, vessels, or boats, being in the discretion of the commissioners of Customs, and that forfeitures and penalties may be remitted by the commissioners on proof of innocence of owners and masters, and that no action shall lie for the remitted penalty. These latter provisions are in practice so important, that it is deemed expedient here to insert them.

6 Geo. IV., c. 107, s. 128, enacts, That all goods, and all ships, vessels, and boats, which by this act, or any act at any time in force relating to the Customs, shall be declared to be forfeited, shall and may be seized by any officer of the Customs: and such forfeiture of any ship, vessel, or boat, shall be deemed to include the guns, tackle, apparel, and furniture of the same: and such forfeiture of any goods shall be deemed to include the proper package in which the same are contained. Provided always, that all goods, the importation of which is restricted, either on account of the packages, or the place from whence the same shall be brought, or otherwise, shall be deemed and taken to be prohibited goods: and if any such goods shall be imported into the united kingdom, other than to be legally deposited or warehoused for exportation, the same shall be forfeited.

By sect. 129, it is enacted, That in case any goods, ships, vessels, or boats, shall be seized as forfeited, or detained as undervalued, by virtue of any act of parliament relating to the Customs, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs to order the same to be restored, in such manner and on such terms and conditions as they shall think fit to direct; (d) and if the proprietor of the same shall accept the terms and conditions prescribed by the said commissioners, he shall not have or maintain any action for recompense or damage on account of such seizure or detention, and the person making such seizure shall not proceed in any manner for condemnation.

By sect. 130, That if any ship shall have become liable to forfeiture, on account of any goods laden therein or unladen thereof, or if the master of any ship shall have become liable to any penalty, on account of any goods laden in such ship or unladen therefrom, and such goods shall be small in quantity or of trifling value, and it shall be made appear to the satisfaction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, (e) that such goods had been laden or unladen contrary to the intention of the owners of such ship, or without the privity of the master thereof, as the case may be, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to remit such forfeiture, and also to remit or mitigate such penalty, as they shall see reason to acquit such master

Justices and peace-officers may, under the direction of the acts for the prevention of smuggling, (6 Geo. IV., c. 108,) be required to enforce the forfeitures and penalties imposed by these acts; but as they are so voluminous, it is thought fit only to give the above analysis of the provisions, referring the reader to the statute itself. ## V. Prevention and Punishment of Smuggling, and particularly Seizures, Rewards, &amp;c.

[6 Geo. IV., c. 108; 10 Geo. IV., c. 43, s. 10.]

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, (b) intituled, "An act for the prevention of smuggling," and several subsequent acts, contain the regulations on vessels and boats, licences thereof, with the forfeitures and penalties on violations of the regulations, and upon importing and exporting prohibited goods, and smuggling generally; on the powers of seizure; felonies connected with smuggling; jurisdiction of Courts, commissioners of Customs, justices of the peace, and others; and the course and forms of proceeding. As most of these provisions are intimately connected with the duties and office of justices of peace and other inferior peace-officers, it is proposed to consider them fully under the following heads:

- (1.) Regulations as to Vessels and Boats.
- (2.) Licences to Vessels.
- (3.) Forfeitures, Penalties, and Seizures, and by whom to be made.
- (4.) Penalties for Smuggling, &c.
- (5.) Of Felonies against these Laws.
- (6.) Of the Officers, their Protection and Reward.

Sect. 5. "If any foreign vessel (a) whatsoever shall be found within one league of the coast of the united kingdom, not proceeding on her voyage, wind and weather permitting, having on board or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or having had on board or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or conveying or having conveyed in any manner, within such distance, any goods whatsoever liable to forfeiture by this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs upon being imported into the united kingdom, that then and in such case the said vessel, (a) together with her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel, and all such goods laden therein, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 6. "When any vessel or boat, belonging in the whole or in part to H. M.'s subjects, or whereof one half of the persons on board are subjects of H. M., shall be found within four or eight leagues of the coast of the united kingdom as aforesaid, or shall be found as aforesaid in the British or Irish channels, or elsewhere within one hundred leagues of the coast of this kingdom, and chase shall be given or signal made by any vessel in H. M.'s service, or in the service of the revenue, hoisting the proper pendant and ensign as hereinafter mentioned, in order to bring such vessel or boat to, if any person or persons on board such vessel or boat shall, during the chase, or before such vessel or boat shall bring to, throw overboard the cargo or any part of the same (unless through unavoidable necessity, or for the preservation of such vessel or boat, the said vessel or boat having a legal cargo on board), or shall stave or destroy any part of the cargo to prevent seizure thereof, that then and in such case the said vessel or boat, with all her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 7. "If any vessel (not being square-rigged, nor a galiot of not less than fifty tons' burthen), or any boat coming from Brest on the coast of France, or from any place between Brest on the coast of France and Cape Finisterre on the coast of Spain, including all islands on the coast of France and Spain between those places, or coming from any place between the Helder Point on the coast of Holland and North Bergen on the coast of Norway, or from any place as far up the Cattegat as Gottenburgh, including all the islands on the coasts between those places, shall arrive in any of the ports of the united kingdom, or shall be found at anchor or hovering within the limits (b) of any of the ports thereof, and not proceeding on her voyage, wind and weather permitting, having on board, for the use of the seamen then belonging to and on board such vessel or boat, any spirits exceeding one half gallon for each seaman, or having on board any tea, exceeding four pounds' weight in the whole, or having on board any tobacco (excepting loose tobacco, not exceeding two pounds'

Sect. 9. "If any vessel or boat, whether British or foreign, shall be found or discovered to have been within one league of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man respectively, not proceeding on her voyage, wind and weather permitting, or within any bay, harbour, river, or creek of or belonging to any one of the said islands, having on board or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or having had on board or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or conveying or having conveyed in any manner within the said last-mentioned distances or places, any goods which, by this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, are liable to forfeiture upon being imported into, exported from, or carried coastwise into the said islands respectively, then and in such case the said vessel or boat, with all her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel, and all such goods as aforesaid with their packages, and any other goods which may be contained therein, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 10. "If any vessel or boat belonging wholly or in part to H. M.'s subjects, or whereof half the persons on board are subjects of H. M., shall sail from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, navigated by a greater number of persons than is allowed by this act (as herein-after mentioned) in a vessel or boat of like size and description; or if any vessel or boat shall sail from any of the said islands, having on board, or which shall take or have taken on board during the voyage, any small cordage adapted for slinging small casks, or any more ankers, half ankers, or other small casks, or any tin or other cases, or bladders of less content than forty gallons, and capable of containing fluids, of the sort used for smuggling spirits, than shall be necessary for the use of such vessel, or any materials for making any such small casks, cases, boxes, or bladders, or any syphon, tube, hose, or implements for broaching or drawing off any fluid, more than is usual and necessary for the fair and ordinary purposes of the voyage, or any articles, implements, or materials adapted for re-packing tobacco or snuff on board, during the voyage; such ship, vessel, or boat, with her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel, shall be forfeited, together with all such articles as aforesaid."

Sect. 11. "No vessel or boat, belonging wholly or in part to H. M.'s subjects, shall sail from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, without a clearance, whether in ballast or having a cargo; and if with a cargo the master shall give bond to H. M., in double the value of the vessel or boat and of the cargo, for duly landing the same at the port for which the vessel clears; and every such vessel or boat not having such clearance, or which having a clearance for a cargo shall be found light, or with any part of the cargo discharged before delivery thereof at the port specified in the clearance (unless through necessity or for preservation of the vessel or boat, to be proved to the satisfaction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs), shall be forfeited."

1. Regulations as to vessels, and forfeitures thereof.

Vessels (not square-rigged) coming from places between Brest and the Helder, having on board for the use of the seamen spirits, &c. exceeding a certain quantity, forfeited.

Vessels within certain distances of Guernsey, &c. having on board goods liable to forfeiture upon being imported, &c. forfeited with such goods and packages.

Vessels sailing from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, with a greater number of men than allowed, or taking on board small cordage or other articles, forfeited.

Vessels sailing from Guernsey, &c. without a clearance, forfeited.

1. Regulations as to vessels.

Vessels departing from Guernsey, &c. having on board spirits, wine, &c. breaking bulk or unlading cargo, &c., forfeited.

Vessels found within the limits of a port with a cargo, and afterwards found light and unaccounted for, to be forfeited.

Vessels liable to seizure not bringing to during chase may be fired at.

Persons not to hoist flags in imitation of those used in H. M.'s navy.

Sect. 12. "If after the departure from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, or Sark respectively, of any vessel or boat belonging wholly or in part to H. M.'s subjects, or whereof half the persons on board are H. M.'s subjects, having on board any spirits, tobacco, snuff, tea, or wine, bulk be broken, or any of the cargo unladen or unshipped, or any alteration be made in the form, size, description, or number of the packages shipped, or in the quantity, quality, or mode of package of the goods therein, at any time in the prosecution of the voyage towards the U. K. or any other place for which the vessel or boat shall have cleared out, such vessel or boat, with her tackle and furniture, shall be forfeited; but no forfeiture shall be incurred for breaking bulk or unlading the cargo, or any part of it, through unavoidable necessity and distress, nor for any alteration in the cargo, if occasioned by necessity or accident, or made for the preservation and safety of the vessel or boat, such necessity or accident to be proved to the satisfaction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs."

Sect. 13. "If any vessel or boat whatever shall be found within the limits of any port of the U. K. with a cargo on board, and such vessel shall afterwards be found light or in ballast, and the master is unable to give a due account of the port or place within the U. K. where such vessel shall have legally discharged her cargo, such vessel or boat, with her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 14. "In case any vessel or boat, liable to seizure or examination under any act or law for the prevention of smuggling, shall not bring to on being required so to do, on being chased by any vessel in H. M.'s navy, having the proper pendent ensign of H. M.'s ships hoisted, or by any vessel employed for the prevention of smuggling under the authority of the lords commissioners of the admiralty or the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, having a pendant and ensign hoisted, of such description as H. M. by any order in council, or by his royal proclamation under the great seal of the U. K., shall have ordered and directed, or shall from time to time in that behalf order and direct, (a) it shall be lawful for the captain, master, or other person having the charge or command of such vessel in H. M.'s navy, or employed as aforesaid (first causing a gun to be fired as a signal), to fire at or into such vessel or boat; and such captain, master, or other person acting in his aid or assistance, or by his direction, shall be and he is hereby indemnified and discharged from any indictment, penalty, or action for damages for so doing; and in case any person or persons shall be wounded, maimed, or killed by any such firing, and the said captain, master, or other person, and any person acting in his or their aid or assistance, or by his or their direction, shall be sued, molested, or prosecuted, or shall be brought before any of H. M.'s justices of the peace or other justices, or persons having competent authority, for or on account of such firing, wounding, maiming, or killing as aforesaid, all and every such justice or justices, person or persons, is and are hereby authorised and empowered, enjoined and required, to admit every such captain, master, or other person or persons so brought before him or them as aforesaid to bail; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 15. "If any person or persons shall, from and after the passing of this act, wear, carry, or hoist in or on board any ship, vessel, or boat whatever belonging to any of H. M.'s subjects, whether the same be merchant or otherwise, without particular warrant for so doing from H. M. or his high admiral of Great Britain, or the commissioners for executing the office of high admiral of Great Britain, H. M.'s jack, commonly called the union jack, or any pendent, ensign, or colours usually worn by H. M.'s ships, or any flag, jack, pendant, ensign, or colours resembling those of H. M., or those used on board H. M.'s ships, or any other ensign or colours than the ensign or colours by any proclamation of H. M. now in force or hereafter to be issued prescribed to be worn, then and in every such case the master or other person having the charge or command thereof, or the owner or owners being on board the same, and every other person so offending, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 50*l.*, which shall and may be recovered with costs of suit either in the High Court of Admiralty of England, or in any of H. M.'s Courts of King's Bench or Exchequer at Westminster or Dublin, or in the Courts of Session or Exchequer in Scotland respectively, or before any two or more justices of the peace; and that it shall be lawful for any officer of H. M.'s navy, Customs, or Excise, to enter on board any such ship, vessel, or boat, and to seize and take away any such prohibited flag, jack, pendant, ensign, or colours, and the same shall thereupon become forfeited to H. M.'s use."

Sect. 16. "All vessels and boats made use of in the removal, carriage, or conveyance of any goods liable to forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 17. "The owner of every vessel belonging in the whole or in part to any of H. M.'s subjects shall paint or cause to be painted upon the outside of the stern of every boat belonging to such vessel the name of such vessel, and the port or place to which she belongs, and the master's name withinside the transum in white or yellow Roman letters, not less than two inches in length, on a black ground, on pain of the forfeiture of such boat not so marked, wherever the same shall be found."

Sect. 18. "The owner of every boat, not belonging to any vessel, shall paint or cause to be painted upon the stern of such boat in white or yellow Roman letters, of two inches in length, on a black ground, the name of the owner or owners of the boat, and the port or place to which she belongs, on pain of the forfeiture of such boat not so marked, wherever the same shall be found."

Sect. 19. "All vessels and boats belonging in the whole or in part to H. M.'s subjects, having false bulkheads, false bows, double sides or bottoms, or any secret or disguised place whatsoever in the construction of the said vessel or boat, for the purpose of concealing goods, or having any hole, pipe, or other device in or about the vessel or boat adapted for the purpose of running goods, shall be forfeited, with all the guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel belonging to such vessel or boat; and all goods liable to the payment of duties, or prohibited to be imported into the U. K., found concealed on board any vessel or boat, or in any of the packages of goods on board, or in or underneath the ballast, or in any other place on board such vessel or boat, shall be forfeited."

By 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 14, "In case any vessel shall, on account of any goods, become liable to forfeiture under the said act for the prevention of smuggling, the goods creating such forfeiture shall also be forfeited."

Sect. 15. Reciting that by the said act for the prevention of smuggling, "if any foreign vessel shall, in certain cases therein described, be found within one league of the coast of the U. K., such vessel shall be forfeited;" it is enacted, "that the like forfeiture shall, in similar cases, attach equally to any foreign boat, as fully and effectually as if in the said act such forfeiture had been made to attach to any foreign vessel or boat."

Sect. 16. "If any vessel or boat whatever shall arrive or shall be found or discovered to have been within any port, harbour, river, or creek of the U. K., not being driven therein by stress of weather or other unavoidable accident, having on board, or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or having had on board, or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or conveying or having conveyed in any manner, within any such port, harbour, river, or creek, any brandy or other spirits, except rum, in any cask or package of less size or content than forty gallons, except only for the use of the seamen then belonging to and on board such vessel or boat, not exceeding two gallons for each seaman, or any tobacco or snuff in any cask or package in which such tobacco or snuff could not be legally imported into the U. K. in such vessel (except loose tobacco for the use of Provided always, that if it shall be made appear by proof on oath, to the satisfaction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, that the said spirits or tobacco were on board without the knowledge or privity of the owner or master of such vessel or boat, and without any wilful neglect or want of reasonable care on their or either of their behalfs, that then and in such case the vessel or boat shall not be liable to forfeiture, although the persons concerned in placing the said spirits or tobacco on board, or knowing thereof, shall be liable to detention and prosecution as aforesaid."

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 56, s. 9. Reciting that "by the act for the prevention of smuggling, foreign vessels laden with spirits in casks of less content than forty gallons, or with certain other goods, in which there shall be a certain proportion of British subjects, are liable to seizure if found within certain distances of the coast; and that it frequently happens that, during chase, and previously to such vessels being taken possession of, certain persons, who are believed to be British subjects, but of which there is no legal proof, quit such vessels, leaving only foreigners on board, by which the law is evaded, and the vessels and cargoes escape confiscation, although the cargoes may be evidently intended to be smuggled into the U. K.;" it is enacted, "that in all such cases where any person shall escape from any such vessel or boat before possession is taken of it, every such person so escaping shall be deemed to be a subject of H. M., within the meaning of the said last-mentioned act, unless it shall be proved to the contrary."

Sect. 22. "Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act shall extend, or be construed to extend, to forfeit any square-rigged vessel of the burthen of two hundred tons or upwards by admeasurement, for being armed for resistance, having on board two carriage-guns of the calibre not exceeding four pounds, and small arms not exceeding two muskets for every ten men, or any vessel, boat, or lugger, belonging to the royal family, or being in the service of the navy, victualling, ordnance, Customs, Excise, or post-office, nor any whale-boat or boat solely employed in the fisheries, or any boat belonging to any square-rigged vessel in the merchant service, nor any life-boat or tow-boat used in towing vessels belonging to licensed pilots, nor to any boat used solely in rivers or inland navigation, on account of such ship, vessel, boat, or lugger, not being licensed as aforesaid."

Sect. 23. "Every licence granted by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, for any vessel requiring licence under this act, shall contain the proper description of such vessel, the name or names of the owner or owners, with his or their place or places of abode, and the manner and the limits in which the same is to be employed, and, if armed, the numbers and description of arms, and the quantity of ammunition, together with any other particulars which the said commissioners may require and direct."

Sect. 24. "Before such licence shall be issued or delivered, or shall have effect for the use of any vessel, the owner or owners thereof shall give or cause to be given security by bond of two or more sufficient persons (being housekeepers), in treble the value of such vessel (not exceeding in any case the sum of 3000*l.* for a square-rigged vessel), with condition as follows; that is to say, that the vessel shall not be employed in the importation, landing, or removing of any prohibited or uncustomable goods, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, or any other act relating to the revenues of Customs or Excise, nor in the exportation of any goods which are or may be prohibited to be exported, nor in the re-landing of any goods contrary to law, nor shall receive or take on board or be found at sea or in port with any goods subject to forfeiture, nor shall do any act contrary to this act, or any act hereafter to be made relating to the revenues of Customs or Excise, or for the protection of the trade and commerce of the united kingdom, nor shall be employed otherwise than mentioned in the licence, and within the limits therein mentioned; and in case of loss, breaking-up, or disposal of the vessel, that the licence shall be delivered within six months from the date of such loss, breaking-up, or disposal of such vessel, to the collector or principal officer at the port to which such vessel shall belong."

Sect. 25. "Such bond shall be given at the port to which such vessel shall belong, and at no other without the consent of the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs first obtained; and the persons who are to become such security shall be persons, whether owners or not, approved by the collector and comptroller of the port where such bond is given, and residing at or near such port; and the collector and comptroller shall

"Every licence granted by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, for any boat requiring licence under this act, shall contain the description of the boat, with the name or names of the owner or owners thereof, and his or their place or places of abode, and the manner and limits in which such boat is to be used, together with any other particulars which the said commissioners may require and direct; and that the owner or owners of the said boat shall give his or their own security by bond, in treble the value thereof, with the like condition as is hereinbefore required on licences being granted for vessels under this act; and that such bond shall not be liable to any stamp duty."

Sect. 27. "It shall be lawful for the said commissioners of His Majesty's Customs to restrict the granting of a licence for any vessel or boat, in any way that they may deem expedient for the security of the revenue; and in case the said commissioners shall have granted a licence for any vessel, and shall deem it necessary to require fresh security for any vessel which may have been licensed as aforesaid, they are hereby empowered so to do, by an order in writing to that effect under their hands; and a copy of such order shall be left either with the owner or owners of such vessel, or with the person in whose custody the same shall then be; and from and after the delivery of such order as aforesaid, the licence granted for such vessel shall be deemed to be null and void, and the owner or owners is and are required to deliver up the said licence to the collector of the Customs at the port to which such vessel or boat shall belong within three months from the day when such order shall be delivered as aforesaid; and in default of such delivery, the owner or owners shall forfeit the sum of 100*l*.; and if any vessel or boat requiring such licence as aforesaid shall be found without such licence, or shall be found or discovered to have been used or employed in any trade or in any limits other than such as shall be specified in such licence, that then and in such case the said vessel or boat, with all her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel, and all the goods laden on board, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 28. "The owner of every vessel or boat which shall be licensed as aforesaid shall, before such vessel or boat, after obtaining such licence, first proceeds to sea, or departs out of any port of the united kingdom or Isle of Man, bring or cause to be brought such licence to the collector or other proper officer at the port from whence such vessel or boat is about to depart, and the said collector or other proper officer is hereby required duly to register the same; and in default of the owner bringing the same, or causing the same to be brought as aforesaid, the said licence shall be null and void; and the master, commander, or other person having or taking the charge or command of any licensed vessel or boat, is hereby required to produce such licence to any officer of the army, navy, or marines, duly authorised and on full pay, or officer of Customs or Excise, who shall board such vessel or boat within any of the limits or distances aforesaid, and shall demand a sight of the same; and in case of refusal to produce the same, or the same shall not be on board, or if the licence produced for any vessel shall be without an indorsement thereon that the proper security hath been given, that then and in such case the vessel or boat shall be forfeited, with her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel."

Sect. 29. "It shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, on proof to their satisfaction that the master or owner of any vessel or boat is desirous of removing such vessel or boat to the port to which she belongs, for the purpose of obtaining a licence and giving the necessary security for the same, to grant a certificate to such master or owner of such proof having been made; and in such case, so long as such vessel or boat shall be in due course of her voyage, wind and weather permitting, to the port to which the vessel or boat belongs or is intended to belong, such vessel or boat shall not be liable to forfeiture on account of not being licensed."

Sect. 30. "If any person or persons shall counterfeit, erase, alter, or falsify, or cause to be counterfeited, erased, altered, or falsified, any licence so to be granted as aforesaid, or shall knowingly or wilfully make use of any licence so counterfeited, erased, altered, or falsified, such person or persons shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 500/."

Sect. 31. "Whenever any licensed vessel or boat shall be lost, broken up, captured, burnt, seized, and condemned, sold, or otherwise disposed of, the licence shall be delivered up to the collector or other proper officer of the Customs at the port to which such vessel or boat belongs within six calendar months from the time thereof; or in case of the licence being lost or taken by the enemy, satisfactory proof thereof, on oath, shall be made within the same period, before the collector or other chief officer of such port; and in default thereof, the owner or owners and the master of such vessel or boat shall forfeit the sum of 100/."

By 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 12. "No licence (except a licence for arming) shall be required for any ship or vessel which is of the burthen of two hundred tons or upwards, nor for any square-rigged ship or vessel, or any ship, vessel, or boat propelled by steam, which is not of greater length than in the proportion of three feet six inches to one foot of breadth; and that no greater or other security shall be required on account of any licence to be issued under the said act, than in the sum of 1000/., or in the single value of the vessel or boat for which such licence is to be issued, if such value be less than 1000/., and by the sole bond of such owner or owners of such vessel or boat. Provided always, that if any such bond shall be taken of the owner of any boat who shall not have attained the age of twenty-one years, such bond shall nevertheless be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes; any thing in any act, or in any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 13. "No bond given on account of the licence of any vessel or boat, under the said act for the prevention of smuggling, shall be cancelled until the space of twelve months after the licence for which such bond had been entered into shall have been delivered up to the proper officer of the Customs; and such bond shall remain in full force and effect for the time of twelve months after the delivering of the licence as aforesaid, unless fresh security shall be given for such vessel or boat."

By 10 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 10. "Boats used in fishing, in the North and West Highlands of Scotland, need not have licences; and foreign vessels, with false bulkhead, for the purpose of smuggling, are to be forfeited."

2. Of Licences.

Persons counterfeiting licences to forfeit 500/.

Upon licensed vessel being lost or broken up, &c. licence to be delivered up, or if licence lost, proof to be made within six months, under penalty of 100/.

(3.) Forfeitures, Penalties, and Seizures, and by whom made.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, s. 32. "If any goods liable to the payment of duties shall be unshipped from any vessel or boat (Customs and other duties not being first paid or secured), or if any prohibited goods whatsoever shall be imported into any part of the united kingdom; or if any goods whatsoever, which shall have been imported, warehoused, or otherwise secured in the united kingdom, either for home consumption or exportation, shall be clandestinely or illegally removed from or out of any warehouse or place of security; that then and in such case all such goods as aforesaid shall be forfeited, together with all horses and other animals, and all carriages and other things made use of in the removal of such goods."

(3) Forfeitures, penalties, &c.

Prohibited goods, or goods not having paid duty, unshipped or removed illegally, &c. forfeited. (a)

(a) But see 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 5. 12. & 13, post, 189.

3. Forfeitures,
&c.

Goods prohibited to be exported shipped or brought to the quay forfeited, with goods packed therewith.

Vessels and goods liable to forfeiture may be seized by officers of army, &c. (b)

Officers making collusive seizures, or taking bribes, and persons offering same, to forfeit 500*l*.

Officers may search for prohibited goods; and may search the person upon good reason.

Sect. 33. "If any goods which are or may be prohibited (a) to be exported shall be put on board any vessel or boat with intent to be laden or shipped for exportation, or shall be brought to any quay, wharf, or other place in the united kingdom, in order to be put on board any vessel or boat, for the purpose of being exported, or if any goods which are prohibited to be exported shall be found in any package produced to the officers of the Customs as containing goods not so prohibited, that then and in such case not only all such prohibited goods, but also all other goods packed therewith, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 34. "All vessels and boats, and all goods whatsoever liable to forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs shall and may be seized in any place either upon land or water by any officer or officers of His Majesty's army (b), navy, or marines, duly authorized and on full pay, or officers of Customs or Excise, or any person having authority to seize from the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs or Excise; and all vessels, boats, and goods so seized shall, as soon as conveniently may be, be delivered into the care of the proper officer appointed to receive the same." (c)

Sect. 35. "If any officer of the Customs, or any officer of the army, navy, or marines, duly authorised and on full pay, and any other person or persons whatsoever, employed by or under the direction of the commissioners of the Customs, shall make any collusive seizure, or deliver up, or make any agreement to deliver up, or not to seize any vessel or boat or any goods liable to forfeiture, or shall take any bribe, gratuity, recompense, or reward for the neglect or non-performance of his duty, every such officer or other person shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 500*l*., and be rendered incapable of serving His Majesty in any office whatever, either civil or military; and every person who shall give, or offer, or promise to give any bribe, recompense, or reward, or make any collusive agreement with any such officer as aforesaid, (d) to induce him in any way to neglect his duty, or to do, conceal, or connive at any act whereby any of the provisions of any act of parliament may be evaded—every such person shall, whether the offer be accepted or performed or not, forfeit the sum of 500*l*."

Sect. 36. "It shall and may be lawful to and for any officer or officers of the army, navy, or marines, duly authorised and on full pay, or for any

(b) See s. 106, post, 188.

(c) A judicial sale of a vessel found at sea and brought into port as derelict, under an order of the Instance Court of the Admiralty, on the part of the salvors and claimant (without fraud), is available against the crown's right of seizure for a previous forfeiture, incurred by the ship having been guilty of a forfeitable offence against the revenue laws, although the crown was not a party to the proceeding in the Admiralty Court, other than by the King's procurator-general claiming the vessel as an Admiralty droit; and although no decision of droit or no droit was awarded, and the sale took place pendente lite under an interlocutory order.

The crown should have claimed before the Court, either as against the ship in the first instance, or subsequently against the proceeds of the sale, which were paid into the registry to answer claims under the order of sale, or have moved a prohibition.

The warrant for arresting a ship by the Admiralty, and the process of citation, is notice to all the world of the subsequent proceedings.

In pleading such sale in defence to an information, the facts should be put specially on the record, so that the attorney-general might demur to or traverse them. Attorney-general v. Norstedt (claiming the ship Triton), 3 Price, 97.

officer of Customs, (a) producing his or their warrant or deputation (if required) to go on board any vessel which shall be within the limits of any of the ports of this kingdom, and to rummage and to search the cabin and all other parts of such vessel for prohibited and uncustomed goods, and to remain on board such vessel during the whole time that the same shall continue within the limits of such port; and also to search any person or persons either on board, or who shall have landed from any vessel, provided such officer or officers shall have good reason to suppose that such person or persons hath any uncustomed or prohibited goods secreted about his person; and if any person shall obstruct, oppose, or molest any such officer or officers in going or remaining on board, or in entering or searching such vessel or person, every such person shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 37. "Before any person shall be searched by any such officer as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such person to require such officer to take him or her before any justice of the peace, or before the collector, comptroller, or other superior officer of Customs, who shall determine whether there is reasonable grounds to suppose that such person has any uncustomed or prohibited goods about his or her person; and if it shall appear to such justice, collector, comptroller, or other superior officer of Customs, that there is reasonable ground to suppose that such person has any uncustomed or prohibited goods about his or her person, that then such justice, collector, comptroller, or other superior officer of Customs shall direct such person to be searched in such manner as he shall think fit; but if it shall appear to such justice, collector, comptroller, or other superior officer of Customs, that there is not reasonable ground to suppose that such person has any uncustomed or prohibited goods about his or her person, that then such justice, collector, comptroller, or other superior officer of Customs, shall forthwith discharge such person, who shall not in such case be liable to be searched; and every such officer as aforesaid is hereby authorised and required to take such person, upon demand, before any such justice, collector, comptroller, or other superior officer of Customs, detaining him or her in the meantime. Provided always that no person, being a female, so directed to be searched, shall be searched by any other person than a female, duly authorised for that purpose by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs."

Officers, before searching persons, to take them before a justice, collector, or comptroller of Customs, if required, who may direct the search, or discharge such persons.

Sect. 38. "If any such officer shall not take such person with reasonable despatch before such justice, collector, comptroller, or other superior officer of Customs, when so required, or shall require any person to be searched by him, not having reasonable ground to suppose that such person has any uncustomed or prohibited goods about his or her person, that such officer shall forfeit and pay the sum of 10*l.*"

Penalty on officer not taking persons before magistrate in reasonable time, or requiring search without reasonable ground.

Sect. 39. "If any passenger or other person on board any vessel or boat shall, upon being questioned by any officer of His Majesty's Customs, whether he has any foreign goods upon his person, or in his possession, deny the same, and any such goods shall, after such denial, be discovered upon his person, or in his possession, such goods shall be forfeited, and such person shall forfeit treble the value of such goods."

Passengers having goods in possession, and denying it, to forfeit treble the value thereof.

Sect. 40. "It shall and may be lawful for any officer of Customs, or person acting under the direction of the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, authorised by writ of assistance under the seal of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer, to take a constable, headborough, or other public officer inhabiting near the place, and in the daytime, to enter into any house, shop, cellar, warehouse room, or other place, and in case of resistance to break open doors, chests, trunks, and other packages, there to seize and from thence to bring any uncustomed or prohibited goods, and to put and secure the same in the custom-house warehouse in the port next to the place from whence such goods shall be so taken as aforesaid. Provided always, that for the purposes of this act, any such constable, headborough, or other public officer duly sworn as such, may act as well without the limits of any parish, ville, or other place for which he shall be so sworn, as within such limits."

Sect. 41. "All writs of assistance so issued from the Court of Exchequer as aforesaid shall continue and be in force during the whole of the reign in which such writs shall have been granted, and for six months from the conclusion of such reign."

Sect. 42. "If any goods subject or liable to forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs shall be stopped or taken by any police-officer, or other person acting by virtue of any act of parliament, or otherwise duly authorised, such goods shall be carried to the custom-house warehouse next to the place where the goods were stopped or taken, and there delivered to the proper officer appointed to receive the same, within forty-eight hours after the said goods were stopped and taken."

Sect. 43. "If any such goods shall be stopped or taken by such police-officer on suspicion that the same have been feloniously stolen, it shall be lawful for the said officer to carry the same to the police-office to which the offender is taken, there to remain until and in order to be produced at the trial of the said offender; and in such case the officer is required to give notice in writing to the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs of his having so detained the said goods, with the particulars of the same, and immediately after the trial all such goods are to be conveyed and deposited in the custom-house warehouse as aforesaid, to be proceeded against according to law; and in case any police-officer making detention of any such goods shall neglect to convey the same to such warehouse, or to give the notice of having stopped the same as before described, such officer shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 44. "It shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of His Majesty's treasury of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or any three or more of them for the time being, or the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, by any order made for that purpose under their hands, to direct any vessel, boat, goods, or commodities whatever, seized as aforesaid under this or any act relating to the revenue of Customs, to be delivered to the proprietor or proprietors, whether condemnation shall have taken place or not, upon such terms and conditions as they may deem expedient, and which shall be mentioned in the said order; (a) and it shall be also lawful for the said commissioners of His Majesty's treasury, and the said commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, to mitigate or remit any penalty or fine which shall have been incurred, or any part of such penalty or fine incurred under any law or laws relating to His Majesty's Customs, or to the trade and navigation of this kingdom. Provided always, that no person shall be entitled to the benefit of any order for delivery or mitigation, unless the terms and conditions expressed in the said order are fully and effectually complied with."

Sect. 106. "In all cases where any power, authority, or protection is given or granted by this act to any officer or officers of the navy, army, or marines, the same shall not extend or be construed to extend to any such officer or officers, unless such officer or officers shall be on full pay, and employed for the prevention of smuggling under the proper authority to which such officer or officers is or are subjected, or under the authority of the commissioners of the Customs or Excise, and such officer or officers appears not to be essential that any terms shall be deemed to be duly authorised for the purposes of this act or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, any thing in this or any other act to the contrary notwithstanding."

By 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 56, s. 5. "All spirits or tobacco which shall be found being removed or carried without a legal permit for the same shall be deemed to be spirits or tobacco respectively unshipped without payment of duty, unless the party in whose possession the same shall be found or seized shall prove to the contrary."

Sect. 12. "If any goods which are subject to any duty or restriction in respect of importation shall be found on examination of any package to be concealed in double sides or false bottoms, or in any other secret or disguised place in such package, or among any other things in such package, that then and in such case not only all such goods, but also all other goods found in the said package, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 13. "It shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or any three or more of them, by an order made for that purpose under their hands, to direct any vessel, boat, or goods, seized under any act made for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, or to the trade or navigation of the united kingdom, or of any of H. M.'s possessions abroad, to be delivered to the owner or owners, whether the same shall have been seized in the united kingdom or abroad, and whether condemnation has taken place or not, upon such conditions as they may deem expedient, and which shall be mentioned in the said order, (a) any thing in any law to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 15. "And for the purpose of enabling the mayor and commonalty and citizens of the city of London, and their successors, to ascertain and collect the amount of the dues payable to them upon the several articles hereinafter mentioned, imported coastwise into the port of London; be it enacted, that if all or any of the goods of the description hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say) firkins of butter, tons of cheese, fish, eggs, salt, fruit, roots eatable, and onions, brought coastwise into the port of the said city, and which are liable to the said dues, shall be landed or unshipped at or in the said port before a proper certificate of the payment of the said dues shall have been obtained, such goods shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of H. M.'s Customs empowered to seize any goods landed without due entry thereof; and such forfeiture may be sued for, prosecuted, and recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of H. M.'s Courts of Record at Westminster, in the name of the chamberlain of the said city, on behalf of the said mayor and commonalty and citizens."

which have been illegally unshipped without payment of duties, or which have been illegally removed without payment of the same, from any warehouse or place of security in which they may have been originally deposited, or shall knowingly harbour, keep, or conceal, or permit or suffer to be harboured, kept, or concealed, any goods prohibited to be imported or to be used or consumed in the united kingdom or in the Isle of Man; and every person, either in the united kingdom or the Isle of Man, to whose hands and possession any such uncustomed or prohibited goods shall knowingly come, shall forfeit either the treble value (a) thereof, or the penalty of 100*l*., at the election of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs."

Sect. 46. "If any goods upon which there is a drawback or bounty shall be shipped to be exported into parts beyond the seas, and shall afterwards be unshipped with intention to be relanded in the united kingdom (unless, in case of distress, to save the goods from perishing), that then and in such case the said goods shall be forfeited, and the master of the vessel from which they shall be unshipped, and every person concerned in the unshipping, and the person or persons to whose hands the same shall knowingly come, or who shall knowingly harbour, keep, or conceal, or suffer to be harboured, kept, or concealed such goods, shall for every such offence forfeit the treble value of the goods, or the penalty of 100*l*., at the election of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs."

Sect. 47. "Every person who, by way of insurance or otherwise, shall undertake or agree to deliver any goods to be imported from beyond the seas at any port or place in the united kingdom without paying the duties due on such importation, or any prohibited goods, or in pursuance of such insurance, or otherwise, shall deliver or cause to be delivered any uncustomed or prohibited goods, every such person, and every aider or abettor thereof, shall for such offence forfeit the sum of 500*l* over and above any other penalty to which by law he may be liable; and every person who shall agree to pay any money for the insurance or conveyance of such goods, or shall receive or take such goods into his custody or possession, or suffer the same to be so received or taken, shall also forfeit 500*l* over and above any penalty to which by law he may be liable on account of such goods."

Sect. 48. "If any person or persons shall offer for sale any goods, under pretence that the same are prohibited, or have been unshipped and run on shore without payment of duties, that then and in such case all such goods (although not liable to any duties or prohibited) shall be forfeited, and the person or persons, and every of them, offering the same for sale, shall forfeit the treble value of such goods, or the penalty of 100*l*., at the election of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs."

Sect. 49. "Every person being a subject of H. M. who shall be found (c) or discovered to have been on board any vessel or boat liable to forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, for being found within four or eight leagues of the coast of the united kingdom as aforesaid, or for being found or discovered to have been within any of the distances or places in this act mentioned, from or in the united kingdom, or from or in the Isle of Man, having on board or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or having had on board or in any manner attached or affixed thereto, or conveying or having conveyed in any manner such goods or other things as subject such vessel or boat to forfeiture, or who shall be found or discovered to have been on board any vessel or boat from which any part of the cargo shall have been thrown overboard during chase, or staved or destroyed, shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*; and that every person, not being a subject of H. M., who shall be found or discovered to have been on board any vessel or boat, liable to forfeiture for any of the causes aforesaid, within one league of the coast of the united kingdom or of the Isle of Man, or within any bay, harbour, river, or creek, of the said island, shall forfeit for such offence the sum of 100*l.*; and it shall be lawful for any officer or officers of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorized, and on full pay, or any officer of Customs or Excise, or other person acting in his or their aid or assistance, or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, and he and they is and are hereby authorized, empowered, and required, to stop, arrest, and detain every such person, and to carry and convey such person before two or more justices of the peace in the united kingdom, (a) or a governor, deputy governor, or deemster in the Isle of Man, to be dealt with as hereinafter directed. Provided always, that any such person proving, to the satisfaction of such justices, governor, deputy governor, or deemster, that he was only a passenger in such vessel or boat, and had no interest whatever either in the vessel or boat, or in the cargo on board the same, shall be forthwith discharged by such justices."

Sect. 50. "Every person whatsoever, who shall unship, or be aiding, assisting, or concerned in the unshipping of any spirits or tobacco liable to forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, either in the united kingdom or the Isle of Man, or who shall carry, convey, or conceal, or be aiding, assisting, or concerned in the carrying, conveying, or concealing of any such spirits or tobacco, shall forfeit for such offence the sum of 100*l.* and every such person may be detained by any officer or officers of H. M.'s army, navy or marines, being duly authorized and on full pay, or any officer of Customs or Excise, or other person acting in his or their aid or assistance, or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, and taken before two justices of the peace in the united kingdom, or a governor, deputy governor, or deemster, in the Isle of Man, to be dealt with as hereinafter directed."

Sect. 51. "If any person or persons liable to be arrested and detained under the provisions of this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs shall not be detained at the time of so committing the offence for which he or they is or are so liable, or after detention shall make his or their escape, it shall and may be lawful for any officer of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorized and on full pay, or any officer of Customs or Excise, or any other person acting in his or their aid or assistance, or duly employed under such officer, to stop, arrest, and detain such person so liable to detention as aforesaid at any time afterwards, and to carry him before two justices of the peace, to be dealt with as if detained at the time of committing the said offence."

Sect. 52. "No person shall, after sunset and before sunrise, between the twenty-first day of September and the first day of April, or after the hour of eight in the evening and before the hour of six in the morning at other time in the year, make, aid, or assist in making, or be present for the purpose of aiding or assisting in the making of any light, fire, flash, or blaze, or any signal by smoke, or by any rocket, fireworks, flags, firing of any gun or other fire-arms, or any other contrivance or device, or any other signal in or on board or from any vessel or boat, or on or from any part of the coast or shore of the united kingdom, or within six miles of any part of such coasts or shores, for the purpose of making or giving any signal to any person on board any smuggling vessel or boat, whether any person so on board of such vessel or boat be or be not within distance to see or hear any such light, fire, flash, blaze, or signal; and if any person,

Sect. 53. "Provided always, that in case any person be charged with or indicted for having made or caused to be made, or been aiding or assisting in making, or being present for the purpose of making or aiding or assisting in making any such fire, light, flash, blaze, or other signal as aforesaid, the burthen of proof that such fire, light, flash, blaze, noise, or other thing, so charged as having been made with intent and for the purpose of giving such signal as aforesaid, was not made with such intent and for such purpose, shall be upon the defendant against whom such charge is made, or such indictment is found."

Sect. 54. "It shall be lawful for any person whatsoever to put out and extinguish or prevent any such light, fire, flash, or blaze, or any smoke, signal, rocket, firework, noise, or other device or contrivance so made or being made as aforesaid, and to enter and go into and upon any lands for that purpose, without being liable or subject to any indictment, suit, or action for the same."

Sect. 55. "If any person whatsoever shall hinder, oppose, molest, or obstruct any officer of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorized and on full pay, or any officer of Customs or Excise, in the execution of his duty, or in the due seizing of any goods liable to forfeiture by this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, or any person acting in his aid or assistance, or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, or shall rescue or cause to be rescued any goods which have been seized, or shall attempt or endeavour to do so, or shall before or at or after any seizure, stave, break, or otherwise destroy any goods, to prevent the seizure thereof, or the securing the same, then and in such case the parties offending shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 200*l.*"

By 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 19. "Every intimation to any smuggling vessel or boat, in whatever manner given, shall be deemed to be a signal within the meaning of the said act for the prevention of smuggling, and shall subject the person giving such intimation to be detained and proceeded against as directed by the said act."

By 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 56, s. 5. "All spirits or tobacco which shall be found being removed or carried without a legal permit for the same shall be deemed to be spirits or tobacco respectively unshipped without payment of duty, unless the party in whose possession the same shall be found or seized shall prove to the contrary."

Sect. 11. "All penalties and forfeitures which may be recovered before any justices of the peace under any act for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, on any prosecution by order of the commissioners of Customs, shall be paid to the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, and on any prosecution by order of the commissioners of Excise shall be paid to the commissioners of H. M.'s Excise, or to the person appointed by them respectively to receive the same; and such penalties and forfeitures shall be applied by the said commissioners respectively in such manner as the law directs."

4. Penalties for smuggling.

Penalties recovered before justices, to be paid to commissioners of the Customs or Excise. (a)

(5.) Of Felonies by Offenders in Smuggling.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, s. 56. "If any persons to the number of three or more, armed with fire-arms or other offensive weapons, shall within the united kingdom, or within the limits of any port, harbour, or creek thereof, be assembled in order to be aiding and assisting in the illegal exportation of any goods prohibited to be exported, or in the carrying of such goods in order to such exportation, or in the illegal landing, running, or carrying away of prohibited or uncustomed goods, or goods liable to pay any duties which have not been paid or secured, or in the illegal carrying of any goods from any warehouse or other place, as shall have been deposited therein, for the security of the home consumption duties thereon, or for preventing the use or consumption thereof in the united kingdom, or in the illegal relanding of any goods which shall have been exported upon debenture or certificate, or in rescuing or taking away any such goods as aforesaid, after seizure, from the officer of the Customs or other officer authorised to seize the same, or any person or persons employed by them or assisting them, or from the place where the same shall have been lodged by them, or in rescuing any person who shall have been apprehended for any of the offences made felony by this or any act relating to the revenue of Customs, or in the preventing the apprehension of any person who shall have been guilty of such offence; or in case any persons to the number of three or more, so armed as aforesaid, shall, within this kingdom, or within the limits of any port, harbour, or creek thereof, be so aiding or assisting; every person so offending, and every person aiding, abetting, or assisting therein, shall, being thereof convicted, be adjudged guilty of felony, and suffer death as a felon without benefit of clergy."

(5.) Of felonies by offenders in smuggling.

Three or more persons armed with fire-arms assembled to assist in the illegal exportation or landing of prohibited or uncustomed goods, or in the relanding goods shipped for exportation, or in the rescuing any such goods, to be deemed guilty of felony.

Sect. 57. "If any person shall maliciously shoot at or upon any vessel or boat belonging to His Majesty's navy, or in the service of the revenue in any part of the British or Irish channels, or elsewhere on the high seas, within one hundred leagues of any part of the coast of the united kingdom, or shall maliciously shoot at, maim, or dangerously wound any officer of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorised and on full pay, or any officer of Customs or Excise, or any person acting in his aid or assistance, or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, in the due execution of his office or duty, every person so offending, and every person aiding,

Persons shooting at any boat belonging to navy or in the service of the revenue, or shooting at or wounding officers of the army, navy, or marines, deemed guilty of felony.

(a) See 9 Geo. IV., c. 44, s. 2, and 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, post.

5. Of Felonies, &c.

Any person in company with four others, found with goods liable to forfeiture, or in company with one other person carrying arms or disguised, to be deemed guilty of felony.

abetting, or assisting therein, shall, being lawfully convicted, be adjudged guilty of felony, and suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy." (a)

Sect. 58. "If any person, being in company with more than four other persons, be found with any goods liable to forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, or in company with one other person within five miles of any navigable river, carrying offensive arms or weapons, or disguised in any way, every such person shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall on conviction of such offence be transported as a felon for the space of seven years; and if such offender shall return into the united kingdom before the expiration of the said seven years, he shall suffer as a felon, and have execution awarded against him as a person attainted of felony, without benefit of clergy."

(6.) Of officers, their protection and reward.

Persons assaulting officer by force or violence may be transported, &c.

(6.) Of Officers, their Protection and Reward. (b)

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, s. 59. "If any person shall by force or violence assault, resist, oppose, molest, hinder, or obstruct any officer of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorised and on full pay, or any officer of Customs or Excise, or other person acting in his or their aid or assistance, or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, in the due execution of his or their office or duty, such person being thereof convicted shall be adjudged a felon, and shall be transported for seven years, or sentenced to be imprisoned in any house of correction or common gaol, and kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding three years, at the discretion of the Court before whom the offender shall be tried and convicted as aforesaid."

Commanding officers of vessels in the service may haul their vessels on shore, without being liable to any action for so doing.

Sect. 60. "It shall and may be lawful to and for the commanding officer for the time being of any vessel or boat employed for the prevention of smuggling to haul any such vessel or boat upon any part of the coasts of the united kingdom, or the shores, banks, or beaches of any river, creek, or inlet of the same (not being a garden or pleasure-ground, or place ordinarily used for any bathing-machine or bathing-machines), which shall be deemed most convenient for that purpose, and to moor any such vessel or boat on such part of the aforesaid coasts, shores, banks, and beaches below high-water mark, and over which the tide flows on ordinary occasions, and to continue such vessel or boat so moored as aforesaid, for such time as the said commanding officer shall deem necessary and proper; and such commanding officer, or person or persons acting under his direction, shall not be liable to any indictment, action, or suit for so doing; any law, statute, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Officer, if wounded in the service of the Customs, to be provided for, &c.

Sect. 61. "In all cases where any officer or seaman employed in the service of the Customs or Excise shall be killed, maimed, wounded, or in any way injured in the due execution of his office, or if any person acting in his aid shall be so killed, maimed, wounded, or in any way injured while so aiding such officer or seaman, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs and Excise respectively to make such provision for the officer or person so maimed, wounded, or injured as aforesaid, or for the widows and families of such as shall be killed, as they shall be authorised and empowered to do by warrant from the lord high treasurer or commissioners of His Majesty's treasury for the time being."

6. Of officers, &c.

Sect. 62. "All vessels and boats, and all goods whatsoever, which shall have been seized and condemned for breach of any law relating to the revenue of Customs, shall be disposed of as soon as conveniently may be after the condemnation thereof, in the following manner; (that is to say,) all goods of a description admissible to duty shall be sold by public auction to the best bidder, at a price not less than the duty upon the importation of the like sort of goods: and in case such goods will not fetch the duty, shall be put up to sale for exportation; and in case they do not sell for exportation, then the said goods shall be destroyed: and all prohibited goods shall be put up for sale for exportation to the best bidder; and in case they do not sell, then shall be destroyed: all vessels or boats calculated for the fair and mercantile trade of this kingdom shall be put up for sale to the best bidder; and all vessels or boats calculated for smuggling shall be broken up and destroyed, and the materials shall be put up to sale to the best bidder. Provided always, that if the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs shall deem any of the vessels or boats necessary or required for the public service, it shall be lawful for them to cause the same to be used for the said purpose."

Condemned vessels and goods how to be disposed of.

Sect. 63. "It shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, and they are hereby authorised and empowered to award to any officer or other person detaining any person liable to detention under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, to be paid upon the conviction of such person, any reward they may think fit to direct, not exceeding the sum of 20*l.* for each person."

Reward to officers for detaining smugglers.

Sect. 64. "It shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, and they are hereby authorised and empowered to pay the following reward to any officer or officers, or persons as aforesaid, by whose means any pecuniary penalty or composition is recovered; (that is to say,) one-third of the penalty or sum recovered."

Rewards to officers where pecuniary penalties are recovered.

Sect. 65. "There shall be paid and allowed for and in respect of any seizure made by any officer or officers of the army, navy, or marines, duly authorised and on full pay, or any officer or officers of the Customs or Excise, or other person or persons deputed or employed by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs or Excise, under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, the following rewards; (that is to say,)

Rewards for seizures.

In the case of Seizures of Spirits and Tobacco:

If all the parties are detained and carried before two justices of the peace, the whole:

If two or more, not being the whole, are detained and convicted, seven-eighths:

If one, being a seafaring man, and convicted, three-fourths:

If one is detained with the vessel or means of conveyance, three-fourths:

If one person is detained and convicted, not a seafaring man, five-eighths:

If vessel or carriage with its lading be seized, without any person being detained, one-third:

If goods found sunk and concealed, and the smuggler afterwards convicted in consequence thereof, and by the exertions of the individuals so finding them, one-half:

If goods found, and no person subsequently convicted, one-eighth:

If goods seized and parties subsequently convicted in consequence of such seizure, and by the exertion of the seizers, one-half:

If goods seized only, one-eighth, or such other part as the commissioners of the Customs shall think proper, not exceeding one-fourth:

6. *Of officers,
&c.*

---

In the case of Seizures of Goods prohibited to be imported:

If vessel after importation or other means of conveyance seized, or any person prosecuted to conviction on account of same, two-thirds:
If goods only, one-half.

In the case of Seizures of Goods not before enumerated:

If vessel, or other means of conveyance, seized, or any person prosecuted to conviction on account of same, one-half:
If goods only, one-fourth:

In the case of Goods destroyed:

If vessel, or other means of conveyance, seized, or any person prosecuted to conviction on account of the same, a moiety of the appraised value or amount of duty:
If goods only, one-fourth of appraised value or amount of duty.

In the case of Seizures of Vessels and Boats:

If sold, a moiety of the produce:
If taken into the public service or broken up, a moiety of appraised value.

In the case of Seizures of Cattle and Carriages:

In all cases, three-fourths of the produce of the sale."

Sect. 66. " Provided always, that the aforesaid rewards shall be paid, subject to a deduction of 10*l. per centum* on account of law-charges and other expenses."

All rewards and seizures payable to officers of army, navy, or marines, to be regulated by H. M.'s orders in council, &c.

Sect. 67. " Every such reward, or part or share of any such seizure, or of the value thereof, as shall be payable to any officer or officers, non-commissioned officers, petty officers, seamen, or privates of H. M.'s army, navy, or marines, or acting under the orders of the lord high admiral or commissioners of the admiralty, shall be divided and distributed in such proportions, and according to such rules, regulations, and orders, as H. M. shall by his order or orders in council, or by his royal proclamation in that behalf, be pleased to direct and appoint."

Commissioners may distribute officers' shares of seizures in certain cases, so as to reward persons not actually present.

Sect. 68. " Reciting that it frequently happens that officers of the Customs and Excise, who from their stations on the coast, and other circumstances, are instrumental in causing the seizure of spirits and other goods, but who, from their not being actually present at and assisting in the making such seizure, have hitherto not been considered as entitled to participate in the officers' share of the same; and that it is expedient, in order to provide for such cases, that the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs and Excise respectively should be authorised to direct distribution of the shares of all seizures made by officers or persons acting under their authority or direction, or of any penalties recovered or rewards paid for the apprehension of smugglers, in such manner as may appear to them to be most conducive to the protection of the revenue;" it is enacted, " that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs or Excise respectively, and they are hereby authorised, in case of any seizure of vessels, boats, or goods, or the apprehension of any parties under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, to direct the distribution of the seizer's share of such vessels, boats, or goods, or of any penalties or rewards, so as to enable any officer or officers, or other person or persons acting under the authority of the said commissioners respectively, or through whose information or means such seizure shall have been made, or penalty recovered, or party apprehended, who shall not have been actually present at the making of the same, to participate in such proportions as the said commissioners shall respectively deem expedient."

Sect. 69. " Upon proof being made to the satisfaction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs or Excise, that any officer or officers, or person or persons as aforesaid, shall have acted collusively or negligently in the making of any seizure, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to direct that the whole or any part of the proportion of such seizure be applied to the use of H. M."

Sect. 70. " Reciting that it hath frequently happened that spirits have been imported and brought into the ports of this kingdom in small casks, and that the persons importing and bringing the same have alleged that the same had been found floating upon or sunk in the sea; and there is reason to believe that great frauds have been practised with regard to such spirits, by the persons so importing and bringing in the same, and so alleging as aforesaid; and it is therefore expedient, in order to prevent the like frauds in future, that persons not lawfully authorised to make seizure of such spirits should be restrained from intermeddling with or taking up any such spirits, being in casks of less content than forty gallons, which may be found floating upon or sunk in the sea;" it is enacted, " that no person or persons whatsoever, being a subject or subjects of H. M., his heirs and successors, other than an officer or officers of the navy, Customs, or Excise, or some person or persons authorised in that behalf, shall intermeddle with or take up any spirits, being in casks of less content than forty gallons, which may be found floating upon or sunk in the sea; and that if any spirits shall be taken up, and shall be found or discovered on board any vessel or boat belonging as aforesaid, within the limits of any port of the U. K. or Isle of Man, or within the distances in this act before mentioned, the vessel or boat on which the same shall be found or discovered, together with such spirits, shall be forfeited, and the person or persons in whose custody or possession the same shall be found shall forfeit the penalty of treble the value of such spirits, or the sum of 50*l*., at the election of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs."

Sect. 71. " Provided always, that if any person or persons shall discover any spirits, being in casks of less content than forty gallons, which may be found floating upon or sunk in the sea, and shall give information to any officer of the Customs, or other person or persons duly authorised to make seizure of such spirits, so that seizure shall be made of the same, the person or persons giving such information shall be entitled to and shall receive such reward as the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs may deem it expedient to direct."

6. Of officers, &c.

Where officers act negligently or collusively, commissioners may direct the whole or any part of seizure to be applied to H. M.'s use.

Spirits floating on the sea not to be taken up but by officers.

Penalty, forfeiture of spirits, &c.

Reward to persons giving information of goods floating or sunk in the sea.

VI. Of Proceedings before Justices, &c. (a)

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 73. " All penalties and forfeitures incurred or imposed by this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs shall and may be sued for, prosecuted, and recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of H. M.'s Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Courts of Exchequer in Scotland, or in Dublin, or in the royal Courts of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark or Man, in the name of H. But by 10 G. IV. c. 43, s. 2 & 3. The jurisdiction of local boards of Customs in Ireland, and of sub-commissions, was in certain cases repeated, and penalties may be recovered in the Exchequer there or before justices of the peace in Ireland.

6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 74. "In case any offence shall be committed upon the high seas, against this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, or any penalty or forfeiture shall be incurred upon the high seas for any breach of such act, such offence shall, for the purpose of prosecution, be deemed and taken to have been committed, and such penalties and forfeitures to have been incurred, at the place on land in the united kingdom, or the Isle of Man, into which the person committing such offence, or incurring such penalty or forfeiture, shall be taken, brought, or carried; and in case such place on land is situated within any city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate, as well any justice of the peace for such city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate, as any justice of the peace of the county within which such city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate is situated, shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine all cases of offences against such act so committed upon the high seas; any charter or act of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided always, that all offences against this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs committed in any city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate, shall be deemed and taken to have been committed in the county within which such city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate is situated; and as well any justices of the said city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate, as any justices of any county in which such city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate is situated, shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the same." (b)

(a) And see 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 56, s. 10, post, 206.

(b) Kite & Lane's case, 1 B. & C. 101. See Sections 3 & 49, ante; and see decision on the 57 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 1, in 2 Dowl. & R. 212, in which it appeared that A. and B. were found and arrested on board a boat laden with smuggled goods within the harbour of F., which was within a local exclusive jurisdiction, were afterwards taken, with the boat, &c. to the port of D. and convicted before two justices of the town and port of D., pursuant to stats. 45 Geo. III. c. 121, s. 7; 57 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 5; and 3 Geo. IV. c. 110: and it was held, that the conviction, which only stated that they had been found and taken on board a boat in the harbour of F., was bad, for not showing that the justices of D. had jurisdiction over the offence.

Semle, that in this case only the justices of the local jurisdiction of F. had authority to convict; and that the 45 Geo. III. c. 121, s. 7, gives jurisdiction to those justices only who reside near to the first port or place into which any ship, &c. shall be carried, or where any person shall be arrested by virtue of that clause.

But see a decision on 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, in re Nunn, 8 B. & C. 644. A vessel liable to forfeiture under this act was seized in a part of the river Orwell, where the justices of Ipswich had jurisdiction; and a person found on board the vessel was taken to Harwich, and prosecuted before two justices of that place, who convicted him in a penalty of 100*l.* for having been found on the high seas on board a vessel liable to forfeiture. Held that the justices of Harwich, being justices at the first place on land to which the party was carried, had jurisdiction to try the offence.

When the vessel was first boarded, she was just entering the harbour of Harwich. Held that, in the absence of all other evidence, a person then found on board might properly be found to have been on board on the high seas. In re Jas. Nunn, 8 Bar. & Cress. 644; 3 M. & Ryl. 75.

Offences at sea deemed to have been committed at place to which the offender is taken, brought, or carried. (a)

Sect. 75. " In cases where any information shall be exhibited before two (a) or more justices of the peace, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, for the recovery of any penalty under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs (except as is hereinafter otherwise provided for), it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, and he or they is or are hereby authorised and required to (b) summon the party accused, and upon his, her, or their appearance or default, to proceed to the examination of the matter, and upon due proof thereof, either upon the voluntary confession of such party, or upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses (which oath the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, is and are hereby empowered to administer), to convict the offender or offenders in the said penalty or penalties; and in case of the non-payment thereof, the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, is and are hereby authorised and required to cause the same, by warrant of distress and sale under their hands and seals, to be levied upon the goods and chattels of the said offender or offenders; (c) (or in case it shall appear to such justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, either upon the confession of such offender or offenders, or otherwise, that such offender or offenders has or have not sufficient goods and chattels whereon to levy the said penalty or penalties, it shall be lawful for such justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, in default of sufficient distress), to commit such offender or offenders to any of H. M.'s gaols in the county where the offence shall have arisen, or wherein the offender or offenders shall have been found, there to remain until the penalty or penalties shall be paid. Provided always, that when any person or persons shall have been committed by any justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, to any prison for the non-payment of such penalty, or in default of distress, it shall be lawful for the gaoler or keeper of such prison, and he is hereby required to discharge such person at the end of six calendar months from the date of such warrant by which the said person is committed to his custody, and he or they shall be wholly discharged from the payment of such penalty or penalties."

Justices, &c., in Isle of Man, to summon the accused, and in default of appearance to proceed to hearing and conviction. [See 7 Geo. 4, c. 48, s. 18, post, and the general regulations to summons, &c. in 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 56, post.]

Sect. 76. " Where any party shall or may be convicted before any two or more of H. M.'s justices of the peace, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster as aforesaid, in any penalty or penalties incurred as aforesaid (except as is hereinafter provided), it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster of the Isle of Man, in cases where upon consideration of the circumstances he or they shall deem it expedient so to do, to mitigate the payment of the said penalty or penalties, so as the sum to be paid by such party be not less than one-fourth of the amount of the penalty in which such party shall have been convicted."

Justices empowered to mitigate in certain cases.

Sect. 77. " All suits, indictments, or informations exhibited for any offence against this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, in any of H. M.'s Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Courts of Exchequer in Scotland, or in Dublin, or in the royal Courts of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, shall and may be had, brought, sued, or exhibited, within three years next after the date of the offence committed; and shall and may be exhibited before any two or more justices of the peace, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster in the Isle of Man, within six months next after the date of the offence committed."

6. Proceedings before justices, &c.

Indictments for offences against this act may be inquired into in any county of England.

Mode of proceeding before justices for condemnation of seized goods.

Persons detained for certain offences to pay 100l.; or, if seafaring men, to be sent into the naval service. (a)

Sect. 78. "Any indictment or information which shall be found or prosecuted for any offence against this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs shall and may be inquired of, examined, tried, and determined in any county of England; and any such indictment or information which shall be found, commenced, or prosecuted in Scotland, may be inquired of, examined, tried, and determined in any county in Scotland; and any such indictment or information which shall be found or commenced in Ireland may be inquired of, examined, tried, and determined in any county in Ireland, in such manner and form as if the offence had been committed in the said county where the said indictment or information shall be tried."

Sect. 79. "In all cases of information exhibited before any two or more justices of the peace, or any governor, deputy-governor, or deemster as aforesaid, for the forfeiture of any goods whatsoever, seized under any act or acts relating to the revenue of Customs, or for the prevention of smuggling, and where the party to whom such goods belonged, or from whom they were seized, is known, it shall be lawful for the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and required to summon the said party, and upon his, her, or their appearance or default, to proceed to the examination of the matter of fact, and, upon due proof that the said goods are liable to forfeiture under this or any act relating to the revenue of Customs, to condemn the said goods; and in case the party from whom the said goods have been seized is not known, it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, and he or they is and are hereby required, to cause public notice to be stuck up in the Royal Exchange if the seizure is made in London, at the market-cross if in Edinburgh, and at the Royal Exchange if in Dublin; and if the seizure is made at any other place, then a notice shall be publicly read by the public crier at the next market-place, stating that the goods have been so seized, and that the hearing relative to the same will take place on a certain day, not being less than eight days from the date of the said notice; and in default of any person's attendance in consequence of the said notice, the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, are to proceed to the hearing and condemnation of the said goods as aforesaid."

Sect. 80. "It shall and may be lawful for any two or more justices of the peace, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster as aforesaid, before whom any person liable to be arrested and detained, and who shall have been arrested and detained, for being found or discovered to have been on board any vessel or boat liable to forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, or for unshipping, carrying, conveying, or concealing, or aiding, assisting, or being concerned in unshipping, carrying, conveying, or concealing any spirits or tobacco liable to forfeiture under this or any such act, shall be carried, on the confession of such person of such offence, or on proof thereof upon the oaths (b) of one or more credible witness or witnesses, to convict such person of any such offence; and every such person so convicted, as aforesaid shall immediately, upon such conviction, pay into the hands of such justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, for the use of H. M., the penalty of 100l., without any mitigation whatever, for any such offence of which he shall be so convicted as aforesaid; or in default thereof the said justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, shall, and he and they is and are hereby respectively authorised and required, by warrant under his or their hand and seal or hands and seals, to commit such person so convicted as aforesaid, and making such default as aforesaid, to any gaol or prison, there to remain until such penalty shall be paid. Provided, that if the person convicted of any such offence or offences shall be a seaman or seafaring man, and fit and able to serve H. M. in his naval service, and shall not prove that he is not a subject of H. M., it shall and may be lawful for any such justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, and he and they is and are hereby required, in lieu of such penalty, by warrant under his or their hand and seal or hands and seals, to order any officer of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorised and on full pay, or officer of Customs or Excise, to carry or convey, or cause to be carried or conveyed, such person on board of any of H. M.'s ships, in order to his serving H. M. in his naval service for the term of five years: (a) and if such person shall, at any time within that period, by any means escape or desert from such custody or service respectively, he shall be liable at any time or times afterwards to be again arrested and detained by any officer of the Customs, or any other person, and delivered over as aforesaid to complete his service of five years. Provided also, that if it shall be made to appear to any such justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, that convenient arrangement cannot be made, at the time of the conviction of the said party, for immediately carrying or conveying such seaman or seafaring man, so convicted as aforesaid, on board any of H. M.'s ships in order to serve H. M., it shall and may be lawful for any such justices, or governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, to commit any such seaman or seafaring man so convicted as aforesaid to any prison or gaol, there to remain in safe custody for any period not exceeding one month, in order that time may be given to make arrangements for so conveying such seaman or seafaring man on board any of H. M.'s ships as aforesaid. Provided also, that the commissioners of H. M.'s treasury, or any three or more of them, shall have full power and authority to remit, or mitigate any such penalty, punishment, or service as aforesaid, whether the parties shall be seafaring men or otherwise."

Sect. 81. "If any person so convicted as a seaman or a seafaring man, and carried on board any of H. M.'s ships of war, shall, on examination by any surgeon or surgeons of H. M.'s navy, within one week after being so carried on board, be deemed to be unfit, and shall be refused on that account to be received into H. M.'s service, such person shall, as soon as convenient, be conveyed before any two or more justices of the peace, or any governor, deputy-governor, or deemster as aforesaid; and upon proof that he has been refused to be received on board any of H. M.'s ships as fit for H. M.'s service, such justices, governor, deputy-governor, or deemster shall, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and required to call upon the said person to pay the penalty of 100*l.*, without hearing any evidence other than such proof as last aforesaid; and in default of immediate payment of the same into the hands of the said justices, governor, deputy-governor, or deemster, for the use of H. M., to commit the said person to any gaol or prison, there to remain until such penalty shall be paid. Provided always, that no person so convicted as aforesaid, and ordered to serve on board any of H. M.'s ships, shall be sent away from the U. K. on board of any such ship in a less time than one month from the date of such conviction."

Sect. 82. "All informations before justices of the peace, governors, deputy-governors, or deemsters, for any offences committed against this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, and all convictions for such offences, and warrants of justices of the peace, governors, deputy-governors, or deemsters, founded upon such convictions, shall be drawn

6. Proceedings before justices, &c. respectively in the form or to the effect in the schedules to this act annexed."

Persons arrested for certain offences may be detained by order.

Sect. 83. Reciting that "it is expedient that time should be allowed to prepare informations, convictions, and warrants of commitment;" it is enacted, "that where any person or persons shall have been arrested and detained by any officer or officers of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorised and on full pay, or any officer of Customs or Excise, or any person or persons acting in his or their aid or assistance, or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, for any offence under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, and shall have been taken and carried before any(a) two justices of the peace, to be dealt with according to law, if it shall appear to such justices that there is reasonable cause to detain such person or persons, such justices may and they are hereby authorised to order such person or persons to be detained a reasonable time, as well before as after any information has been exhibited against such party; and at the expiration of such time, such justices(a) may proceed finally to hear and determine the matter."

If suit on account of seizure, and judge certify that there was probable cause, plaintiff to have 2*d.* damages only, and defendant fined not more than one shilling.

Sect. 92. And be it further enacted, "that in case any information or suit shall be commenced or brought to trial on account of the seizure of any vessel, boat or goods, merchandizes or commodities whatsoever, or any horses or other animals, or any carriage seized as forfeited by this or any act relating to the revenue of the Customs, wherein a verdict shall be found for the claimant thereof, and it shall appear to the judge or Court before whom the same shall have been tried that there was a probable cause of seizure, such judge or Court shall certify on the record that there was such probable cause; and in such case the claimant shall not be entitled to any costs of suit whatsoever, nor shall the person who made such seizure be liable to any action, indictment, or other suit or prosecution on account of such seizure; and that in case any action, indictment, or other suit or prosecution shall be commenced and brought to trial against any person or persons whatsoever, on account of any such seizure as aforesaid, wherein a verdict shall be given against the defendant or defendants, if the Court or judge before whom such action, indictment, or prosecution shall be tried, shall have certified on the said record that there was a probable cause for such seizure, then the plaintiff, besides the things seized, or the value thereof, shall not be entitled to above two-pence damages, nor to any costs of suit, nor shall the defendant in such prosecution be fined above one shilling."

Limitation of action against officers making seizures. Notice.

Sect. 93. And be it further enacted, "that no writ shall be sued out against, nor a copy of any process served upon, any officer of the army, navy, marines, Customs or Excise, or against any person acting under the direction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs, for any thing done in the execution of or by reason of his office, until one calendar month next after notice in writing shall have been delivered to him, or left at his usual place of abode, by the attorney or agent for the party who intends to sue out such writ or process as aforesaid, in which notice shall be clearly and explicitly contained the cause of action, the name and place of abode of the person who is to bring such action, and the name and place of abode of the attorney or agent; and that a fee of twenty shillings shall be paid for the preparing or serving of every such notice, and no more."

Fee.

No evidence to be adduced beyond the notice.

Sect. 94. Provided always, and be it further enacted, "that no plaintiff in any case where an action shall be grounded on any act done by the defendant shall be permitted to produce any evidence of the cause of such action, except such as shall be contained in the notice to be given as aforesaid, or shall receive any verdict against such officer or person, unless he shall prove, on the trial of such action, that such notice was given; and in default of such proof, the defendant in such action shall receive a verdict and costs as aforesaid."

Proof of notice.

(a) Or one justice. 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 7, post, 206.

Sect. 95. And be it further enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for any such officer or other person to whom such notice shall have been given as aforesaid, at any time within one calendar month after such notice shall have been given, to tender amends to the party complaining, or to his, her, or their agent or attorney, and in case the same is not accepted to plead such tender in bar to any action to be brought against him grounded on such writ or process, together with the plea of not guilty, and other plea with leave of the Court; and if upon issue joined thereon, the jury shall find the amends so tendered to have been sufficient, that then they shall give a verdict for the defendant; and in such case, or in case the plaintiff shall become nonsuited or discontinue his, her, or their action, or in case judgment shall be given for such defendant upon demurrer, then such defendant shall be entitled to the like costs as he would have been entitled to in case he had pleaded the general issue only; but if, upon issue joined, the jury shall find that no amends were tendered, or that the same were not sufficient, or shall find against the defendant in such other plea or pleas, then they shall give a verdict for the plaintiff, and such damages as they shall think proper, together with his, her, or their costs of suit."

6. Proceedings before justices, &c.

Officer may tender amends.

In what case costs as if general issue only pleaded.

Sect. 96. And be it further enacted, "that in case such officer or other person as aforesaid shall neglect to tender any amends, or shall have tendered insufficient amends before the action brought, it shall and may be lawful for him, by leave of the Court where such action shall be brought, at any time before issue joined, to pay into Court such sum of money as he shall see fit, whereupon such proceedings, orders, and judgments shall be had, made, and given in and by such Court, as in other actions where the defendant is allowed to pay money into Court."

Officer neglecting to tender amends may pay money into Court.

Sect. 97. And be it further enacted, "that if any action or suit shall be brought or commenced as aforesaid, such action or suit shall be brought or commenced within six months next after the cause of action shall have arisen, and not afterwards, and shall be laid and tried in the county or place where the facts were committed, and not in any other county or place, and the defendant or defendants shall and may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence at any trial had thereupon; and if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuited, or discontinue his, her, or their action or suit, or if, upon a verdict or demurrer, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall or may receive treble costs, and have such remedy for the same as any defendant or defendants can or may have in other cases where costs are given by law."

Limitation of such action.

General issue.

Sect. 98. "Whenever any person shall be charged with any offence against this or any act relating to the revenue of Customs, or for which he or she may be prosecuted by indictment or information in H. M.'s Court of King's Bench, and the same shall be made appear to any judge of the same Court, by affidavit, or by certificate of an information or indictment being filed against such person in the said Court for such offence, it shall and may be lawful for such judge to issue his warrant under his hand and seal, and thereby to cause such person to be apprehended and brought before him, or some other judge of the same Court, or before some one of H. M.'s justices of the peace, in order to his or her being bound to the king's majesty, with two sufficient sureties, in such sum as in the said warrant shall be expressed, with condition to appear in the said Court at the time mentioned in such warrant, and to answer to all and singular indictments or informations for any such offence; and in case any such person shall neglect or refuse to become bound as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such judge or justice respectively, to commit such person to the common gaol of the county, city, or place where the offence shall have been committed, or where he or she shall have been apprehended, there to remain until he or she shall become bound as aforesaid, or shall be discharged by order of the Court in term-time, or of one of the judges of the said court in vacation; and the recognizance to be thereupon taken shall be returned and filed in the said Court, and shall continue in force until such person shall have been acquitted of such offence, or, in case of conviction, shall have received judgment for the same, unless sooner ordered by the Court to be discharged; and that where any person, either by virtue of such warrant of commitment aforesaid, or by virtue of any writ of capias ad respondendum, issued out of the said Court, is now detained or shall hereafter be committed to and detained in any gaol for want of bail, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information to cause a copy thereof to be delivered to such person, or to the gaoler, keeper, or turnkey of the gaol wherein such person is or shall be so detained, with a notice thereon indorsed, that unless such person shall, within eight days from the time of such delivery of a copy of the indictment or information as aforesaid, cause an appearance, and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in the said Court to such indictment or information, an appearance and the plea of not guilty will be entered thereto in the name of such person; and in case he or she shall thereupon, for the space of eight days after the delivery of a copy of such indictment or information as aforesaid, neglect to cause an appearance, and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in the said Court to such indictment or information, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information, upon affidavit being made and filed in the Court of the delivery of copy of such indictment or information, with such notice indorsed thereon as aforesaid, to such person, or to such gaoler, keeper, or turnkey, as the case may be, which affidavit may be made before any judge or commissioner of the said Court, authorised to take affidavits in the said Court, to cause an appearance and the plea of not guilty to be entered in the said Court to such indictment or information for such person; and such proceedings shall be had thereupon as if the defendant in such indictment or information appeared and pleaded not guilty, according to the usual course of the said Court; and that if, upon trial of such indictment or information, any defendant so committed and detained as aforesaid shall be acquitted of all the offences therein charged upon him or her, it shall be lawful for the judge before whom such trial shall be had, although he may not be one of the judges of the said Court of King's Bench, to order that such defendant shall be forthwith discharged out of custody as to his or her commitment as aforesaid, and such defendant shall be thereupon discharged accordingly."

Indictments and suits to be commenced in the name of attorney-general, or an officer of Customs, under direction of commissioners of Customs.

Sect. 100. "No indictment shall be preferred or suit commenced for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise (except in the cases of persons detained and carried before two or more justices in pursuance of this act), unless such suit shall be commenced in the name of H. M.'s attorney-general, or unless such indictment shall be preferred under the direction of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs or Excise, or unless such suit shall be commenced in the name of some officer of Customs or Excise, under the direction of the said commissioners respectively."

The attorney-general may enter a noli prosequi on informations exhibited for penalties.

Sect. 101. "If any prosecution whatever shall be commenced for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture incurred under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs and Excise, it shall be lawful for H. M.'s attorney-general, if he is satisfied that such fine, penalty, or forfeiture was incurred without any intention of fraud, or that it is inexpedient to proceed in the said prosecution, to stop all further proceedings, by entering a noli prosequi, or otherwise, on such information, as well with respect to the share of such fine, penalty, or forfeiture to which any officer or officers may be entitled, as to the king's share thereof."

Onus probandi to lie on the claimer.

Sect. 102. "If any goods shall be seized for non-payment of duties or any other cause of forfeiture, and any dispute shall arise whether the Customs, Excise, or inland duties have been paid for the same, or the same have been lawfully imported, or concerning the place from whence such goods were brought, then and in such case the proof thereof shall lie on the owner or claimer of such goods, and not on the officer who shall seize and stop the same."

Sect. 103. "No justice of the peace, who is a collector or comptroller, or otherwise connected with the collection of the Customs or Excise, shall take cognizance of any matter relating to the summary convictions of persons offending against this act."

Sect. 104. "In case of any information or proceedings had under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, the averment that the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs or Excise have directed or elected such information or proceedings to be instituted, or that any vessel is foreign or British, or that any person detained is or is not a subject of H. M., or that any person detained is or is not a seaman or seafaring man, or fit and able to serve H. M. in his naval service, or that any person is an officer of the Customs, shall be sufficient, without proof as to such fact or facts, unless the defendant in such case shall prove to the contrary."

Sect. 105. "If upon any trial a question shall arise whether any person is an officer of the army, navy, or marines, being duly authorized and on full pay, or officer of Customs or Excise, evidence of his having acted as such shall be deemed sufficient, and such person shall not be required to produce his commission or deputation unless sufficient proof shall be given to the contrary; and every such officer, and any person acting in his aid or assistance, shall be deemed a competent witness upon the trial of any suit or information, on account of any seizure or penalty as aforesaid, notwithstanding such officer or other person may be entitled to the whole or any part of such seizure or penalty."

Sect. 72. "For the necessary subsistence of any poor person confined in the united kingdom, or in the Isle of Man, under or by virtue of any exchequer or other process for the recovery of any duties or penalties, either upon bond or otherwise, under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, sued for under or by virtue of any order of the commissioners of H. M.'s Customs or excise, it shall and may be lawful to and for the commissioners of Customs or Excise to cause an allowance, not exceeding the sum of 7½d., and not less than 4½d. per day, to be made to any such poor person, out of any money in their hands arising from the duties of Customs or Excise, as the case may require."

By 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 17. "No writ of certiorari shall issue from H. M.'s Court of King's Bench to remove any proceedings before any justice or justices of the peace under any act for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of the Customs; nor shall any writ of habeas corpus issue to bring up the body of any person who shall have been convicted before any justice or justices of the peace under any such act, unless the party against whom such proceeding shall have been directed, or who shall have been so convicted, or his attorney or agent, shall state in an affidavit in writing, to be duly sworn, the grounds of objection to such proceedings or conviction; and that upon the return to such writ of certiorari or habeas corpus, no objection shall be taken or considered other than such as shall have been stated in such affidavit, and that it shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace, and they are hereby required, to amend any information, conviction, or warrant of commitment for any offence under any such act."

Sect. 18. "It shall not be lawful for the gaoler or keeper of any prison, in virtue of any authority to him given by the said act for the prevention of smuggling, to discharge any person who shall have been committed to such prison for non-payment of any penalty or penalties, if such penalty or penalties shall amount to or exceed the sum of 100*l.*; any thing in the said act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 20. "Upon the trial of any issue, or upon any judicial hearing or investigation touching any penalty or forfeiture under any law or laws re-

M.'s Customs or Excise respectively, the letter or instructions which shall have been officially received by the officer of Customs or Excise, at the place or district where such penalty or forfeiture shall have been incurred, or shall be alleged to have been incurred, for his government, and in which such order is mentioned or referred to, and under which said instructions he shall have acted as such officer, shall be admitted and taken as sufficient evidence and proof of such order, to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

By 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 56, s. 4. "If any person shall be proceeded against under any act now in force or hereafter to be made for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, and the information exhibited against such person shall charge him as being a seaman, and fit and able to serve H. M. in his naval service, and it shall appear to the justices before whom such person is brought that he is guilty of the offence with which he is charged, but that he is not fit for H. M.'s naval service, that then and in such case it shall be lawful for such justices, and they are hereby required to amend such information accordingly, and to convict such person in the penalty of 100*l.*, as if proceeded against as not being a seaman or fit for H. M.'s naval service."

Sect. 7. "In all cases where any information is exhibited for any offence against any act now in force or hereafter to be made for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, such information may be received by one justice of the peace, and such justice may issue a summons for the appearance of the party against whom such information is exhibited before any two justices of the peace; and after the hearing and conviction before any two justices of the peace, any one of the said justices, or any other justice of the peace, may issue his warrant to enforce the conviction, and such warrant shall and may be executed in any county in England; and where, in default of payment of the penalty sought for, the imprisonment of the party takes place for the space of six months, such time of imprisonment shall be reckoned from the time of the commencement of such imprisonment."

Sect. 8. "Where any information shall be exhibited before a justice or justices of the peace, for any fine, penalty, or forfeiture under any act now in force or hereafter to be made for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, and it is necessary to summon the party against whom such information is exhibited, it shall be deemed a good and sufficient service of such summons if the same be left at the house or usual place of residence of the said party, and directed to such party."

Sect. 10. Reciting that, "in proceedings under the said act for the prevention of smuggling, difficulties frequently arise in procuring the attendance of two magistrates who have jurisdiction in the county where the offence has been committed, and delay is thereby occasioned; it is enacted, that where the attendance of two magistrates having jurisdiction in the county where the offence is committed cannot be conveniently obtained, it shall be lawful for a magistrate of any adjoining county, with one magistrate of the county in which the offence was committed, to hear and determine any information exhibited before them, and to have the same powers and authorities in all respects as to any proceeding had under the said last-mentioned or any other act for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, as if they were both magistrates for the county in which the offence was committed."

Sect. 11. "All penalties and forfeitures which may be recovered before any justices of the peace under any act for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, on any prosecution by order of the commissioners of Customs, shall be paid to the commissioners of

H. M.'s Customs, and on any prosecution by order of the commissioners of Excise shall be paid to the commissioners of H. M.'s Excise, or to the person appointed by them respectively to receive the same; and such penalties and forfeitures shall be applied by the said commissioners respectively in such manner as the law directs."

6. Proceedings before justices, &c.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 25, "authorises the appointment of a person to be solicitor or attorney on behalf of H. M., under the orders and directions of any commissioners of the treasury, Customs, Excise, or stamps, or any branch of revenue, although he be not an admitted solicitor or attorney." (a)

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 7. Reciting, "that by the said act for the prevention of smuggling it is enacted, that two justices of the peace may order any person or persons who shall have been arrested and detained for any offence against any act for the prevention of smuggling to be detained a reasonable time, as well before as after any information shall have been exhibited against such party; and that great difficulty had arisen in procuring the attendance of the same two justices who ordered the party to be detained, to hear and determine the case; and it is expedient that one or more justices should have the power to direct such person or persons to be detained a reasonable time, as well before as after any information shall have been exhibited against such party: it is enacted, that in all cases where any person or persons shall be detained for any offence against the laws now in force or hereafter to be made for the prevention of smuggling, or relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, and shall be taken before one or more justices of the peace, to be dealt with according to law, if it shall appear to such justice or justices that there is reasonable cause to detain such person or persons, such justice or justices may, and he and they is and are hereby authorised to order such person or persons to be detained a reasonable time, as well before as after any information has been exhibited against such party, and at the expiration of such time any two or more justices may proceed finally to hear and determine the matter; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Persons detained under the smuggling laws, one justice may commit before hearing the case.

By 10 Geo. IV. c. 10, persons adjudged to serve in the navy, under the smuggling-laws, are not to receive more than half-pay and wages, and half the pay is by the certificate of two magistrates to be applied for support of wife and children.

VII. The Prescribed Forms of Proceeding.

VII. Prescribed forms of proceeding.

Schedule to which the act 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, refers. (a)

A. Form of information before justices of the peace, where the party charged is a subject of His Majesty, and a pecuniary penalty is inflicted.

County of } Be it remembered, that on the                      day of                      , in the year } of our Lord                      , A. B., officer of Customs, who is directed by to wit.        } the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs to prefer this information, gives us,                      , esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, to under- stand and be informed that C. D., being a subject of His Majesty, on the day of                      , in the year of our Lord                      [here state the offence,] contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, whereby the said C. D. hath forfeited the sum of                      pounds.

1. Information against a subject of His Majesty.

(a) See 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 82, ante, ante, 205; and 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 56, s. 201; and see the powers to amend these proceedings, 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 17, 4, ante, 206.

(b) See decision on this act, West v. Taunton, 6 Bingh. 404.

7. Prescribed forms, &c.

B. Form of a conviction to be used for an offence against this act, in cases where a pecuniary penalty is inflicted upon the offender being a subject of His Majesty.

2. Conviction.

County of } Be it remembered, that on the                      day of                      , in the year of to wit. } our Lord                      , an information was exhibited by A. B. officer of Customs, before us,                      , esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, against C. D.; which said information charged, that the said C. D., on the                      day of                      , in the year of our Lord                      [here state the offence as in the information], contrary to the form of the statute, which offence has been duly proved before us the said justices. We do therefore adjudge, that the said
C. D. hath forfeited for his said offence the sum of                      pounds. Given under our hands and seals, the                      day of                      . [In cases where the magistrates exercise the power of mitigation, add these words, which said sum of                      we the said justices do hereby mitigate to the sum of                      .]

C. Form of warrant of commitment to gaol for a penalty.

3. Commitment.

County of } To A. B., officer of Customs, and to E. F., the gaoler or keeper of the to wit. }                      , at                      , in the                      .
Whereas C. D. has been duly convicted before us,                      , esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, of having [state the offence as in the information]: and whereas we, the said justices, did adjudge that the said C. D. had forfeited for his said offence the sum of                      pounds (which sum of                      pounds we the said justices did mitigate to the sum of                      ;) (and whereas it appears to us, the said justices, that the said C. D. has not sufficient goods or chattels whereon to levy the said sum of                      , and) which the said sum of                      pounds has not been paid:
these are therefore to require you, the said A. B., forthwith to take, carry, and convey the said C. D. to the                      at                      , in the                      , and to deliver him into the custody of the gaoler, or keeper of the said                      and we, the said justices, do hereby authorize and require you the said E. F., the gaoler or keeper of the said , to receive and take the said C. D. into your custody, and him safely to keep until he shall duly pay the said sum of                      . Given under our hands and seals at                      , in the                      of                      , this                      day of                      , in the year of our Lord 183—.

D. Warrant of distress.

4. Distress-warrant.

County of } To A. B. to wit. }
Whereas C. D. has been duly convicted before us                      , esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, of the offence of having [here state the offence as in the information;] and whereas the said C. D. has forfeited, for his said offence, the sum of                      pounds, which said sum of                      pounds has not been paid: these are therefore to command you, the said A. B., to levy the said sum of                      by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said C. D. And we the said justices do hereby order and direct the goods and chattels so to be distrained, to be sold and disposed of within                      days after such distraint, unless the said sum of for which such distress shall be made, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping such distress, shall be sooner paid. And you the said A. B. are hereby commanded to certify to us, the said justices, on the                      day of next ensuing, what you shall do by virtue of this warrant. Given under our hands and seals at                      , in the                      , this                      day of                      , in the year of our Lord 18—.

E. Form of an information before justices of the peace, where the party charged is a seaman or seafaring man, and fit and able to serve His Majesty in his naval service.

5. Information where offender a seaman and fit for service.

County of } Be it remembered, that on the                      day of                      , in the year of to wit. } our Lord                      , A. B., officer of Customs, who is directed by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs to prefer this information, gives us, , esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, to understand and be informed that C. D., being a subject of His Majesty, and a seaman and seafaring man, and fit and able to serve His Majesty in his naval service, on the day of , in the year of our Lord [here state the offence], contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, whereby the said C. D. hath become liable to serve His Majesty in his naval service for the term of five years.

7. Prescribed Forms, &c.

F. Form of a conviction where the party convicted is a seaman or seafaring man, and fit and able to serve His Majesty in his naval service.

County of } Be it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , an information was exhibited before us, to wit. } esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, against C. D. by A. B. officer of Customs, which said information charged, that the said C. D. being a subject of His Majesty, and a seafaring man, and fit and able to serve His Majesty in his naval service, on the day of , in the year of our Lord [here state the offence as in the information], contrary to the form of the statute, which offence has been duly proved before us the said justices; and it appearing to us, the said justices, that the said C. D. is a seafaring man, and fit and able to serve His Majesty in his naval service, we the said justices do therefore adjudge the said C. D. to serve in His Majesty's naval service for the term of five years. Given under our hands and seals, this day of , in the year of our Lord .

6. Conviction in same case.

G. Form of a warrant of commitment to serve in the navy.

County of } To A. B., officer of , and to the commander of one of His Majesty's ships of war. to wit. } Whereas C. D. has been duly convicted before us, esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, upon the information of , officer of Customs, of having [here state the offence, as charged in the information]; and whereas the said C. D. has not proved that he is not a subject of His Majesty, and being a seafaring man, and fit and able to serve His Majesty in his naval service, we the said justices did adjudge the said C. D. to serve His said Majesty in his naval service for the space of five years, pursuant to the statute in that case made and provided: these are therefore to require you the said A. B. to carry and convey the said C. D. on board of one of His Majesty's ships, in order to his serving His Majesty in his naval service; and we, the said justices, do hereby require the commander of His Majesty's ship to whom this warrant is delivered to receive and take the said C. D. on board His said Majesty's ship, in order to his serving in his naval service for the period of five years as aforesaid. Given under our hands and seals, at the of , this day of , in the year of our Lord 18—.

7. Commitment to serve in navy.

H. Form of information before justices of the peace, where the party charged is not a subject of His Majesty.

County of } Be it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , A. B., officer of Customs, who is directed by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs to prefer this information, to wit. } esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace, gives us, and be informed that C. D., not being a subject of His Majesty, on the day of , in the year of our Lord [here state the offence, setting forth that the same took place within one league of the coast of this kingdom], contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, whereby the said A. B. hath forfeited the sum of .

8. Information where offender not a subject.

If the prosecution be by information before justices, the same must be exhibited within six months. The months are lunar, calculated exclusive of the day of the offence. (a) If the information be within the time, that suffices, though the conviction be afterwards. (b)

8. Practice, &c. before Magistrates, &c.

(2.) By whom the Information, &c. is to be instituted.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 73, all penalties and forfeitures incurred or imposed by the Customs' laws shall be sued for, prosecuted, and recovered in the name of the Attorney-General, or of an officer or officers of Customs, except in cases of persons detained and carried before two or more justices, in pursuance of this act (sect. 100), unless such indictment shall be preferred under the direction of the commissioners of Customs or Excise (sect. 100). Sect. 101 authorizes the Attorney-General to enter a nolle prosequi in certain cases.

(2.) Who to be the prosecutor.

If an officer of the Customs be guilty of collusion, he forfeits 500*l.*, and is to be dismissed the service (sec. 35) ante, 186.

The form of information prescribed in the act 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 82, and given in the schedule, includes these words: "A. B., officer of Customs, who is directed by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs to prefer this information, gives," &c. Therefore no common informer can of his own accord proceed for a penalty, &c. ante, 207.

(3.) Against whom an Information, &c. may be laid.

Neither infancy nor coverture is any bar to a prosecution for a penalty under the Custom laws. (c)

Neither a son or servant is excusable for committing an offence by the command or coercion of his father or master. (d)

And in general a master is responsible for the acts of his servants, though done without his privity or knowledge. (e)

This liability is qualified by some of the modern acts. (f)

And other acts provide for the punishment of such servants. (g)

Partners also are respectively liable for the misconduct of each other in their joint trade, and may be proceeded against jointly or separately. (h)

(4.) Before whom the Information, &c. is to be laid.

Penalties and forfeitures for offences against the Customs are to be recovered by action of debt, &c. in the superior Courts, or by information before any two or more justices in the united kingdom.—6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 73. (ante, 197) or the information may be before one justice, under 7 and 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 7, ante, 206.

(4.) Before whom.

And offences against these acts, committed on the high seas, are to be deemed to have been committed where offender was "taken, brought, or carried," and local and county justices have a concurrent jurisdiction (sect. 74, 75, ante, 198).

8. Practice, &c. before Magistrates, &c.

And where the attendance of two magistrates of the county in which the offence was committed cannot be conveniently had, a magistrate of the adjoining county may act with a magistrate of the proper county. (a)

Justices are bound to hear an information duly lodged, and either to dismiss it or determine it, and may be compelled to do so. (b)

(5.) Of the Information and Requisites.

(b.) The information.

If the proceeding is by information before justices of the peace, the 6 Geo. IV., c. 108. s. 82, ante, 201, and the schedule require that it shall be before two justices, and in a prescribed form. It should seem, therefore, that the information must be in writing, though that form is not in general necessary. And as the form of the conviction (c) directs that the same shall describe the offence as in the information, such information itself must very accurately and correctly state the offence. (d) It was held that where an information of seizure lays the number of things seized under a videlicet, the allegation is material, and that the proofs, verdict, and judgment, are limited to the number so laid, or a number within it; and such an information requires an averment of the quantity of things seized, and would be bad without it. (e)

The information must state the offence with certainty, and not in the alternative; and therefore an information, stating that defendant imported, or caused to be imported, foreign silks, was held bad. (f)

It should seem that though usual, it is not necessary to conclude against the form of the statute, where the offence is minutely described, so as to bring the case within the terms of the act; at least, that this is so in the case of a revenue information in the Court of Exchequer. (g)

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 7, and 9 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 7, provide, that one justice may receive the information, and issue a summons for the appearance of the party before any two justices. (h)

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 4, provides that, if smugglers are prosecuted as seamen fit for service, and it appears to the justices that they are not, they are to amend the information accordingly, ante, 206; and the 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 17, directs any justice or justices of the peace to amend any information, conviction, or warrant of commitment, for any offence under any act for the prevention of smuggling, ante, 205.

(6.) Of the Process upon the Information, &c.

(c.) The process, summons, &c.

When the proceeding is in the superior Court, the 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, s. 84, 85, 86, 87, and 88, directs that a capias shall issue as the first process, specifying the amount of the penalty, and bail is to be given by the defendant for his appearance, and upon appearance bail is to be given for payment of the penalties: and if defendant be taken to prison, service of a copy of the information on the gaoler is sufficient; and if he neglect to appear for one term, judgment by default is to be entered; and execution upon a judgment after verdict is to lie against person, as well as real and personal estate. If the defendant is not worth 5*l.*, he may defend in forma pauperis. The sheriff is to grant a warrant on writ of capias, indorsed by one of the solicitors for the Customs, and be indemnified from escapes in cases where a warrant has been granted at request of solicitor for Customs.

8. Practice, &c. before Magistrates, &c.

If the proceedings be before justices, they should issue their summons to the party accused, and which should be directed to the party, and should contain the substance of the charge, and fix a day and place for the appearance, allowing a sufficient time for the appearance of the party and his witnesses, and should be signed by the justices. There was no general provision in the act relating to Customs respecting the form of the summons, and therefore it was governed by the general law on the subject (a) until the passing of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 7 & 8. ante, 206. But the 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, s. 75, regulated the summons where the offender was in the Isle of Man. (b) The 3 Geo. IV., c. 23, in general authorizes one justice to receive an information and issue the summons, though two or more must afterwards concur in the adjudication. But it should seem that, in proceedings for penalties against the Customs, they must have been before two justices. (c) But at length the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 7, enacted that one justice may receive the information, and issue the summons to appear before any two justices. (d)

Summons.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, s. 8, provides that it shall be deemed a good service of the summons if the same be left at the house or usual place of residence of the party, and directed to such party. (e)

Service of the summons.

But notwithstanding this provision, the summons should, in all cases, if possible, be personally served a reasonable time before the time appointed for hearing the information; (f) and unless the defendant appear, the summoning officer must swear to the due service of the summons before the two justices can proceed, and though appearance may cure the defect in summons, yet if the defendant show that he was too recently summoned, he may pray, and ought to have granted, a postponement of the time of hearing.

(7.) Of the Apprehension, Appearance or Default.

If the proceeding be in the superior Courts, we have seen that the party may be arrested, and imprisoned in default of bail. But no express power is given to justices to arrest or apprehend a party before conviction, on an information for penalties, but only to summon him, and, in default of his appearance, to proceed to the examination of the matter, and, upon due proof of the offence, to give judgment ex-parte.

7. Of the apprehension, appearance, or default, &c.

The 9 Geo. IV., c. 76, s. 7, (g) however, authorizes one justice, either before or after information, to commit, for a reasonable time, and until the hearing, any person arrested and detained for any offence against any act for the prevention of smuggling. But a magistrate is liable in trespass if he commit a party, even charged with felony, for re-examination for an unreasonable time. (h)

8. Practice, &c. before Magistrates, &c.(8.) Proceedings on hearing Informations, &c.

(8.) Proceedings on hearing, &amp;c.

Non-appearance.

Appearance, confession, &amp;c.

If the defendant does not appear, the due service of the summons must be proved on oath; and though the party does not attend, still the justices are bound to observe the same formalities in inquiring into and deciding upon the merits of the case, as if he actually appeared and made defence. (a)

Appearance, as we have seen, cures all irregularities in the mode of summoning. The defendant has at least a right to have his attorney present before the justices, if not a right to have his defence conducted by such attorney; and if the magistrates direct the attorney to be removed from the justice-room, an action of trespass against him may be supported. (b)

Upon appearance of the party, he must first plead to the information. If the defendant confesses the charge, the justices have nothing more to do than pass judgment and impose the penalty, or take such other course as the statutes point out. Care, however, should be taken that the party clearly understands the charge with reference to which his confession is to be taken. The confession of the defendant will not supply the want of any due formalities in the information.

If the defendant denies the charge, and requires time to make his defence, he should be allowed a reasonable interval for that purpose.

The defendant, it seems, may appear, and defend by counsel or attorney, or by both. (c)

Evidence against the offender.

After appearance, and no time is prayed, the next step is to substantiate the information by testimony produced on the part of the prosecutor. (d)

It is a general rule, that if the facts which constitute the offence are all of a positive nature, they must be established affirmatively by the prosecutor. But, where they are of a negative nature, and afford ground of defence and exemption from penalty, they must come by way of defence in the proofs on the part of the defendant. (e)

Certain averments in information not to be proved in evidence.

But by 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 104, 105, some important provisions were made with respect to the proof of certain affirmative averments which had before been considered as requiring strict proof on the part of the prosecution. (f)

Proofs.

By s. 104 it is enacted that, in case of any information or proceeding had under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, the averments—

That the commissioners of the Customs or Excise have directed or elected such informations or proceedings to be instituted; or,

That any vessel is foreign or British; or,

That any person detained is or is not a subject of His Majesty; or,

That any person detained is or is not a seaman or seafaring man, or fit and able to serve in the navy; or,

That any person is an officer of Customs,—

Shall be sufficient, without proof as to such fact or facts, unless the defendant in such case shall prove to the contrary.

Proof of acting as an officer sufficient without producing commission.

And, by s. 105, it is enacted that, if upon any trial a question shall arise, whether any person is an officer of the Customs or Excise, &c.

(c) See Daubney v. Cooper, 10 Bar. & Cres. 237. And as to defence by the (e) Ibid. (f) Sect. 104, 105, ante, 205.

evidence of his having acted as such shall be deemed sufficient; and such person shall not be required to produce his commission or deputation, unless sufficient proof shall be given to the contrary. (a) Falling under this rule, is the provision made in s. 53, imposing penalties against persons making signals to smuggling vessels, which makes it an offence, whether the smuggling vessel be or be not within distance for the persons on board to see the signal made, ante, 192.

Thus, although the information must aver that it was preferred by the direction of the commissioners of Customs, that averment, as well as the allegation that any vessel is foreign or British, or that the defendant is or is not a subject of His Majesty, or a seaman or not, or fit for service, or that any person is an officer of Customs, is sufficient, without proof of such fact or facts, unless the defendant prove the contrary. (b) So the fact that a person is an officer in the army, navy, or marines, duly authorized, and on full pay, or officer of Customs or Excise, will be sufficiently proved by showing that he had acted as such. (c) So an order issued by the commissioners of Treasury, or Customs, or Excise, will be sufficiently proved by the official letter of instructions received by the officer of Customs or Excise. (d)

And if there is a provision that, in case any person be charged with or indicted for having made, or caused to be made, any fire or signal, for the purpose of giving information to a smuggling vessel, the burden of proof that such fire was not made with an unlawful intent shall lie upon the defendant. (e)

Every officer is a competent witness, although interested in the penalty. (f) The acts relating to the Customs do not (like the Excise act, 7 and 8 Geo. IV., c. 53) contain any provision as to the evidence of quakers, or to the summoning witnesses to give evidence, and therefore the law on those subjects is the same as in other proceedings before magistrates. Under the Excise laws it was held, that proof of a printed summons to witnesses, distributed and issued in blank by order of the commissioners to their agents, and afterwards filled up by one of them, without any special directions from the board, was sufficient, although not signed by any of the commissioners, nor issued in their individual names, such having been the constant usage in that respect since the introduction of the Excise. (g)

The evidence must be given and the witnesses sworn and examined in the presence of the defendant, in order that he may have the opportunity of cross-examination; and if the witnesses have been irregularly examined in his absence, they should be re-sworn in the defendant's presence. (h)

If the prosecutor have made out a prima facie case, the defendant is by evidence to disprove the charge, or bring himself within some proviso or exception which excuses or qualifies the fact charged, so as to exempt him from the penalty or forfeiture.

We have seen the cases in which the onus probandi is cast upon the defendant. (i)

With respect to goods seized by officers for non-payment of duties, or any other cause of forfeiture, it is provided that, in case any dispute shall arise whether the Customs, Excise, or Inland duties, have been paid for the same, or the same have been lawfully imported, or concerning the place from whence such goods were brought, the proof thereof shall lie on the owner or claimer of such goods, and not on the officer who shall seize or stop the same. (a)

It was held that a defendant in an information for the breach of the navigation laws was not entitled to a commission to examine witnesses abroad, on motion made to the Court of Exchequer under the 13 & 14 Car. II., pending the progress of the proceedings under the information. Nor would the Court grant an order to restore a vessel seized on such charges, where a question of identity might be raised on the trial of the cause, although the defendant offered security for re-delivering her if a verdict should be recovered against him: and that those different objects could not be blended in one motion. Attorney-General v. Laragoity, 2 Price's Rep. 166. But where a vessel had been seized by the officers of the Customs on charges of offences against other acts of Parliament than that usually called the navigation act, if, on the trial of the information filed thereon, the question be likely to turn on the fact of the ship belonging to a foreign subject, the Court will, on motion (a bill having been filed against the Attorney-General for that purpose), grant the defendant a commission to examine persons residing abroad, and make it part of the order that their depositions shall be received in evidence on the trial. The affidavit of the solicitor for the defendant will be received in support of such a motion; and it will be sufficient if he swear, that he is informed of and believes the statements in the bill, if he also add that his belief is founded on documents in his possession, and that, from the nature of the defence involving the question of what country the ship belongs to, he considers the commission necessary. Laragoity v. Attorney-General, 2 Price's Rep. 172.

The Court will not make an order that the witnesses of a defendant claiming goods seized by the Customs may be allowed to inspect them before the trial of the usual information in rem, on an affidavit of the party, that he believes he shall be able to prove by such witnesses that the goods are not contraband, but were made in this country, and, for the most part, by the witnesses who were required to be allowed to see them. (b)

Of the judgment, and mitigating the penalty.

The rules respecting the adjudication are, for the most part, the same as in ordinary cases. If several be concerned in obstructing a custom-house officer, each separately incurs the penalty. (c) The justices are empowered to mitigate the penalties, except in cases otherwise expressly provided for, so as the sum to be paid by the offender be not less than one-fourth of the amount of the penalty in which the party shall have been convicted. (d)

Persons detained for certain offences are to pay 100*l.*, or, if seafaring men, are to be sent into the naval service, if fit; and if not, to be imprisoned; (e) and if in service are to have only half-pay, and the rest to be applied for relief of their wives and families. (f)

(9.) Of the Form and Requisites of the Conviction.

In the case of summary proceedings under the 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, against smugglers, a set of forms is prescribed in the schedule to that act. It becomes the duty of the justices, not only in these, but in all other cases in which a summary jurisdiction is given to them, to record their proceedings in a formal manner, agreeably to the directions of the forms contained in the schedule, where they are respectively applicable to the particular case. (a)

In practice, it is usual for the justices convicting a party under these acts to give the defendant a copy of the conviction, in order that if any objection arises upon the face of it, he may have the benefit of a certiorari to remove the proceedings into the King's Bench, and there take advantage of the objection.

The offences against the Customs' laws which most usually come under the cognizance of justices of the peace are those which are provided for by 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, "An act for the prevention of smuggling."

In order to simplify the task of drawing up convictions on this act, compendious forms are given in the schedules thereto, and

By sect. 82 it is enacted, that all informations before justices, &c. for any offences committed against this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs, and all convictions for such offences, and warrants of justices, &c., founded upon such convictions, shall be drawn respectively in the form or to the effect in the schedules to this act annexed. (b)

This enactment being only directory, does not dispense with a strict observance of the general qualities of convictions, as pointed out in a previous part of this work. (c)

Among the most prominent of these qualities is certainty, and that the offence be not charged in the alternative. (d)

An instance in illustration of the necessity of observing this quality occurred in a late case, arising upon this very act, (e) and in which it was held that an alternative charge in a conviction is bad. A conviction on 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 49, for being on board a boat liable to forfeiture by sect. 3 for having casks attached thereto "of the description used or intended to be used for the smuggling of spirits," was quashed for uncertainty, and per Abbott, C. J.:—"I know of no authority which says that a conviction must not have as much certainty as an indictment. Now this act of parliament mentions three sorts or descriptions of casks, which, if found on board or attached to a vessel, will render it liable to forfeiture. One is a sort which is used; the second is that intended to be used; and the third that which is fit or adapted for the purpose. Having mentioned these three as distinct descriptions of casks, I think the conviction should have set forth under which of the three the casks in question fell.

Another essential requisite in drawing up these convictions is to take care to describe the offence as it is defined in the statute, and expressly to allege all the facts necessary to support the proceeding, leaving nothing to be gathered by inference or intendment. Also if the offence be such only sub modo, the offender must appear to be within the penal conditions specified; and consequently all those modifying or exempting circumstances which are enacted in the same clause with the offence itself, and the absence of which is a constituent part of the crime, must be expressly noticed. Thus a conviction on 45 Geo. III. c. 121, s. 7, for carrying and conveying foreign brandy in half-ankers, alleged to be "then and there liable to forfeiture, the said offence being committed against the provisions of the acts for the prevention of smuggling," is insufficient in not showing the particular grounds of forfeiture. (a) And in Debrell's case (b) the defendant was impressed and sent on board a king's ship for an offence against the 59 Geo. III. c. 121, s. 1, (c) which had provided, that if any foreign smuggling vessel or boat, in which there shall be one or more subjects of His Majesty, whether mariners or persons pretending to be passengers, shall be found or discovered to have been within four leagues of that part of the coast of Great Britain which is between the North Foreland on the coast of Kent, and Beachy Head on the coast of Sussex, or within eight leagues of any other part of the coast of Great Britain or Ireland, having on board any foreign brandy, &c., such vessel shall be forfeited; and every such subject of His Majesty who shall be found on board such vessel shall be liable to all the pains and penalties, &c. in like manner as persons, being subjects of His Majesty, found on board vessels liable to forfeiture, belonging wholly or in part to His Majesty's subjects, are by the previous laws liable. The return to a habeas corpus, by which the defendant was brought up, stated that he was found on board a vessel "discovered to have been and to be within eight leagues of that part of the coast of Great Britain called Suffolk, that is to say, within eight leagues of Orfordness, in the county of Suffolk." After argument it was held, that this was not a sufficient, certain averment that the vessel was not within four leagues of the coast of Great Britain, between the North Foreland in Kent, and Beachy Head in Sussex; and the prisoner was ordered to be discharged.

Statutory forms of conviction being provided by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 82, in those cases which most frequently come before justices of the peace for adjudication, little room is left for, nor indeed can much assistance be expected from, this part of the work, in the way of instruction as to the mode of drawing up convictions on that statute.

In the forms thus given there is one remarkable feature: whilst it facilitates the province of the justices in drawing up a record of their proceedings, it deprives the party accused of the advantage which might reasonably be supposed to result from a different provision, namely, that there is no necessity for the convicting justices to set out the evidence on which their proceedings are founded. (d) The forms therein given are, indeed, as compendious as can well be imagined for the record of proceedings upon a code of laws confessedly severe; and by which, in some instances, the justices are expressly deprived of the power of mitigating penalties, or of limiting the duration of imprisonment. Great latitude is left to the presumption, not only that justices will in all cases act with scrupulous conscientiousness in the discharge of their duty, but that their judgments will be governed by discriminating intelligence and judicial accuracy.

The only difficulty in this part of the justices' duty seems to consist in the accurate statement of the charge of which the offender is convicted; for if that be aptly described, the task of drawing up the remainder of the record is reduced to the greatest simplicity.

In drawing up a conviction on this model, the following rules need only be observed:—

1. That the name of the county, city, &c. in which the conviction is made should be stated in the body of the conviction; for the mention of it in the margin is not sufficient. (e)
2. That the day and year of exhibiting the information must be specified, as well that it may appear to be subsequent to the offence, and prior to all the subsequent proceedings, as in order to ascertain that the prosecution is within the time limited by the statute.

3. That the names and styles of the magistrates before whom the complaint is lodged be set forth, from which it must appear that they are magistrates of the county or place where the offence is afterwards stated to have happened, or in which the offender was taken, brought, or carried, (when under the 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 74, (a)) in order that their jurisdiction may be shown on the face of the proceedings.

4. That the name of the officer giving the information should be stated; but this rather to show that the justices have acted upon due information, than from any disability in the officer to give evidence; for although he may be entitled to a share of the penalty on conviction, he is not on that account disqualified as a witness. (b)

5. That the information is made on oath is not necessary to appear on the face of the conviction, although the conviction can only take place on the oath of one or more credible witnesses. (c) Where the act does not authorize the succinct form of conviction, it must appear that the offence was proved on the oath of one or more credible witnesses. Aldridge's case. (c)

6. That the charge be accurately stated, as in the information, which must have all the certainty of an indictment as it respects the body or substance of the offence, with all its legal qualities, though it is not necessary to state the name of the defendant's wife when he is prosecuted for her offence. (d) In this is included, 1st. The name of the offender; 2nd. The time of the offence; 3rd. The place where committed; and 4th. The charge itself as defined by the statute, taking care to observe perspicuity and certainty.

Upon this latter point, it is an inflexible rule that no intendment can be admitted to help out a description defective in the want of an essential component. (e) The principal points to be attended to are the negation of exceptions, (f) and the avoiding of repugnancy and duplicity. (g) It is a rule, however, that nothing which may be rejected as surplusage shall vitiate. (h)

7. That the offence must be expressly alleged to be against the statute; but the contrary was decided in the case of a revenue information in the Exchequer for smuggling, on motion in arrest of judgment. (i)

8. That it be stated to have been duly proved, without setting out the evidence. Though this only applies where the particular act gives a concise form. In general the evidence must be stated. (k)

9. That it do adjudge the penalty in the manner prescribed by the statute in the form given in the precedent; and,

10. That it appear to be under the hands and seals of the justices.

The conviction need not be drawn up immediately on giving judgment; and it may be postponed even until after the penalty is levied, or commitment made out. (a) But it may often be of the greatest importance that it should be drawn up immediately, especially in those cases where persons are liable to be sent to sea for five years for smuggling. It is true that the legislature has provided, by sect. 81, (b) that in such case the party shall not be sent away from the united kingdom in less time than one month from the date of the conviction. The object of this provision, no doubt, was to give the party an opportunity of examining into the regularity of the proceedings; but if the conviction be not immediately drawn up, such a provision might, in many cases, be of no avail whatever to the party.

In concluding this subject, it is only necessary to observe, that if the justices have, by mistake, convicted a person improperly, it is right that they should stop immediately. If the conviction be only informal, it may be amended. (c) If a mandamus were to issue, directing them to levy the penalty, or enforce the proceeding, they might return that the conviction being invalid, they had therefore not enforced it; but where they have once fairly convicted a party, they ought to proceed to enforce that conviction; and though, if it be altogether a nullity, they are not bound to proceed in order to subject themselves to damages, it may be otherwise if the conviction is merely informal. (d) When, however, cases of this kind occur, the more general course is to represent the matter to the attorney-general, or to the commissioners of Customs, by whom care would be taken to prevent injustice arising from the mistake of the magistrate.

If any prosecution whatever shall be commenced for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture incurred under this or any other act relating to the revenue of Customs and Excise, it shall be lawful for H. M.'s attorney-general, if he is satisfied that such fine, penalty, or forfeiture was incurred without any intention of fraud, or that it is inexpedient to proceed in the said prosecution, to stop all further proceedings, by entering a nolle prosequi or otherwise on such information, as well with respect to the share of such fine, penalty, or forfeiture to which any officer or officers may be entitled, as to the king's share thereof. (e) The application to the attorney-general should be made as early as possible after intimation of the prosecution, and should be made by petition, and founded on an affidavit of the facts, showing the innocence of the party, or circumstances upon which the expectation of relief is founded. (f)

(11.) Of the Proceedings in Execution.

(11.) The execution.

Execution under these laws is, in general, in the first instance against the goods, and afterwards, in case there is no sufficient distress, against the body of the defendant.

(f) The forms of petition and affidavit will be nearly the same as under the Excise laws, post.

The remedies in the case of summary conviction before two justices are by warrants of distress or commitment, as the case may be, under the hands and seals of the convicting justices. But the imprisonment in case of nonpayment of the penalties, or in default of distress, shall not exceed six calendar months from the date of the warrant. (a) By 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 18, this provision, however, is restrained in cases where the person is in confinement for penalties under 100*l*. Forms for these warrants in these cases respectively are given in the schedules to 6 Geo. IV. c. 108. (b)

The warrants may be directed either to any officer of Customs, or to any constable acting within the jurisdiction of the justices. See 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 6.

Power is given to the justices to mitigate the penalties to a sum not less than one-fourth of the penalty in which the party is convicted. 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, s. 76, ante, 199.

By s. 72, provision is made for making allowances for the necessary subsistence of poor persons confined for offences against the laws of Customs and Excise. (c)

For the disposition of condemned vessels and boats, and all goods whatever, seized for any breach of the Customs' laws, provision is made by s. 62. (d)

For the disposition of seizures and penalties amongst officers acting under these laws, a scale of allowances by way of reward is made by s. 64. (e)

All penalties and forfeitures recovered before justices are to be paid to commissioners of Customs if they ordered the proceeding; and if ordered by commissioners of Excise, then to them. (f)

(12.) Of Appeals, Affidavit, and Petition.

The only cases in which the right of appealing is recognized in terms by the Customs' laws is from the decisions of commissioners, sub-commissioners, and justices in Ireland, which right is regulated by 6 Geo. IV. c. 106, s. 34. (g) In other cases no appeal is given, though it is otherwise under the Excise laws. (h)

Where cases of hardship occur, the commissioners of Customs, or the lords of the treasury, have power by their general superintending jurisdiction to mitigate penalties or afford relief to the parties aggrieved. (i) In these cases the proper mode of application is by petition or memorial, verifying by affidavit the facts and circumstances under which the party seeks redress.

In the case of ships seized under certain circumstances, express power is given to the commissioners by 6 Geo. IV. c. 107, s. 128, &c. to remit the forfeiture or penalties incurred. (k)

A like provision is made by 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 16, with respect to vessels liable to forfeiture for having smuggled spirits, tobacco, &c. on board. (l)

In cases of summary convictions by two justices for offences against these acts, the only remedy to the party, in case of any defect of legal form, is by habeas corpus and certiorari, which we will proceed to consider.

&c. before Magistrates,
&c.(13.) Habeas corpus and certiorari.

(13.) Of the removal by Habeas Corpus and Certiorari.

Where a party has been convicted under these acts, and there is any defect apparent on the face of the proceedings of the justices, the remedy open to him, if in execution and confinement, is to move the Court of King's Bench for a habeas corpus to bring up the body, and for a writ of certiorari to return the conviction into Court. (a)

Before these writs are granted, the Court must be satisfied, in the first instance, that there is some reasonable ground of objection to the proceedings. Upon this subject, however, an express regulation has been enacted by 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 17. (b)

In practice the Court is in the habit of granting a rule nisi for the party to be discharged on habeas corpus, at his own election, in order to save him the expense of being brought up. If the writ be granted absolutely, and on the return thereto the grounds of objection are apparent, the Court will discharge the party on motion, or make the rule absolute, if the return has been made to the rule nisi. But the mode of discussing the objection is generally made matter of arrangement between the prisoner's counsel and the counsel for the crown; who, if the objections are substantiated, give the proper directions for the liberation of the party, or the remission of the penalty, without first bringing him into Court.

If a certiorari be granted in these cases, it seems that the effect of it is only to remove the conviction, and not the depositions of the witnesses. (c)

Should the objection arise on the warrant of commitment, however defective that instrument may be, still, if it shows that there has been a conviction, the Court will not take notice of the objection until the conviction has been returned; for if there be a good conviction the objection is cured. (d)

The Court for the same reason will not take notice of any objection unless it appears on the face of the conviction itself. (e) An objection to the information will be of no avail, if it does not appear in the conviction.

In the case of R. v. Rogers, where in the return to a writ of habeas corpus, two causes were assigned for the prisoner's detention—first, a conviction for smuggling, and secondly, desertion from the navy—it was held, that the latter cause could not be impeached on affidavit for the purpose of showing either that the prisoner never had been in the navy, or that he had been illegally impressed, the Court saying they were bound by the return: that if it was false, the remedy was by action. (f) But in a subsequent case it was held, that a person in custody of an officer of Customs on a charge of smuggling, and brought up by habeas corpus at common law, may controvert the truth of the return to the writ by affidavit, by virtue of 56 Geo. III., c. 100, s. 4. (g)

Where prisoners taken into custody after an engagement at sea between a revenue cutter and a vessel suspected to be a smuggler, of which the

The principle which it lays down, if applied to convictions on the Customs' laws, by which the justices are not bound to set out the evidence on the record, might in many cases prevent relief to the party, by the writ of certiorari, however erroneously or unjustly he might have been condemned.

prisoners were the crew, were delivered on board a king's ship, and detained for fourteen days without any warrant, and were afterwards brought up by habeas corpus to be discharged, and it appearing from the return that there was cause to suspect them of a felony, the Court refused a discharge, and directed them to be committed to the custody of the marshal of the marshalsea, in order that they might be taken before a competent tribunal, to be dealt with according to law. Besides the protection afforded to magistrates and officers acting under them by the general law, (b) there are several special provisions in their favour when they act under the law of Customs.

(14.) Liability and indemnity of magistrates, &c.

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, s. 59, enacts that persons assaulting officers by force or violence may be transported, &c. (c) It indemnifies commanding officers of vessels in the service in hauling vessels on shore, without being liable to an action. (d) If an officer be wounded, he is to be provided for (e) and rewarded. (f) If a suit be brought on account of any seizure, and the judge shall certify that there was probable cause, the plaintiff is to have two-pence damages only, besides the things seized, or the value thereof, and the defendant fined not more than one shilling. (g) Process is not to be sued out against officers making seizures until a calendar month after notice, to be left at his usual place of abode; and a fee of twenty shillings to be paid for preparing or serving such notice. No evidence is to be adduced of any causes of action not stated in the notice. Proof of notice must be given, and the officer may tender amends, or pay the same into Court. The limitation of actions is six months. The general issue may be pleaded; and on verdict against plaintiff, defendant is to have treble costs. (h)

Under the former act, 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 24, it was held, that although the judge certified that there was probable cause for the seizure, yet he was liable to damages found by the jury for the deterioration of the goods seized whilst in his possession. (i)

Another protection afforded to officers acting under the laws for the prevention of smuggling is provided by s. 14, which requires justices of the peace to admit to bail persons charged with wounding or killing smugglers under the circumstances therein mentioned. 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, ante, 180.

But by sect. 106 it is enacted, that in all cases where any power, authority, or protection is given or granted by this act to any officer or officers of the navy, army, or marines, the same shall not extend, or be construed to extend, to any such officer or officers, unless such officer or officers shall be on full pay, and employed for the prevention of smuggling, under the proper authority to which such officer or officers is or are subjected, or under the authority of the commissioners of the Customs or Excise; and such officer or officers shall be deemed to be duly authorised for the purposes of the Customs' laws. Ante, 188, 186, 187.

In R. v. Akers (k), which was an information against a person for obstructing a custom-house officer in the execution of his duty, it was discussed whether the defendant had a right to go into the question whether the goods were smuggled or not; and Ld. Kenyon held, that where the officers have an information of smuggled goods, which affords a probable ground to warrant the search. persons obstructing them in their search, or in the discharge of their duty, are liable to an information for the obstruction, whether smuggled goods are found or not; but the officers search at their peril.

It seems that if any matter properly cognizable on the revenue side of the Court of Exchequer is drawn into question elsewhere, or if the matter of the suit touches the profit of the King, it is a good ground of removing the action into the Exchequer; and an action against the commissioners of Excise, and officers executing a warrant of distress, on a conviction of the plaintiff, made by the commissioners of Excise, was accordingly removed into the office of pleas, upon the general grounds of this being a proceeding in the execution of their office. (a) So where an action of trespass was brought in C. P. against a revenue officer, for an assault and false imprisonment, it was in like manner, upon an affidavit that the cause of action arose wholly in the execution of the defendant's duty in seizing the plaintiff's ship on suspicion of smuggling, removed into the office of pleas of the Court of Exchequer. ## II. Of the Excise (c.)

Introductory observations.

The duties of Excise, we have seen, are inland imposts, in contradistinction to the Customs, which are for the most part levied on articles the subject of foreign trade. (d) It is a tax laid, in the first instance, upon the manufacturer or vender of various commodities, though ultimately, in the increased price, falling upon the consumer. It is called Excise from the Dutch word accise, which signifies an assessment upon any commodity. Others derive it from the word excisum, as a part of the profit cut off from the whole. (e) The origin of these duties is traced to the reign of Charles the first. (f) They were afterwards adopted in the time of the Protectorate; and soon after the restoration two statutes were passed by which they were confirmed to the crown;—the statute, 12 Car. II. c. 23, which granted an Excise on certain commodities for the King's life; and the other statute (c. 24.) of the same reign, which, in lieu of the military tenures, granted to the king, his heirs and successors, an hereditary Excise (still so called, see 1 W. IV. c. 51) on certain other commodities. (g) This act contains many regulations still

(f) This was begun on the 11th of September, 1643, by the long parliament; and eight commissioners of Excise were appointed, and they were to choose their own officers, viz. their register, collectors, clerks, and other subordinate officers. The parliament's ordinance for the Excise bears date July 22, 1643. It was laid upon liquors, grocery-ware, silks, linens, cloths, furs, and almost all other sorts of commodities, imported. That the reader may have a notion of it, it will be proper to mention some of the particulars. Every pound of tobacco not of the English plantation was to pay, over and above all Customs, 4s., and that of English plantation, 2s.; every tun of wine retailed, 6l., and for private use, 3l.; Malaga raisins, one farthing per pound; currants, 1d.; loaf-sugar, 4d. per pound; cloth of gold and silver, 8s., and tissue, 10s. a yard. Damask table-linen 1s. a yard, &c. It is somewhat strange, that Rushworth has not inserted this curious ordinance in his Collections. 2 Rapin's Hist. 497, note 3.—Observations in former editions.

in force, and is the basis of all the subsequent enactments relating to the Excise.

Introductory observations.

The duties under the superintendance or management of the commissioners of Excise (43 Geo. III. c. 69, schedule A) are by way of distinction denominated the duties of Excise, and other duties under the management of the commissioners of Excise. The former are such imposts as have from their first establishment been within the receipt of the commissioners of Excise; the latter are such duties as were originally under the management of other commissioners appointed for that purpose, but which have since been transferred, by different acts of parliament, to the commissioners of the Excise, as in the instance of cocoa-nuts, coffee, snuff, tea, and tobacco, which were formerly under the management of the Customs, but were transferred to the Excise by 52 Geo. III. c. 52, table A.

Duties under the management of the commissioners.

Some of the duties in the receipt of the commissioners of Excise are also contra-distinguished from the duties of Excise by being called inland duties. Such are the duties imposed on chocolate, coffee, tea, and others, payable by the dealer or maker, over and above all Customs and other duties chargeable upon the goods on their importation.

Inland duties.

The duties of Excise, properly so called, are those imposed on ale, beer, cider, perry, mum, mead, and spirituous and other liquors; and also on malt, salt, hops, &c. being particularly so denominated by the laws of Excise, or so accounted by them.

What are duties of Excise properly so called.

But according to R. v. Justices of Surrey, (a) the distinction generally understood between Excise duties and inland duties, under the management of the commissioners of Excise, is this,—that the law of Excise is understood to relate only to liquors; and that the inland duties, under the management of the commissioners of Excise, are understood to apply to malt, dry goods, and other articles, which had of late been put under their management. (a) Distinction between Excise and inland duties.

A consolidation of the Excise duties was effected by the 43 Geo. III. c. 69, which provided that after the 5th July, 1803, all the duties, allowances, bounties, and drawbacks of Excise and other duties under the management of the commissioners of England and Scotland respectively, granted by any act of parliament then in force, should cease; and the duties to be afterwards paid in respect of the goods mentioned in the act were set forth in tables, together with the allowances, bounties, and drawbacks; the special allowances directed by acts of parliament in force on 5th July, 1803, being also continued, except so far as they were expressly altered or repealed by the act 43 Geo. III. c. 69, s. 2; but this statute did not repeal the duties upon malt, mum, cider, and perry, granted by the 43 Geo. III. c. 3, nor the duties on malt, tobacco, and snuff, continued by 43 Geo. III. c. 4, except with respect to the duties imposed by that act on tobacco of the growth, production, and manufacture of the plantations or dominions of Spain and Portugal delivered for exportation; nor did the 43 Geo. III. c. 69, repeal or alter the countervailing duties of Excise upon the importation of goods into Great Britain from Ireland, granted by 39 Geo. III. c. 67, or the drawbacks payable on goods exported from Great Britain to Ireland, except the countervailing duties and drawbacks for beer, ale, and mum, bricks and tiles, cider, perry, hops, mead or metheglin, spirits, vellum and parchment, gilt and silver wire, and gold and silver thread, lace, or fringe. (b) Since the passing of the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 69, the Excise duties have been increased by different acts of parliament. (c) The collection of the duties on tobacco, snuff, coffee and cocoa-nuts, tea and pepper, is now wholly transferred to the Excise. (d)

(d) Customs' cons. act, 59 Geo. III., c. 52, table A.

The statute 59 Geo. III. c. 53, was passed to impose additional duties of Excise on tea, coffee and cocoa-nuts, tobacco and snuff, pepper, malt and British spirits, and to consolidate them with the former duties; and the laws of Excise relating to these articles were in some respects amended by the same statute. The statute 59 Geo. III. c. 53, contemplating that agreements may have been made antecedently to that statute for the sale or delivery of particular articles, without reference to the additional duties, provides that the contractors shall be considered as having authority to add a sum equivalent to the amount of duty to the price of any particular article. (a) The statute 43 Geo. III. contained a similar provision; and in the construction of that clause it was determined that a vender of spirits which were contracted for on the 21st of May, but were not shipped till after the 5th of July, 1803, was entitled to charge the purchaser with the duty imposed by the 43 Geo. III., no delivery, either actual or virtual, having taken place before the 5th of July; for the purchaser, whose duty it was to provide a vessel, had not provided one before that time; and the quantity of spirits, which the purchaser was to have, had not been set apart for him in the vender's warehouse. (b)

There are a great many other acts varying the regulations and the amount of the duties. With respect to the latter, there is not such a general consolidating act of the duties as in the case of the Customs. And although, as to the collection and management of the duties, the act 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, mentioned in the next division of the subject, very considerably ameliorates the law, yet still there is frequent occasion to refer to the former provisions, and it is very desirable that the whole law of Excise should be repealed and re-enacted in more lucid order.

Division of the subject.

The present laws of Excise may be considered under three principal heads.

- I. Of the Excise Laws in general.
- II. Of the particular Laws affecting certain particular Articles alphabetically arranged, as Ale and Beer, Brewers, Auctioneers, &c.
- III. Practical Proceedings before Justices for Penalties, &c.

I. OF THE EXCISE LAWS IN GENERAL.

I. The Excise Laws in general may be subdivided into the following Heads.

- (1.) Repeal of former Enactments, and present Law.
- (2.) Of the Commissioners, Assistant Commissioners, Inferior Officers, Hours of Attendance, Bribery, &c.
- (3.) Of the Receiver-General, Comptroller, and Auditor.
- (4.) Lands and Buildings for Purposes of Excise.
- (5.) Present Duties of Excise, Allowances, Drawbacks, and on Licences, &c.

(1.) Repeal of former Enactments, and present Law in general.

(1.) Repeal of former acts, and the present laws relating to the collection and management of the Excise duties.

The most important act on the subject of the Excise duties, especially as connected with the jurisdiction of justices of the peace and inferior peace-officers, is the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, entitled, "An act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the collection and management of the revenue of Excise throughout Great Britain and Ireland," (a) which, after reciting that the 4 Geo. IV. c. 23, consolidated the boards of Excise, and that the laws relating to His Majesty's revenue of Excise had become very numerous and complicated, and that it would generally tend to the public benefit to consolidate and amend the same, and for that purpose to collect into one act the several powers, authorities, regulations, and provisions thereof, which apply or relate to the collection and management of the said revenue, then proceeds with the new enactments, and declares that they shall commence from 5th January, 1828 ; and it is enacted in

Sect. 127, "That from and after the commencement of this act, all laws, powers, authorities, rules, regulations, restrictions, exceptions, provisions, clauses, matters, and things, provided for or contained in any act or acts of parliament in force at and immediately before the commencement of this act, relating to the revenue of Excise in any part of the united kingdom, or to any matter or thing expressly provided for by this act, which are repugnant to or inconsistent with the several matters, clauses, provisions, and regulations of this act, or any of them, shall be and the same are hereby respectively repealed, and shall no longer be put in force

Former regulations which are inconsistent with this act, declared to be repealed.

(a) It will be observed that the enactments in this statute are, in many respects, similar to the ancient hereditary act, 12 Car. II., c. 24.

1. Repeal, &c.

or observed in any part of the united kingdom ; save and except so far as the same repeal or repeals any former act or acts, or any part or parts of any former act or acts of parliament ; and save and except so far as the same, or any of them, relate or relates to the recovering, suing for, mitigating, levying, or paying any duty, or any arrear thereof, charged or chargeable, or any penalty or forfeiture incurred for any offence against any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, which shall have been or shall be committed, and for the recovery of which duty or arrear thereof, penalty or forfeiture, proceeding shall have been commenced before and shall be depending at the time of the commencement of this act ; and save and except also as to any duty or arrear thereof charged or chargeable, and penalty or forfeiture which shall have been incurred, under or by virtue of any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise by this act repealed as aforesaid, for which no proceedings for the recovery thereof shall have been commenced before and shall be depending at the commencement of this act."

Sub-commissioners and commissioners of appeal in Ireland continued to complete depending proceedings.

Sect. 128. " Provided always, that all sub-commissioners and commissioners of appeal in Ireland, who at any time before the commencement of this act shall have been appointed under the laws relating to the revenue of Excise in Ireland, shall respectively continue to execute and perform the several duties of their respective offices until all proceedings which shall have been or shall be begun before and be depending at the commencement of this act before them judicially shall be completed or ended ; and that it shall be lawful for such several sub-commissioners and commissioners of appeal respectively in Ireland, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required, to continue to act in the performance of their several judicial duties pursuant to the laws in force at and immediately before the passing of this act, for the purpose of and until all such proceedings shall be completed or ended ; and that nothing in this act shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend to repeal, annul, or make void any law or part of any law, or any act or acts of parliament, or any part thereof, relating to such proceedings, or any of them, or any part thereof, until all such proceedings shall be completed and ended. Provided always, that all penalties and forfeitures which shall have been or shall be incurred under or by virtue of any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise before the commencement of this act, for the recovery of which no proceedings shall have been commenced before and be depending at the commencement of this act, and all penalties and forfeitures which shall be incurred under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise after the commencement of this act, shall be recovered and applied in such manner and by such form or forms and ways of proceeding as are by this act directed and provided ; any thing in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

All duties and penalties shall, after the commencement of this act, be recovered as directed by this act.

As the s. 127 only repeals those prior enactments which are repugnant to or inconsistent with the new regulations, it follows that where there is any prior law not repugnant to or inconsistent with the new law, it is still applicable and in force ; and there seem a few provisions of this nature relating to offenders escaping, &c. ; the trial of felonies in any county ; the deceiving officers by false weights, &c. In the notes to this edition the former enactments and decisions upon them are referred to.

[Former acts, 12 Car. II., c. 24; 15 Car. II., c. 11, and c. 26; 5 W. III., c. 20; 11 Geo. I., c. 30; 12 Geo. I., c. 28; 23 Geo. II., c. 26; 8 Geo. III.; 49 Geo. III., c. 66, s. 2.]

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 1, it is enacted, "That it shall be lawful for His Majesty, his heirs and successors, from time to time to appoint, under the great seal of the united kingdom, any number of persons not exceeding thirteen to be commissioners of Excise for the collection and management of the whole of the revenue of Excise arising in and throughout the whole of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the islands and territories thereunto respectively belonging, and also to appoint any number of persons not exceeding four to be assistant commissioners of Excise, to sit and act in manner hereinafter mentioned, in and for Scotland and Ireland; and that each of such commissioners and assistant commissioners, when so appointed, shall have and hold his respective office during His Majesty's pleasure."

Appointment of commissioners of Excise for the united kingdom, and assistant commissioners for Scotland and Ireland.

Sect. 2 enacts, "That any four or more of the commissioners of Excise shall constitute a board of commissioners of Excise for the united kingdom, for the collection and management of the whole of the revenue of Excise arising in and throughout the whole of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the islands and territories thereunto respectively belonging, and of all the duties imposed or to be imposed by any act or acts of parliament which have been or are or shall be made payable to His Majesty, his heirs and successors, as duties of Excise, or duties under the collection and management of the commissioners of Excise, and of all arrears of any of such duties, and of all penalties and forfeitures arising or which shall have arisen, or shall arise or accrue, or remain or become due to His Majesty, his heirs and successors, within the said united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the islands and territories thereunto respectively belonging, under any law or laws touching or relating to the said revenues; and that every such board shall have full power and authority to order and direct, and to do and permit to be done, throughout the united kingdom, or in any part thereof, all acts, matters, and things which shall by this act, or by any other act or acts of parliament, be required to be made or done by the commissioners of Excise, or which shall relate to or in anywise concern the revenue under their collection and management; and that all rules, orders, acts, matters, and things relating to or concerning the said revenue, which shall have been or shall be made or done by any such board, shall be good, valid, and effectual in law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if made or done by all the commissioners of Excise. Provided always, that every such board, and the commissioners of Excise respectively, shall in all things relating to the execution of the duty of such board, or of such commissioners respectively, be subject to the authority, direction, and control of the lord high treasurer and commissioners of the treasury, and shall obey all orders and instructions which shall have been or shall from time to time be issued to such board or commissioners in that behalf by the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury."

Four commissioners to constitute a board of Excise.

Their power and authority.

Commissioners subject to orders and control of the treasury.

Sect. 3. "That in all cases relating to the revenue under the collection and management of the commissioners of Excise, where 'England' or 'Great Britain' is or shall be mentioned in this act, or in any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, the same shall be deemed and taken to extend to and include Wales and the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed; and that where 'the united kingdom' is or shall be

Wales and Berwick-upon-Tweed included in all acts mentioning England or Great Britain.

2. Of the commissioners, &amp;c.

Definition of other terms.

The number of inferior officers shall not be increased without the permission and approval of the treasury.

mentioned, the same shall be deemed and taken to extend to and include Great Britain and Ireland, and the islands and territories thereunto respectively belonging; and that where 'the revenue of Excise' is or shall be mentioned, the same shall be deemed and taken to extend to and to include the whole revenue under the collection and management of the commissioners of Excise; and that where any power or authority (excepting such power and authority as is restricted to the limits of the chief office of Excise in London) is or shall be given to the commissioners of Excise generally, the same shall be deemed and taken to extend over and throughout the united kingdom as aforesaid; and that where any power or authority is or shall be given to the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, the same shall be deemed and taken to extend only over and throughout Scotland or Ireland, and the islands and territories thereof respectively; and that this act, and the several provisions thereof respectively, shall be deemed and taken to apply to all acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise which shall hereafter be made, except in any of the above cases where the same shall be otherwise specially directed or provided."

Sect. 4. "That it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, or any four or more of them, and they are hereby authorized and required from time to time to appoint, by writing under their hands and seals, such and so many collectors and other subordinate officers, (b) and accomptants, clerks, and assistants, for collecting, receiving, managing, and accounting for the said revenue of Excise, as to the said commissioners, or any four or more of them, shall seem meet and requisite, taking in the name of His Majesty, from them and every of them, sufficient security for the due performance of the respective duties committed to their charge; and all such commissions and appointments shall be deemed, construed, and taken to be good, valid, and effectual, and the persons holding the same shall have full power and authority in respect thereof to execute the duties of their respective offices, and to enforce, in the execution thereof, all laws, regulations, penalties, and forfeitures relating to the said revenue in every part of the united kingdom; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or any four or more of them, and they are hereby authorized to place, remove, promote, suspend, reduce, discharge, or restore, as they shall see cause, any such collector or other subordinate officers, or accomptants, clerks, or assistants, and to allow and pay to them respectively for their salaries, and to them or to any other person or persons, for charges necessarily arising in the collection or management of the said revenue, such sum and sums of money, allowance and allowances, as shall be conformable to such rules, regulations, and directions as may from time to time be received by the said commissioners from the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, for the direction and guidance of the commissioners of Excise in such behalf. Provided always, that the number of each description of officers and persons so to be appointed shall not in any case (except as hereinafter mentioned) exceed the number which shall be fixed and allowed by any general warrant or warrants, order or orders, which shall have been or shall from time to time be issued for that purpose by such lord high treasurer or commissioners of the treasury: and provided also, that in all cases in which it may be deemed necessary to appoint a greater number of officers of the lowest class than shall have been authorized by any such warrant or warrants, order or orders, the persons to be named to every such appointment shall be submitted by the commissioners of Excise to and approved by such lord high treasurer or commissioners of the treasury.

Sect. 5. "Provided always, that all collectors and other subordinate officers, and accomptants, clerks, and assistants, who are or have been or shall be from time to time duly and legally appointed by the commissioners of Excise, do and shall remain and continue in their respective offices, notwithstanding the death or removal of any commissioner or commissioners by whom they were so appointed, and notwithstanding any alteration, change, or other determination of the commission of such commissioners, until the respective appointment of such collectors or other subordinate officers, or accomptants, clerks, or assistants, shall become void by death, or shall be revoked by the commissioners of Excise."

Sect. 6. "That it shall be lawful for the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, from time to time to order and direct any one or more of the commissioners of Excise, together with two of the assistant commissioners of Excise, to sit and act as such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners respectively in and for Scotland, and to order and direct any one or more of the commissioners of Excise, together with two of the assistant commissioners of Excise, to sit and act as such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners respectively in and for Ireland, for the despatch of business in those parts respectively of the united kingdom, under the control and direction nevertheless of the board of commissioners of Excise; and that such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners for Scotland and Ireland respectively (under such control and direction as aforesaid) shall have and be invested with the collection and management of the revenue of Excise, and all matters and things relating thereto arising in Scotland and Ireland respectively; and that any two of such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners, in Scotland and Ireland respectively, shall (under such control and direction as aforesaid) have full power and authority to order and direct, and to do and permit to be done, all acts, matters, and things relating to the revenue of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively; and that all rules, orders, acts, matters, and things which shall have been or shall be so made and done by such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners, or any two of them, in Scotland and Ireland respectively, shall be good, valid, and effectual in law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever. Provided always, that all and every such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners, in Scotland and Ireland respectively, shall in all things observe, perform, and fulfil, and cause to be observed, performed, and fulfilled, in and throughout Scotland and Ireland respectively, the several orders, rules, directions, and regulations, touching or relating to the said revenue, which shall have been or shall be made or given by the board of commissioners of Excise."

Sect. 7. "That no person who shall be appointed to be a commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or who shall be appointed to any other office relating to the revenue of Excise, shall be capable of acting as such commissioner or assistant commissioner, or in any other such office, until he shall, before two or more justices of the peace in the county where his office is or shall be, or before one of the barons of the Exchequer of England, Scotland, or Ireland, take and subscribe the oath hereinafter following; that is to say,

No person shall be capable of acting in any office under the Excise before he has taken the following oath. (a)

(a) See 12 Car. II., c. 23, s. 24; 15 Car. II., c. 11, s. 27; and see Highmore on Excise, 171.

2. Of the commissioners, &c.

Certificate of the taking of such oath to be recorded.

Penalty 50*l*.

No member of the House of Commons to be a commissioner or officer of Excise.

No officer to vote or interfere in elections for members of parliament under a penalty of 50*l*. and of being rendered incapable of holding any office. (a) faithfully, without favour or affection; and that I will from time to time true account make and deliver to such person or persons as shall be duly appointed to receive the same; and that I will not take any fee or reward in or for the execution of the said office from any other person than H. M., or those whom H. M. shall appoint in that behalf.

And the justices of the peace, or baron of the Exchequer, before whom such oath as aforesaid shall have been taken and subscribed, shall certify the taking thereof as aforesaid to the general quarter sessions, or Court of Exchequer, as the case may be, to be there recorded, and to the auditor of Excise, by whom such certificate shall be entered; and if any person shall act as a commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or in any other office relating to the revenue of Excise, before he shall have taken and subscribed such oath as aforesaid, such person shall, for every month in or for which he shall have so acted, without having taken such oath, forfeit and lose the sum of fifty pounds."

Sect. 8. "That no person being a member of the Commons House of Parliament shall, during the time of his being such member of Parliament, be capable of being a commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or commissioner of appeal under this act, or of being an officer of Excise, or person employed in the charging, collecting, or managing of any part of the revenue of Excise, or in comptrolling or auditing the accounts thereof, nor shall be capable of taking, holding, or executing, or being in any manner concerned in executing, either by himself or deputy, or by any other person or persons in trust for him, or for his use and benefit, any such office or employment; and if any person shall, during the time of his being a member of the Commons House of Parliament, at any time take, hold, or execute, or be in any manner concerned in executing, either by himself or deputy, or by any other person or persons in trust for him, or for his use and benefit, any such office or employment as aforesaid, such person shall be and is hereby declared to be incapable of sitting, voting, or acting in any manner as a member of the Commons House of Parliament in such parliament."

Sect. 9. "That no commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or commissioner of appeal under this act, or any officer of Excise, (b) or person employed in the charging, collecting, or managing of any part of the revenue of Excise, or in comptrolling or auditing the accounts thereof, shall be capable of giving his vote for the election of any person to serve in parliament; and if any commissioner or assistant commissioner, or commissioner of appeal, or any officer or other person hereby made incapable of voting as aforesaid, shall nevertheless presume to give his vote during the time he shall hold, or within two calendar months next after he shall have ceased to hold or execute any office or employment as aforesaid, such vote so given shall be held null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever; and every such commissioner, assistant commissioner, commissioner of appeal, officer, and person as aforesaid, who shall give any such vote, or who shall, by word, message, or writing, or in any other manner whatsoever, endeavour to persuade any elector to give, or to dissuade any elector from giving his vote for the election of any person to serve in parliament, shall for every such offence (the same being proved by two or more credible witnesses upon oath) forfeit and lose the sum of five hundred pounds, one moiety whereof shall be paid to the informer, and the other moiety thereof to the poor of the parish in which such offence shall have been committed and such penalty incurred; and every such penalty shall and may be recovered by any person who

(a) Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to extend, to repeal or to alter any of the laws touching or in anywise relating to election in any part of the united kingdom, excepting so far as is hereby expressly provided."

Sect. 10. "That no officer of Excise or person employed in the collection or management of or accounting for the revenue of Excise, or any part thereof (except the keeper of an office of Excise as hereinafter mentioned), shall, whilst he shall be such officer, or so employed as aforesaid, deal or trade in any goods or commodities subject to any duty of Excise, or shall carry on or be concerned in any trade or business which is or shall be under or subject to any law or laws of Excise, upon pain of forfeiting for such offence, on due conviction thereof, his office or employment, and being by such conviction rendered incapable of ever holding any office, trust, or employment in or relating to the revenue of Excise."

Sect. 11. "And be it further enacted, that no commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or officer of Excise, or person employed in the collection or management of or accounting for the revenue of Excise, or any part thereof, shall, during the time of his acting as such commissioner or assistant commissioner or officer, or being so employed as aforesaid, be compelled to serve as a mayor or sheriff, or in any corporate or parochial or other public office or employment, or to serve on any jury or inquest, or in the militia; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 12. "And be it further enacted, that if any commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or commissioner of appeal under this act, or any officer of Excise, or person employed in the collection or management of or accounting for the revenue of Excise, or any part thereof, shall directly or indirectly ask or demand or take or receive any sum of money or other recompense or reward whatsoever, or any promise or security for any sum of money, or other recompense or reward whatsoever, or shall make, or enter into, or acquiesce in any collusive agreement with any person or persons to do or to conceal or to connive at any act or thing whereby any of the provisions of this act, or any other act or acts of Parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall or may be evaded or broken, or the said revenue defrauded, or to do or perform, or to permit or suffer to be done or performed, any act or thing contrary to the duty of such commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or commissioner of appeal, or such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, or to neglect or forbear or omit to do or perform any act or thing belonging or appertaining to the duty of such commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or commissioner of appeal, or officer or person so employed as aforesaid, every such commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise, or commissioner of appeal, or officer or person so employed as aforesaid, and so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of five hundred pounds, and being thereof duly convicted, shall be thereby

Sect. 14. "That the board of commissioners of Excise shall sit at the chief office of Excise established in London, and directed and appointed to be called the Excise office by an act passed in the eighth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third (amongst other things), for carrying into execution an agreement made for the purchase of Gresham College and the ground and buildings thereunto belonging, and for vesting the same unalienably in the Crown, for the purpose of erecting and building an Excise office there; or at such other place within the limits hereinafter mentioned, as the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, shall in that behalf appoint; and that in all cases, and to and for all intents and purposes whatsoever, the chief office of Excise shall be deemed and taken to be the office of Excise, unto which all other offices of Excise within the united kingdom shall be subordinate and accountable; and that all parts of the cities of London and Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and the several suburbs thereof, and parishes within the weekly bills of mortality, together with the parishes of St. Mary-le-bone and St. Pancras in the county of Middlesex, shall be within and under and subject to the immediate jurisdiction of such chief office of Excise."

Sect. 15. "That an office of Excise shall be held and kept in Edinburgh and in Dublin respectively; and the commissioners of Excise shall appoint, under their hands and seals, or under the hands and seals of any four of them, such person as they think needful in Edinburgh and in Dublin respectively, and in each such respective town throughout the united kingdom in which a market is or may be legally held every week, or oftener, throughout the year, as they may think fit, and in the several towns of Holyhead, Llangefni, and Llanerchthmeth, in addition to the market town of Beaumaris, in the county of Anglesea, to hold and keep therein, and in some known and public place thereof, an office of Excise, at which all entries shall be made (other than the entry required to be made of any building, place, vessel, or utensil for the purpose of carrying on trade or business), and at which all duties of Excise shall be received, and all other matters and things relating thereto shall be performed, as is or shall be directed by this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise; and the person respectively so appointed (the place where he or she intends to hold or keep such office being immediately after such appointment published in full and open market, or otherwise publicly made known) shall attend at and keep open such office during such times as are in this act or may hereafter be in that behalf directed."

Sect. 16. "That the chief office of Excise in London, and the offices of Excise in Edinburgh and Dublin respectively, shall be kept open from eight of the clock in the morning until three of the clock in the afternoon; and that the office of Excise in every other place shall be kept open from eight of the clock in the morning until two of the clock in the afternoon, for the transaction of business, or from or to such other hours as shall from time to time be directed by the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury; and that no holidays whatever shall be permitted or allowed to be kept at the said chief office in London, or the offices in Edinburgh and Dublin respectively, or at any other office of Excise, except Christmas-day and Good Friday in every year, and any days which are or shall be appointed by His Majesty's

Sect. 44. "That the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, and every collector, receiver, and other person throughout the united kingdom, who shall be intrusted with the collection, receipt, custody, or management of any part of the revenue of Excise, shall keep and render such separate and distinct accounts, and in such manner and form, as shall from time to time be directed by the commissioners of Excise, of all and every duty and duties, penalty and penalties, sum and sums of money collected, had, or received by him or them, or intrusted to his or their care or custody, and of all and every balance and balances of money in his or their hands, or under his or their control and management respectively; and if any commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise in Scotland or Ireland, or if any such collector, receiver, or other person in any part of the united kingdom, shall neglect or omit to keep and render such accounts as aforesaid, or shall knowingly render or furnish false accounts of or relating to any duty or penalty, or sum of money collected, had, or received, or to be collected, had, or received by him or them, or intrusted to his or their care or custody, or of any balance of money in his or their hands, or under his or their control and management, every such commissioner, assistant commissioner, collector, receiver, or other person so offending, and being thereof duly convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer the punishment of fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the Court in which such offender shall be prosecuted for such offence, and shall by such conviction be rendered for ever incapable of holding or enjoying any office under the crown."

Sect. 45. "That the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland or Ireland respectively, and every collector, receiver, or other person throughout the united kingdom, intrusted with the collection, receipt, custody, or management of any part of the revenue of Excise, shall from time to time collect, receive, apply, pay, transfer, and remit all and every duty and duties, penalty and penalties, sum and sums and balance and balances of money, which shall at any time be intrusted to his or their care or custody, or come into his or their hands, or be under his or their control and management respectively, in such manner and form and at such times as the commissioners of Excise shall in that behalf from time to time order and direct; and if any commissioner or assistant commissioner of Excise in Scotland or Ireland, or if any such collector, receiver, or other person in any part of the united kingdom, shall neglect or omit so to collect, receive, apply, pay, transfer, or remit as aforesaid, any such duty or penalty, or sum or balance of money, or any security for money, in his or their hands, or shall detain or misapply the same, every such commissioner, assistant commissioner, collector, receiver, or other person so offending, shall forfeit his office or employment, and shall be liable to pay, over and above the penalty of any bond which he may have entered into in respect of his office or employment, treble the amount of such duty or penalty, or sum or balance of money, or security for money, neglected or omitted so to be collected, received, applied, paid, transferred, or remitted as aforesaid, or so detained or misapplied."

Sect. 46. "That the commissioners of Excise shall and they are hereby required to collect and cause to be collected all and every the duties and every part of the revenue of Excise, and to keep separate and distinct accounts thereof respectively at the chief office of Excise in London; and shall set forth in such accounts the amounts respectively charged, and collected, and received, and remaining in arrear of each of such duties, and other parts respectively of the said revenue, and of the several payments made or allowed by such commissioners for or in respect of such duties and other

Sect. 47. "That the commissioners of Excise shall daily pay or cause to be paid into the hands of the receiver-general of Excise in England, or in such other manner as the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, shall from time to time direct, order, or appoint, all money, and shall indorse and deliver over or transfer to such receiver-general, or in such other manner as aforesaid, all bills of exchange, promissory notes, drafts, checks, or orders for the payment of money which shall from time to time be collected or received by or paid or transmitted to such commissioners, for or on account of the duties or revenue of Excise (except only the necessary charges paid of collecting, receiving, levying, managing, paying, and accounting for the same, and all other payments legally made thereout); and if any commissioner of Excise shall fraudulently or knowingly and wilfully detain or misapply any money, bill of exchange, promissory note, draft, check, or order for the payment of money as aforesaid, or any part thereof, or any security for money, every such commissioner so offending shall forfeit his office, and shall be rendered incapable of serving His Majesty, his heirs or successors, in any office or place of profit or trust whatsoever, and shall also forfeit and lose treble the amount of every sum of money, bill, note, draft, check, or order for the payment of money, or security for money, so detained or misapplied as aforesaid."

Sect. 48. "Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to make void, alter, or prejudice any disposition, appropriation, appointment, matter, or thing whatsoever, relative to the regular and usual payment of any pension or annuity charged and made payable to any person or persons in pursuance of any act or acts of parliament, or by virtue of any grants or letters patent made or granted by any of His Majesty's royal predecessors, kings or queens of this realm, but that the same dispositions, appropriations, and appointments shall continue, be in force, and take effect in the payment of all and every the annuities and pensions payable by the commissioners or receivers-general of Excise, in the same manner and at the same time and times that the said annuities and pensions have been usually paid before the commencement of this act."

The kingdom of England and Wales (exclusive of the bills of mortality) is divided into upwards of fifty collections; some called by names of particular counties; others by the names of great towns, where one county is divided into several collections, or where a collection comprehends the contiguous parts of several counties. Every collection is subdivided into districts, within each of which there is a supervisor; and each district is parcelled into out-rides and foot-walks, within each of which there is a gauger or surveying officer. Gilb Exch. Append. 297, 298.

By stat. 12 C. 2, c. 24, sect. 33. "The commissioners or sub-commissioners in their respective circuits and divisions shall constitute under their hands and seals such and so many gaugers as they shall find needful."

In order to which, he who would be made an Excise officer must procure a certificate that he is above twenty-one and under thirty years of age; that he understands the four first rules of arithmetic; that he is of the communion of the church of England; how he has been employed, or what business he has followed; that he is not incumbered with debts; whether single or married; and if married, how many children he has, for if he has above two he cannot (by the rules of the office) be admitted. Gilb. Exch. Append. 293.

He must also nominate two persons to be his sureties; and it must be certified that they are of sufficient ability, and that the said certificate is of his own handwriting. Such certificate, written by him, must be signed by the supervisor of Excise where the party applying lives. Gilb. Exch. Append. 293. His chief duty is to take accounts and survey what articles are excisable. High. on Excise, 20.

At the bottom of the certificate must be his affidavit, that neither he nor any one else to his knowledge hath directly or indirectly given or promised to give any treat, fee, gratuity, or reward for his obtaining or endeavouring to obtain an order for his being instructed. Id. 294.

When an order for instructing is granted, it is directed to an experienced officer, who receives such person as his pupil; and the like books as officers have being delivered to such pupil, he goes with and attends the officer, who instructs him and takes surveys, and in his own books makes the like entries as if he were an officer, until the instructor certifies that he is fully instructed. Id.

After he is thus certified for, and until he is employed, he is called an expectant, being to wait till a vacancy happens. Id.

The plaintiff declared in debt, that by an act for granting several rates upon tonnage of ships and vessels it is enacted, that if any gauger gauge any vat, &c. of beer, &c., and do not leave a true note in writing of the last gauges, containing the true quantity and quality, he shall forfeit 5*l.* for every offence; that the defendant gauged divers vessels, and did not leave a note in writing. On demurrer it was contended to be too general, for he should have specified what liquors, so that the Court might have perceived whether they were excisable or not; and of that opinion were the Court. Chance v. Adams, A. D. 1734, cited High. on Excise, 225.

The business of the supervisor is, to be continually surveying the houses and places of the persons within his district liable to duties; and to observe and see whether the officers duly make their surveys, and make due entries thereof in their books and in their specimen papers; (a) and every supervisor is in his own book to enter what he himself does each day and part thereof; and also to set down the behaviour, good or bad, the diligence or negligence of the several officers of his district; and at the end of every six weeks to draw out a diary of every day's business, and of the remarks made each day of the several officers in his district, and to transmit such diary at the end of every six weeks to the chief office. Gilb. Exch. App. 303, 304.

Each commissioner takes and peruses a proportion of these diaries; and when he meets with any remarkable complaint against any officer, he communicates it to the rest; who thereupon come to an agreement, either to admonish, reprimand, reduce, or discharge. For small faults, officers are admonished; for great ones, reprimanded; for greater, reduced; but for the greatest they are discharged. The commissioner who peruses the diary writes in the margin admonish or reprimand, &c. as is agreed on by the board. Gilb. Exch. App. 304.

These diaries, after having been thus written upon, are delivered to the clerk of the diaries, who, in a book called the reprimand-book, places the admonitions, reprimands, &c. to each officer's account, and writes every offender word thereof; which reprimand-book is resorted to, upon discovering new faults; and if it be there found that the officer has before been admonished and reprimanded so often that there are no hopes of his amending, he then is discharged. The said book is likewise resorted to when application is made for advancing or preferring an officer into a

The collector's business is, every six weeks, to go his rounds; and in the intervals of rounds he is to be assisting in prosecuting offenders before justices: he is also to peruse the supervisor's diaries, and where he finds an officer complained of, is to examine him and the supervisor, and, having heard both, is in the margin to write his opinion of each fact: he is also to have an eye how the supervisors and officers of his collection perform their duties; and from the vouchers he transcribes into his book the charge on each particular person in his collection. Id. 305, 306.

For faults, gaugers are reduced either to be only assistants, or from foot-walks to out-rides. Supervisors are reduced to be again only gaugers; and collectors are reduced to be supervisors. Id.

In some instances, discharged officers, after having for a competent time been thereby kept out of pay, are again restored; but if twice discharged are never again restored, unless one of the discharges appears to have been occasioned upon a misrepresentation of the case. Id. 307.

(3.) Receiver-general, &amp;c.

Appointment of a comptroller and an auditor of Excise for the united kingdom.

(3.) Of the Receiver-General, Comptroller, and Auditor.

7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 49, enacts, "That it shall be lawful for the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, from time to time, under his hand and seal, or under their hands and seals, to appoint a comptroller and an auditor for the united kingdom on behalf of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the purpose of comptrolling and auditing respectively all accounts of and belonging to the revenue of Excise, with such salaries respectively, payable by the commissioners of Excise out of the revenue of Excise, as the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, may in that behalf order and direct; and that such comptroller and auditor respectively shall in all respects be subject to such rules, orders, regulations, and directions as the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, shall from time to time make or prescribe, and transmit to the said comptroller and auditor respectively, for their direction and guidance in their respective offices."

Sect. 50. "That all money, bills, notes, drafts, checks, or orders for payment of money, received by or coming into the hands of the receiver-general of Excise (a) on account of the revenue of Excise (except as is hereinafter excepted), shall be paid by him into the hands of the governor

Moneys, &c. received by the receiver-general of Excise to be paid into the bank forthwith, to the account of the receiver-general of Excise.

(a) The receiver-general derives his appointment from the Crown, and gives great security for the money received. He pays the same weekly into the exchequer, and strikes tallies; but the commissioners are likewise accountable as well as the receiver; and they make up the account under the several branches to which the money is appropriated. See High. m Excise, 10.

The receiver is charged in such account by the comptroller and accountant, and the several collectors in the country, with the receipt of the money. He discharges himself by tally, by the allowance of salaries and other incidents, by order of the board. His accounts are received by the treasury, and annually carried to an auditor appointed by the Crown to receive such accounts: and, afterwards, these accounts are lodged at the pipe; and from the auditor he has his quietus, without coming to a baron, except to swear his account. See Gilb. Ex. 257. A quietus is a complete release, granted from the exchequer on finally settling the accounts. See High. m Excise, 11.

and company of the Bank of England, that is to say, all money, notes, drafts, checks, and orders, either on the same day or on the day next after the same shall have been received, and all bills on the day on which the same, having been first duly accepted, shall have been indorsed by the commissioners of Excise, or any two of them, for which money, bills, notes, drafts, checks, and orders, the entry in the book hereinafter mentioned shall be a sufficient discharge; and all such money, bills, notes, drafts, checks, and orders, so to be paid to the governor and company of the Bank of England, shall be placed to an account to be raised in the books of the said governor and company, and to be intituled 'the account of the public moneys of the receiver-general of Excise,' inserting the name of such receiver-general for the time being."

3. Receiver-General. &c.

Sect. 51. " Provided always, that it shall be lawful for such receiver-general to retain and keep in his own hands at the close of each day, for the payment of casual and ordinary and daily demands, out of the money so received by him as such receiver-general, any sum not exceeding thirty thousand pounds, or such further sum, not exceeding fifty thousand pounds, over and above the said thirty thousand pounds, as shall be directed or authorised by the commissioners of Excise to be retained by such receiver-general, or such further sum of money as shall or may from time to time, by a permission in writing under the hand or hands of the lord high treasurer, or of any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, be allowed to be retained by such receiver-general."

What sums may be retained by the receiver-general in his hands for the payment of ordinary and daily demands.

Sect. 52. " And be it further enacted, that the governor and company of the Bank of England, or some person duly authorized on their behalf, shall daily, upon receiving any money, bill, note, draft, check, or order from the receiver-general, make an entry of the money, and of every bill, note, draft, check, and order so received, in a book to be provided by the said governor and company, with the approbation of the lord high treasurer or commissioners of the treasury, and sent for that purpose by such receiver-general; and such book shall be forthwith, after the making of such entry, re-delivered to the persons making such payment, and shall be inspected daily after its return by the Excise comptroller of the cash or his clerk (such clerk being first duly authorized by such comptroller, and for whose conduct therein he shall be answerable), who shall compare the same with the book kept by such comptroller of the cash, for the purpose of seeing that the receiver-general constantly pays into the Bank all the money, bills, notes, drafts, checks, and orders which he is required to do under the provisions of this act; and any default which such comptroller of the cash or his clerk (duly authorized as aforesaid) may discover in that behalf shall, by such comptroller of the cash, be immediately reported to the commissioners of Excise."

Bank book to be kept and compared by the comptroller of the cash, and any default stated to the commissioners.

Sect. 53. " That the receiver-general of Excise shall pay, or cause to be paid, into the receipt of the Exchequer at Westminster, all money placed to the account of the receiver-general as aforesaid in the Bank of England, on such days in every week respectively as the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, shall from time to time direct, order, or appoint, and in such manner as hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, the said receiver-general or his clerk (duly authorized by him for that purpose, and for whose conduct therein he shall be answerable) shall make an order upon the governor and company of the Bank of England, which order shall be countersigned by the Excise comptroller of the cash, to write off from his account the sum desired; and the said governor and company, or some person duly authorized on their behalf, shall thereupon write off such sum, and deliver a note, drawn (and which for greater security shall be cancelled) in such manner and form as shall be approved of by the lord high treasurer or commissioners of the treasury, for the amount, to the said receiver-general or his clerk, who shall pay the same into the Exchequer; and the bank clerks attending there shall receive such note as cash to the amount thereof; and it shall not be lawful for the governor and company of the Bank of England to pay or transfer from the account of the receiver-general any part of the money so deposited and placed to such account, otherwise than into the Exchequer in manner aforesaid, or to deliver any bill of exchange, promissory note, draft, check, or order for the payment of money, save and except to His Majesty's solicitor of Excise in England, or his clerk, upon his application for the same, countersigned by the said receiver-general or his clerk, and such comptroller of the cash or his clerk, for the sole purpose of prosecuting an extent for the recovery of the money for which any such bill of exchange, promissory note, draft, check, or order for the payment of money shall have been given; and in such case the commissioners of Excise shall be immediately acquainted therewith, if sitting, by such solicitor, receiver-general, and comptroller of the cash, or if not sitting, then at the time of their next assembling; and such delivery shall be entered at the Bank in the bank book of the receiver-general, to be kept as is hereinbefore directed."

Sect. 54. "That upon the death, resignation, or removal of every receiver-general of Excise, the balance of cash for which such receiver-general shall at that time have credit in his account as such receiver-general, with the governor and company of the Bank of England, shall immediately upon a successor being appointed to the said office of receiver-general vest in such successor, in trust for the purposes aforesaid, and shall be forthwith transferred, carried over, and placed by the governor and company of the Bank of England to the account of such successor, to be applied in such manner as aforesaid."

Sect. 55. "That the receiver-general of Excise shall keep the account with the Bank of all money issued on his account as aforesaid; and such receiver-general, observing the rules and regulations by this act prescribed, shall not be answerable for any money which he shall have so paid or caused to be paid into the Bank of England; but the governor and company of the Bank of England shall be answerable for all money, bills, notes, drafts, checks, and orders which shall be actually received by them from and on account of such receiver-general as aforesaid, except such as may have been delivered out for the purpose of prosecuting an extent as aforesaid, and may not have been returned into the Bank of England."

Sect. 56. "That if any person shall forge or counterfeit, or shall cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, or shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist in forging or counterfeiting, the name or hand-writing of any receiver-general of Excise, or of any Excise comptroller of the cash as aforesaid, or of any of the persons duly authorized as aforesaid, to any draft, instrument, or writing whatsoever, for or in order to the receiving or obtaining any of the money, bills, notes, drafts, checks, or orders for the payment of money, in the hands or custody of the governor and company of the Bank of England on account of such receiver-general as aforesaid; or if any person shall forge or counterfeit, or shall cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, or shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist in the forging or counterfeiting, of any draft, instrument, or writing, in the form of a draft, instrument, or writing made by any receiver-general of Excise, or by any Excise comptroller of the cash as aforesaid, or by any person or persons authorized as aforesaid, or shall utter or publish any draft, instrument, or writing so forged or counterfeited, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeited, with an intention to defraud His Majesty, or any person whomsoever; every person so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be and is hereby declared and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as in cases of felony, without benefit of clergy."

4. Lands and Buildings, &c.

Sect. 122. "That it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, with the consent of the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, to contract for or purchase in trust for His Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the use and service of the revenue of Excise, any messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, either in fee simple or for any other or lesser estate or interest therein, which they the said commissioners of Excise may deem desirable to be contracted for or purchased for the use and service of the revenue of Excise; and that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise to pay the consideration money agreed to be paid or given for the estate or interest so contracted for or purchased out of any money arising from the revenue of Excise which shall be in their hands; and that the several messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, which at any time or times hereafter may be so contracted for or purchased, with all the rights, members, easements, and appurtenances to the same respectively belonging, shall be conveyed and assured to and vested in the secretary of His Majesty's commissioners of Excise for the time being, and in his successors in such office in perpetual succession, according to the respective nature and quality of the said messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and the estate and interest therein so contracted for or purchased in trust for His Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the use and service of the revenue of Excise."

Commissioners of Excise, with consent of the treasury, may purchase lands, &c. for their use, to be conveyed to their secretary, in trust for His Majesty.

Sect. 123. "That upon the death, resignation, or removal of the present secretary, or of any future secretary of the commissioners of Excise in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, all messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, which have been heretofore purchased or otherwise acquired or taken by or in the name or names of the present or any former secretary or secretaries of the commissioners of Excise in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, in trust for His Majesty or his royal predecessors, for the use and service of the revenue of Excise, and which are still holden in such trust, by whatsoever mode or conveyance the same may have been purchased or otherwise acquired and taken, either in fee or for any other or lesser estate or interest (whether such trust shall or shall not be expressed on the face of the conveyance or assurance of such messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments), and all erections and buildings which are or which shall or may be hereafter erected and built on any such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, together with the rights, members, easements, and appurtenances to the same respectively belonging (other than and except such messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments as may be of copyhold tenure), shall be and become and remain and continue vested in the secretary of His Majesty's commissioners of Excise in England for the time being, and in his successors in such office, in perpetual succession, according to the respective nature and quality of the said messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and the several estate and interest of and in the same respectively, in trust for His Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the use and service of the revenue of Excise."

Lands and buildings already purchased or taken in the name of any secretary of the commissioners to vest in the secretary for the time being.

Sect. 124. "That it shall be lawful for the secretary for the time being of His Majesty's commissioners of Excise in England, by and under the authority and direction of such commissioners (testified by writing under their hands and seals, or the hands and seals of any two or more of them), to sell, exchange, or in any manner dispose of, or to let, set, or demise, either by public auction or private contract, the freehold and leasehold messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments respectively, which shall for the time being be vested in such secretary as aforesaid, under and by virtue of this act, with their respective appurtenances, to any body or bodies corporate, or any person or persons who may be willing to purchase or take the same; and it shall be lawful for such secretary, under such authority and direction as aforesaid, for that purpose to make and execute all such conveyances, assurances, and agreements as may be thought proper, and also to do any other act, matter, or thing in relation to any such messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, as shall by the said commissioners be deemed beneficial for the revenue of Excise, or for the better management thereof, and which might be done by any person or persons having a like interest in any such messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments."

Sect. 125. "That the money arising and produced by the sale or exchange of any of the said messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, which under the provisions of this act shall be paid by the respective purchaser or purchasers thereof, or the body or bodies corporate, or person or persons making such exchange, shall be paid unto the receiver-general of Excise, or to such person or persons as the said commissioners of Excise, or any two or more of them, shall direct or appoint to receive the same, in trust for His Majesty, his heirs and successors; which money shall be accounted for by the commissioners of Excise as part of the revenue of Excise; and the receipt of the said receiver-general, or of such other person or persons as aforesaid, for such money (which receipt shall be indorsed on the conveyance or assignment of the said messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments), shall be a complete discharge to the purchaser or purchasers, or body or bodies corporate, or person or persons by whom or on whose account such money shall have been paid."

Purchasers of such lands, &c. shall stand possessed thereof, discharged of all prior claims thereon in right of His Majesty.

Sect. 126. "That from and immediately after the payment of such purchase money as aforesaid, and the execution of every such conveyance and assignment as aforesaid, the purchaser or purchasers, or body or bodies corporate, or person or persons making such exchange as aforesaid therein named, shall be deemed and adjudged to stand seised and possessed of the messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments which shall be so purchased by, and conveyed, assigned, or made over to such purchaser or purchasers, or body or bodies corporate, or person or persons making such exchange as aforesaid respectively, freed and absolutely discharged of and from all manner of prior estates, leases, rights, titles, interests, charges, incumbrances, and demands whatsoever, which can or may be had, made, set up, in, to, out of, or upon, or in respect of the same messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, by any person or persons whomsoever, by, from, or under, or in trust for His Majesty, his heirs and successors, on any account whatsoever, save and except such estates, leases, rights, titles, interests, charges, incumbrances, claims, and demands, if any, as in any such conveyance or assignment shall be specially excepted."

(5.) *Duties of Excise and licences.(5.) *Duties of Excise, and on Licences.

The 43 Geo. III., c. 69, consolidated most of the duties of Excise; and in schedules to the act each article is specified in alphabetical order. Schedule A. of duties, beginning with "Auctions," and ending with "Wire;" Schedule B. of countervailing duties of Excise on certain commodities imported from Ireland into Great Britain, and beginning with "Beer," and ending with "Wire;" and Schedule C. of allowances, bounties, and drawbacks of Excise, enumerating the several articles. This act was amended and in part repealed by 45 Geo. III., c. 94; 46 Geo. III., c. 138; 48 Geo. III., c. 120, s. 1; 49 Geo. III., c. 63; 55 Geo. III., c. 94; and various subsequent acts.

This act (43 Geo. III., c. 69, s. 4.), sect. 3, enacts, "that the duties shall be under the management of the respective commissioners of Excise, and shall be accounted for, &c., as former duties;" and

5. Duties of Excise, &c.

Sect. 4, "That duties and drawbacks under this act shall be levied, &c., as former duties, &c. unless hereby altered."

Sect. 5. That "duties shall be paid in proportion to the actual quantity."

Sect. 6. That "duties shall be carried to British consolidated fund."

Sect. 8. This "act shall not affect pensions payable by the commissioners, &c. of Excise."

Sect. 9. This "act shall not alter the hereditary revenue of His Majesty in Scotland, or the payment of annuities, &c. out of the revenues of Excise."

Sect. 10. "The sum reserved out of the duties on licences to retail wine, by 30 Geo. II., c. 19, shall be accounted for out of the duties on such licences granted by this act."

Sect. 11. "The amount of what would have been the hereditary duties of Excise shall be computed, set apart, and paid out of the duties by this act granted, as directed by 27 Geo. III., c. 13, s. 51."

Sect. 12. That "in future 36 gallons shall be reckoned a barrel of beer or ale, made by common brewers in Great Britain, and the allowance shall be three gallons out of that quantity for waste."

Sect. 13. That "such allowance shall be in full for all losses."

Sect. 14. That "no beer or ale shall be sold by the common brewers at any other than the above rate; but not to extend to other brewers."

Sect. 15. This "act shall not void licences granted under any law of Excise."

Then follow the schedules A, B, and C, above referred to, enumerating the duties, allowances, bounties, and drawbacks.

The amount of the duties, &c., on each article is varying continually. They will be stated when we consider the second branch of the subject, and therefore no table thereof is here given. The particular regulations as to each item, so far as it is the duty of magistrates to enforce them, will be found arranged under the second division of this subject.

The general regulations will follow under titles 6 to 28.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 25 and 26, directs at what times and places Excise traders shall pay their duties. See the clause, post, title Entries, &c.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 44 to s. 56, relates to the collection and application of the duties and penalties. See post, Vender.

We have seen that sometimes the duty is on the maker or vender of the commodity, rather than on the commodity itself. In these cases, before the party can make or sell the commodity he must obtain a licence so to do, upon which licence certain duties are imposed. The 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, intitled "an act to repeal several duties payable on EXCISE LICENCES in Great Britain and Ireland, and to impose other duties in lieu thereof, and to amend the laws for granting Excise licences," enacts, that from 5 July, 1825, all (a) the duties on licences shall cease, and that instead of the repealed duties the following shall be levied:

Duties on licences,
general act,
6 Geo. IV., c. 81.

"For and upon every Excise licence to be taken out by any maker, manufacturer, trader, dealer, retailer, or person hereinafter mentioned, within Great Britain and Ireland, to be paid by such maker, manufacturer, trader, dealer, retailer, and person respectively, the respective annual sum or duty of Excise in British currency hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say),"

New duties on licences.

And if rated, rented, or valued as aforesaid, at 20 l. per annum, or upwards . . . . .	3	3	0

(a) See alteration, by 1 W. IV., c. 51 and 64, post, title "Ale, Beer, and Brewer." The brewer (vide 1 W. IV., c. 51) will after the 10th day of October, 1830, be rated for his licence in proportion to the quantity of malt he may consume in his brewery, and not according to the number of barrels of beer he brews, in the course of twelve months. This is the only deviation from the 6 Geo. IV., c. 51, in reference to the brewer's licence. If a brewer retails beer, he will be bound by the 1 W. IV., c. 64, to take out a retail licence for that purpose.

Sect. 3. "And whereas the duty imposed by this act on every licence to be taken out by any brewer or brewers of beer for sale is rated according to the quantity of beer brewed by the person or persons taking out such licence; and whereas no account is taken or kept by the officers of Excise in Ireland of the quantity of beer brewed there for sale, but of the malt only used and employed by all and every brewer or brewers there for that purpose; be it therefore enacted, that all and every brewer or brewers of beer for sale in Ireland shall, for the purpose of fixing and regulating the rate and amount of duty to be paid by such brewer or brewers for the licence to be taken out by him, her, or them, under this act, be deemed to have brewed one barrel of beer for every two bushels of malt used or employed by such brewer or brewers in brewing; and shall, for every licence to be taken out by him, her, or them, under this act for brewing beer for sale, pay such amount of duty, according to the rate by this act imposed, as shall be correspondent to the quantity of beer which he, she, or they shall be deemed to have brewed as aforesaid."

Sect. 4. "That from and after the said fifth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five, all persons who shall be duly licensed under this act to deal in or sell coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, chocolate, or pepper, shall be deemed grocers, within the meaning of the several laws of Excise in force in Ireland, at and immediately before the passing of this act, and shall be entitled to take out the licence hereinbefore mentioned to retail spirits, in any quantity not exceeding two quarts at any one time, to be consumed elsewhere than in the house or on the premises of such retailer, subject nevertheless to all and every the regulations contained in the said laws, or any of them, in respect of grocers retailing spirits, except so far as the same are repealed or altered by this act."

Sect. 5. "And whereas the duty upon certain licences authorized and required to be taken out by this act is imposed at and according to the rent at which the premises used for the purpose or purposes mentioned in such licence are rated to the duty on inhabited houses; and whereas many houses or premises in different parts of the united kingdom, for or in respect of which such licences may be required, may not be so rated; be it therefore enacted, that in all cases, and in any part of the united kingdom in which any such house or premises shall not be so rated as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful, in order to ascertain the rent or annual value of such house or premises, for the person or persons, being the tenant or occupier thereof, who shall apply for any such licence, upon which the duty is so imposed as aforesaid, to produce to the person or persons authorized to grant such licence as aforesaid a certificate, signed by himself and the owner or landlord of the said house and premises, stating the true rent paid by or for which such house or premises is or are let to such tenant or occupier; or if the true rent, by reason of the payment of any premium, or performance of any condition or otherwise, shall not be reserved and payable to the owner or landlord by the tenant or occupier of such house or premises, then and in such case, stating the estimated rent or true annual value of such house or premises, and the rate of duty payable by such tenant or occupier for such licence, shall be paid, taken, and received, according to the rent or value so certified. Provided always, that if the person or persons authorized to grant such licence shall be dissatisfied with the rent or value so certified, he or they shall and is and are hereby authorized and required to adopt such other means as the commissioners of Excise shall think fit, and shall from time to time direct, to ascertain the true rent or annual value of such house or premises; and that thereupon the rate of duty payable for and upon such licence shall be paid, taken, and received, according to the rent or annual value of the house and premises so ascertained as last aforesaid; any thing herein or in any other act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 6. "That every Excise licence which is authorized or required to be taken out by this act shall be granted, and the duty thereupon imposed shall be paid in and throughout the united kingdom in manner and form following; that is to say, if any such licence shall be taken out within the limits of the head or chief office of Excise in London, then such licence shall be granted under the hands and seals of two or more of His Majesty's commissioners of Excise, or of such person or persons as such commissioners shall from time to time employ for that purpose, and the duty thereupon imposed as aforesaid shall be paid at such head or chief office at the time of granting the licence; or if such licence shall be taken out within the limits of the cities of Edinburgh or of Dublin respectively, such licence shall be granted under the hands and seals of His Majesty's commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise acting in and for Scotland or Ireland respectively for the time being, or of any two of them respectively, or of such person or persons as such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners shall from time to time employ for that purpose, and the duty thereupon imposed shall be paid at the chief office of Excise in Edinburgh or Dublin respectively at the time of granting the licence; or if such licence shall be taken out in any other part of the united kingdom without such respective limits as in that behalf respectively aforesaid, then and in every such case the same shall be granted under the hands and seals of the collector, or other person having charge of the collection, and supervisor of Excise within the collection and district in which such licence is taken out, and the duty thereupon imposed shall be paid to such collector or other person as aforesaid at the time of granting the licence; and such respective commissioners of Excise in England, and commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise acting in and for Scotland and Ireland respectively, and the person or persons by them respectively employed as aforesaid, and every collector or other person having charge of the collection, and supervisor as aforesaid, is and are hereby respectively authorized and required to grant and deliver every such licence to the person or persons who shall apply for and be legally entitled to receive the same, forthwith upon payment of the duty or sum of money thereupon imposed, free from all poundage, fee, gratuity, or any other payment whatsoever."

Sect. 7. "That in every licence to be taken out under or by authority of this act shall be contained and set forth the purpose, trade, or business for which such licence is granted, and the true name and place of abode of the person or persons taking out the same, and the true date or time of granting such licence, and (except in the case of auctioneers) the place at which the trade or business for which such licence is granted shall be carried on. Provided always, that persons in partnership, and carrying on their trade or business in one place and set of premises only, shall not be obliged to take out more than one licence in any one year, for the purpose of carrying on such trade or business, save and except that each and every person whatsoever exercising or carrying on the trade or business of an auctioneer, or acting as such, shall take out a separate and distinct licence for that purpose; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 8. "That every person exercising or carrying on the trade or business of an auctioneer, or selling any goods or chattels, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, by auction, shall, over and above any licence to him or her granted as an auctioneer, take out such licence as is required by law, to deal in or retail, or to vend, trade in, or sell any goods or commodities for the dealing in or retailing or vending, trading in or selling, of which an Excise licence is specially required, before he or she shall be permitted or authorized to sell such goods or commodities by auction; and if any such person shall sell any such goods or commodities as aforesaid by auction without having taken out such licence as aforesaid for that purpose, he or she shall be subject and liable to the penalty in that behalf imposed upon persons dealing in or retailing, vending, trading, or selling any such goods or commodities without licence, notwithstanding any licence to him or her before granted as aforesaid for the purpose of exercising or carrying on the trade or business of an auctioneer, or selling any goods or chattels, lands, tenements, or hereditaments by auction; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided always, that where such goods or commodities as aforesaid are the property of any person or persons duly licensed to deal in or retail, or to vend, trade in, or sell the same, such person or persons having made lawful entry of his, her, or their house or premises for such purpose, it shall and may be lawful for any person exercising or carrying on the trade or business of an auctioneer, or selling any goods or chattels, lands, tenements, or hereditaments by auction as aforesaid, being duly licensed for that purpose, to sell such goods or commodities as aforesaid for and on behalf of such person or persons, and upon his, her, or their entered house or premises, without taking out a separate licence for such sale."

Sect. 9. "That from and after the 5th day of July, 1825, where by any act or acts of parliament relating to Excise licences in force in Great Britain or Ireland on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, it is required that any person or persons taking out an Excise licence to exercise or carry on any trade or business therein mentioned in any part of the united kingdom should give bond at the time of granting such licence, it shall and may be lawful for such person or persons, except persons exercising or carrying on the trade or business of a brewer of beer in Ireland, or the trade or business of an auctioneer, or person selling any goods or chattels, lands, tenements, or hereditaments by auction in any part of the united kingdom, to take out such licence without giving bond as aforesaid; and that from and after the 5th day of July, 1825, where bond is given by any person or persons exercising or carrying on the trade or business of a brewer of beer for sale in Ireland, or by any person exercising or carrying on the trade or business of an auctioneer, or person selling any goods or chattels, lands, tenements, or hereditaments by auction in any part of the united kingdom, such bond shall bear date with the day or date of the licence taken out for such purpose, and shall be binding upon the person or persons by whom such bond was made and entered into from the day of such date, and not from the day on which the same may have been executed or delivered; any law or usage to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend to annul or make void any bond heretofore made, and which shall be in force and unexpired on the said 5th day of July, 1825, but that every such bond as last aforesaid shall remain and

Every auctioneer selling by auction any goods or commodities for the selling of which an Excise licence is specially required shall take out such licence, over and above his auctioneer's licence, except where the goods are the property of a licensed person, and sold on his behalf on his entered premises.

No person or persons taking out licence shall give bond, except brewers of beer for sale in Ireland, and auctioneers whose bonds shall bear date with that of the licence, and be binding upon them from that day. (a)

(a) A bond is not to be required of brewers on taking out a licence, by 1 Will. IV. c. 51.

5. Duties on Licences.

No one licence to authorize any person, except auctioneers, and maltsters, subject to the lowest rate of duty, to carry on his trade in more than one separate and distinct set of premises.

continue in force until the day of the expiration thereof; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 10. "That no one licence taken out under or by authority of this act, by any person or persons, except auctioneers or maltsters, shall authorize or empower such person or persons to exercise or carry on the trade or business mentioned in such licence in more than one separate and distinct set of premises, such premises being all adjoining or contiguous to each other, and situate in one place, and held together for the same trade or business, and of which he, she, or they shall have made lawful entry, to exercise or carry on therein his, her, or their trade or business as aforesaid, at the time of granting such licence, but that a separate and distinct licence shall be taken out by all and every such person or persons as aforesaid, except as aforesaid, to exercise or carry on his, her, or their trade or business as aforesaid, at or in any other or different premises than as before mentioned. Provided always, that where the amount or rate of any such licence shall depend upon the quantity of goods made or manufactured by the person or persons to whom the same is granted, such quantity shall be computed from the respective goods only made or manufactured by such person or persons at the premises in respect of which such licence is granted, and shall not include goods made or manufactured by such person or persons at any other or different premises, for which a separate and distinct licence is required as above mentioned."

Sect. 11. "Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to prohibit any person or persons duly licensed to sell beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed in his, her, or their house or premises, or any retailer of spirits (not being a retailer of spirits in Ireland, licensed as a grocer, to trade in, vend, and sell coffee, tea, cocoanuts, chocolate, or pepper), or any retailer of foreign wine, or retailer of sweets or made wines, or of mead or metheglin, he or she being duly licensed respectively for such respective purpose, to carry on his or her trade or business for which he or she respectively shall be so licensed as aforesaid, in booths, tents, or other places, at the time and place and within the limits of holding any lawful and accustomed fair, by virtue of any law or statute in that behalf, or any public races. Provided also, that in all cases in which the house or premises in respect of which any Excise licence is or shall be granted shall be burnt down, or otherwise destroyed, or rendered uninhabitable by fire or other unavoidable cause or accident, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise, or collector and supervisor, or other person or persons authorized to grant licences within the district or place in which such house or premises was or were situate, upon due notice thereof to him or them in that behalf given, to authorize and empower, by indorsement on such licence, or otherwise, as the commissioners of Excise shall direct, the person or persons authorized to carry on trade or business by such licence at the house or premises so burnt down or otherwise destroyed or rendered uninhabitable, to carry on such trade or business at any other and different house or premises in the same district or place, of which due entry shall be thereupon made by such person or persons at the time of such removal thereto. Provided always, that where such licensed person or persons as aforesaid shall be a person or persons by law required to be duly authorized by justices of the peace to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, it shall not be lawful for the commissioners or assistant commissioners of Excise, or such collector and supervisor, or other person or persons authorized to grant licences as aforesaid, to authorize or empower such licensed person or persons as aforesaid, unless such person or persons shall, besides giving such notice as hereinbefore required, produce to such collector and supervisor, or other person or persons authorized to grant licences as aforesaid, such authority from justices of the peace, as by law required in that behalf, to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, in the house or premises to which such person or persons shall desire to remove, in consequence of such fire or other unavoidable cause or accident as aforesaid."

Sect. 12. "That it shall not be necessary for any person or persons to take out an Excise licence for the sale of any foreign goods or commodities, for the sale of which in any manner an Excise licence is required by this act, whilst such goods or commodities shall be and remain in the warehouse or warehouses in which the same shall have been deposited, lodged, or secured according to law, before payment of duty upon the importation thereof; any thing in this or any other act to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding. Provided always, that every such sale shall be of not less than one entire cask or package of the liquors or goods so warehoused, and be made to one person, or to persons carrying on trade or business in partnership."

Sect. 13. "That no Excise licence shall be granted under or by authority of this act, for the sale of any beer, or cyder, or perry, by retail, to be drank or consumed upon the house or premises of the person or persons applying for such licence, to any person or persons who shall not produce at the time of applying for such licence a certificate or authority then in force, to him, her, or them in that behalf granted in due form of law by justices of the peace or magistrates, or other competent persons, for such person or persons applying for such licences as aforesaid to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house; and if any such licence shall be granted to any person or persons other than as aforesaid, the same shall be and is hereby declared to be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes, and the person or persons taking out the same shall be subject to all penalty or penalties to which he, she, or they would have been subject had no such licence been granted."

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 17. "No licence for the sale of any exciseable liquors by retail, to be drank or consumed on the premises of the person licensed, shall be granted by the commissioners of Excise, or by any officer of Excise, to any person whatsoever, unless such person shall have previously obtained from the justices a licence under this act, and which said licence of such justices shall be retained by such person after being produced to the commissioners or officers of Excise; and every licence granted by the commissioners of Excise, or by any officer of Excise, contrary to this provision, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes."

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 81. s. 14. "That no licence for the sale of any spirits or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, by retail, to be drank or consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, shall be granted to any person or persons who shall not have and produce a licence for the sale of beer, cyder, or perry, by retail, to be drank or consumed in or upon such house or premises, in that behalf granted as herein by this act before mentioned; and if any licence for the sale of any spirits or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, by retail, to be drank or consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, shall be granted to any person or persons other than as aforesaid, such licence shall be and is hereby declared to be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes, and all and every such person or persons as aforesaid shall be subject and liable to all and every penalty and penalties imposed upon persons selling spirits or foreign wines, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, by retail without licence."

Sect. 15. "That the spirits called aqua vitæ in Scotland shall be deemed and taken to be British spirits to all intents and purposes, and that all persons retailing such spirits in Scotland or elsewhere shall first take out a licence to retail beer, and also a licence to retail spirits, as before directed by this act, and shall in all respects be subject to all the same rules, regulations, and restrictions to which such retailers of spirits are subject or liable; any thing in this or any other act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

5. Duties on Licences.

No Excise licence necessary for the sale of any exciseable commodity whilst it is in the import warehouses.

Limitation of quantity.

No licence to be granted for selling beer or cyder by retail, to be drank on the premises, without a justice's licence.

Enactment of 9 Geo. IV., c. 61, s. 17, as to necessity for a justice's licence; but see 1 Geo. IV., c. 64.

No licence shall be granted to any person to retail spirits, or foreign wines, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, to be drank on the premises, who has not a retail beer licence.

No licence for retailing aqua vitæ to persons not licensed to sell beer by retail.

5. Duties on Licences.

Licences taken out by brewers and distillers, and by publicans, as retailers of beer, spirits, or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, shall expire on the 10th of October in each year, and all other licences on the 5th day of July, to be renewed yearly, and notice for renewal given by the trader 21 days at least before the expiration of his current licence; every such licence to bear date from the expiration of the former licence when regularly renewed, and when afterwards or otherwise granted, from the date of the application.

Licences may be granted to new beginners for a proportional part of the year, who shall pay duty accordingly, according to the quarter of the year in which the licence shall be taken out.

Sect. 16. "That from and after the 5th day of June, 1825, all Excise licences taken out in the united kingdom by any brewer or brewers of beer, or by any distiller or maker, distillers or makers of low wines or spirits, or by any person or persons who shall be duly authorized by justices of the peace to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, and who shall take out a licence for selling beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed in the house or premises, or for selling spirits or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, by retail, under or by virtue of this act, or any other law or laws of Excise (except any Excise licence or licences theretofore granted, and which shall be then in force and unexpired), shall continue and be in force from the day of the date of such licences respectively until the 10th day of October following, on which day in each year all such Excise licences (except as aforesaid) shall expire; and that all other Excise licences throughout the united kingdom, except those above specified, and except as above excepted, shall continue and be in force from the day of the date of such licences respectively until the 5th day of July following, on which day in each year all such licences as last aforesaid (except as aforesaid) shall expire; and all and every person or persons who shall have taken out any such licence as aforesaid, and who shall wish or intend to continue the trade or business for which such licence was granted for any longer space of time, shall take out a fresh licence for the year following, to expire on one of such days as hereinbefore mentioned, according to the nature of the licence by him, her, or them taken out, and shall so renew the same from year to year, so long as he, she, or they shall continue such trade or business, and shall pay in each and every such case the duty thereupon imposed at such time and place as hereinbefore mentioned; and every such person or persons shall in every such case as aforesaid give notice in writing at least twenty-one days before the expiration of the current licence to him, her, or them before granted, of such his, her, or their intention to continue the trade or business for which such licence was before granted, to the collector or supervisor, or other person or persons authorized to grant licences for the district or place at which such trade or business shall be carried on; and in cases where the Excise licence is so renewed as aforesaid, and such notice as aforesaid shall have been given, the new licence shall bear date from the day or date of the expiration of the current licences before granted; but in case where such notice shall not have been given as aforesaid, and in all other cases than as aforesaid, the licence shall bear date from the day of the date of the application made for such licence, although and notwithstanding any such licence may be delivered at any day subsequent to the date of such application."

Sect. 17. "Provided always, that if any person or persons shall commence or begin to exercise or carry on any trade or business, for the exercise or carrying on of which an Excise licence is required, such person or persons not having before taken out any such licence, it shall and may be lawful for the person and persons authorized to grant licences, to grant such licence for the remainder of the current year in which such licence shall be taken out, ending on the 5th day of July or on the 10th day of October next following the date of the licence taken out by such person or persons, according to the nature of such licence, upon payment of such proportional part of the duty thereupon imposed, in such manner as hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, if such licence shall be taken out at any time within the first quarter of the current year in which such licence shall be taken out, and ending as aforesaid, or in the quarter expiring on the 10th day of October, or on the 5th day of January, next following the date of such licence, according to the nature of the licence taken out, that then the person or persons taking out such licence shall pay the whole duty imposed upon such licence, in such manner as hereinbefore mentioned at the time of granting such licence; and if such licence shall be taken out at any time within the second quarter of such current year, and ending as aforesaid, or in the quarter expiring on the 5th day of January, or on the 5th day of April, next following the date of such licence, according to the nature of the licence taken out, the person or persons taking out such licence shall pay three-fourth parts of the duty imposed upon such licence, in such manner as hereinbefore mentioned at the time of granting such licence; and if such licence shall be taken out at any time within the third quarter of such current year, and ending as aforesaid, or in the quarter expiring on the 5th day of April, or on the 5th day of July, next following the date of such licence, according to the nature of the licence taken out, one half of the duty imposed upon such licence shall be paid in such manner as hereinbefore mentioned at the time of granting such licence; and finally, if such licence shall be taken out at any time within the last quarter of such current year, and ending as aforesaid, or in the quarter expiring on the 5th day of July, or on the 10th day of October, next following the date of such licence, according to the nature of the licence taken out, that then a fourth part only of the duty imposed upon such licence shall be paid in such manner as hereinbefore mentioned at the time of granting such licence."

Sect. 18. "Provided also, that no person or persons who shall at any time have taken out an Excise licence for the exercise or carrying on of any trade or business for which an Excise licence is required, and who shall in any subsequent year after such licence shall have expired take out a new licence for the carrying on the same trade or business, whether on the same or on other or different premises from those on which he, she, or they before carried on such trade or business, shall be deemed or taken to be a person or persons commencing or beginning to exercise or carry on such trade or business, within the intent and meaning of this act, so as to entitle him, her, or them to take out such licence, upon payment of a proportional part only of the duty thereupon imposed; but all and every such person or persons as aforesaid shall pay the whole of such duty, unless the period of time between the expiration of the former licence and the taking out of the new licence shall at the least be a period of two years."

Sect. 19. "That where any licence taken out by any brewer or brewers of beer, or by any distiller or maker, distillers or makers of low wines or spirits, or by any person or persons who, being authorized by justices of the peace to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, shall have taken out a licence for selling beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed in the house or premises where sold, or for selling spirits, foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, by retail, in the united kingdom, under any act or acts of parliament in force in Great Britain or Ireland respectively, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the said 5th day of July, 1825, and the 10th day of October, 1825, it shall and may be lawful for the person and persons authorized to grant licences within the district or place in which such person or persons respectively carry on trade or business, to grant such person or persons respectively, by whom respectively the former licences were taken out as aforesaid, a licence as a brewer or brewers of beer, or as a distiller or maker, distillers or makers of low wines or spirits, or if duly authorized by justices of the peace to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, a licence for selling beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed in the house or premises, or for selling spirits or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, for such person or persons respectively, to exercise and carry on such respective trades or businesses for the remainder of the year ending the 10th day of October, 1825, under the provisions of this act, upon payment of one-fourth part of the duty imposed upon such licences respectively, at the time of granting thereof; and that all such licences shall expire on the 10th day of October, 1825, and shall be renewed, or a new licence in that behalf granted, and for the same purpose, for the whole year ensuing, to expire on the 10th day of October following; and such licences shall be so renewed from year to year, as long as such licences shall continue to be taken out by such person or persons as aforesaid, to whom the same respectively were before granted; and where any licence taken out by any such person or persons as before specified, under any act or acts of parliament in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the 10th day of October, 1825, and the 5th day of January, 1826, it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons authorized to grant licences as aforesaid to grant to the person or persons by whom such licence shall have been so taken out as aforesaid a licence to exercise or carry on the same trade or business under the provisions of this act, for the remainder of the year ending the 10th day of October, 1826, upon payment of the whole duty imposed upon such licence at the time of granting thereof; and if any licence taken out by any such person or persons as before specified, under any act or acts of parliament in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the 5th day of January, 1826, and the 5th day of April, 1826, it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons authorized to grant such licences as aforesaid, to grant to the person or persons by whom such licence shall have been so taken out as aforesaid, a licence to exercise or carry on the same trade or business, under the provisions of this act, for the remainder of the year ending the 10th day of October, 1826, upon payment of three-fourth parts of the duty imposed upon such licence at the time of granting thereof; and if any licence taken out by any such person or persons as before specified, under any act or acts of parliament in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the 5th day of April, 1826, and the 5th day of July, 1826, it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons authorized to grant licences as aforesaid, to grant to the person or persons by whom such licence shall have been so taken out as aforesaid, a licence to exercise or carry on the same trade or business under the provisions of this act, for the remainder of the year, ending the 10th day of October, 1826, upon payment of one-half part of the duty imposed upon such licence at the time of granting thereof; and that all such licences which shall be so granted as aforesaid, between the 10th day of October, 1825, and the 5th day of July, 1826, shall expire respectively on the 10th day of Oct. 1826, and shall then be renewed, or a new licence for the same purpose granted for the whole year ensuing, to expire on the 10th day of October following; and such licences shall so in such manner be renewed from year to year, as long as such licences shall continue to be taken out by such person or persons as aforesaid, to whom the same were before granted respectively."

All other licences taken out by any persons other than brewers, or distillers, or publicans, retailing beer, or spirits, or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, mead or metheglin, under any former acts which expire between the periods herein mentioned, shall be renewed for a proportional part of the year, upon payment of duty according to the quarter in which taken out.

Sect. 20. "That where any licence taken out by any person or persons whatsoever in the united kingdom, other than a brewer of beer, or than a distiller or maker, distillers or makers of low wines or spirits, or than a person or persons authorized by justices of the peace to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, who shall have taken out a licence for selling beer, cyder, or perry, to be drank or consumed in the house or premises where sold, or for selling spirits, or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin by retail, under any act or acts of parliament in force in Great Britain or Ireland respectively, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the said 5th day of July, 1825, and the 5th day of July, 1826, it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons authorized to grant licences within the district or place in which such person or persons other than as aforesaid shall carry on trade or business, to grant to such person or persons a licence to exercise or carry on the same trade or business for which such licence was before granted, under any act or acts in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, under the provisions of this act, for the remainder of the year ending the 5th day of July, 1826, in manner hereinafter following; that is to say, if the licence taken out by any such person or persons, other than as aforesaid, under any act or acts in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the said 5th day of July, 1825, and the 10th day of October then next following, then upon payment of the whole duty imposed upon such licence at the time of granting thereof; and if the licence taken out by any such person or persons, other than as aforesaid, under any act or acts in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the said 10th day of October, 1825, and the 5th day of January, 1826, then upon payment of three-fourth parts of the duty imposed upon such licence at the time of granting thereof; and if the licence taken out by any such person or persons, other than as aforesaid, under any act or acts in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the said 5th day of January, 1826, and the 5th day of April then next following, then upon payment of one-half of the duty imposed upon such licence at the time of granting thereof; and finally, if the licence taken out by any such person or persons, other than as aforesaid, under any act or acts in force as aforesaid, on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall expire between the said 5th day of April, 1826, and the said 5th day of July, 1826, then upon payment of one-fourth part of the duty wholly imposed upon such licence at the time of granting thereof; and all such licences so granted as aforesaid between the said 5th day of July, 1825, and the 5th day of July, 1826, shall expire respectively on the 5th day of July, 1826, to be then renewed, or a new licence for the same purpose granted for the whole year ensuing, to expire on the 5th day of July following; and such licences shall in such manner be renewed from year to year, as long as such licences shall continue to be taken out by such person or persons, other than as aforesaid, to whom the same were before granted respectively."

Sect. 21. "Provided always, that upon the death of any person or persons licensed under or by virtue of this act, or any law or laws of Excise, or upon the removal of any such person or persons from the house or premises at which he, she, or they were authorized by such licence to exercise or carry on the trade or business mentioned in such licence, it shall and may be lawful for the person and persons authorized to grant licences, to authorize and empower, by indorsement on such licence, or otherwise, as the commissioners of Excise shall direct, the executors or administrators, or the wife or child of such deceased person, or the assignee or assigns of such person or persons so removing as aforesaid, who shall be possessed of and occupy the house or premises before used for such purpose as aforesaid, in like manner to exercise or carry on the same trade or business mentioned in such licence, in or upon the same house or premises at which such person or persons as aforesaid deceased or removing as before mentioned, by virtue of such licence to him, her, or them in that behalf granted, before exercised or carried on such trade or business, for and during the residue of the term for which such licence was originally granted, without taking out any fresh licence or payment of any additional duty, or any fee thereupon for the residue of such term and until expiration thereof. Provided always, that a fresh entry of the premises at which such trade or business shall continue to be so exercised or carried on as aforesaid shall thereupon be made by and in the name or names of the person or persons to whom such authority as aforesaid shall be granted; and provided also, that no such authority as aforesaid shall be granted for the sale of beer, cyder, or perry, or sweets, or made wines or sweets, mead or metheglin by retail, to be drank or consumed in or upon the house or premises for which the original licence was granted, except and in such cases where a proper certificate granted and given by a justice of the peace or magistrate, or other competent person according to the law, made after the death or removal of the former occupier or occupiers of the premises shall have

6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 22. "That all and every person or persons who shall be disabled by any conviction from holding or having a licence to keep, or from keeping a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, shall also by such conviction be disabled from taking out and from having any Excise licence to sell, and from selling beer, cyder, or perry by retail in any manner whatsoever, under any Excise licence or licences obtained for such purpose; and if any such person shall, after such conviction as aforesaid, take out or have any Excise licence or licences for any such purpose as aforesaid, the same shall and is hereby declared to be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes; and every person who shall, after such conviction as aforesaid, sell any beer, cyder, or perry by retail in any manner whatsoever, shall incur the penalty for so doing without licence; and in all such cases in the prosecution for the recovery of such penalty a certificate from the clerk of the peace or person acting as such, of any such conviction as aforesaid, shall on the trial in such prosecution be legal evidence thereof, which certificate such clerk of the peace, or other person acting as such, is hereby authorized and required, within one week after any such conviction shall have been returned to his office, to deliver to the collector of Excise, or other person or persons authorized to grant Excise licences within the district or place in which such conviction shall have taken place, setting forth a copy of such conviction signed by himself, for which he shall demand or receive no fee or reward whatsoever; and if any such clerk of the peace or other person acting as such as aforesaid shall neglect or omit to deliver such certificate as aforesaid, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of ten pounds."

Sect. 23. "That where the licence for the sale of beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed upon the house or premises of the person or persons to whom the same is granted shall become void, and the person or persons thereupon disabled in such manner as before mentioned by this act, the licence for the sale of any spirits or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin by retail, to be drank or consumed upon the house or premises thereupon granted, shall become null and void also, to all intents and purposes; and in such case if the person or persons to whom the same respectively were granted shall sell any spirits or any foreign wine, or any sweets or made wines, or any mead or metheglin respectively by retail, to be drank or consumed upon the house or premises, after such conviction as aforesaid shall have taken place in manner before mentioned in this act, and every such licence as aforesaid has thereby become void, such person or persons shall incur the penalty for selling spirits or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, to be consumed upon the premises by retail without licence; and in all such cases, in the prosecution for the recovery of such penalty as aforesaid, such conviction shall be proved in such and the like manner as before specified by this act in a prosecution under similar circumstances for the sale of beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed on the house or premises without licence."

Sect. 24. "And whereas the periods at which justices of the peace or magistrates, or other competent persons as aforesaid, are in the practice of granting such certificates or authorities as aforesaid to persons to keep common inns, alehouses, or victualling houses, are various, and at different times in different parts of the united kingdom: and whereas the same do not in any manner correspond with the period at which Excise licences are granted, or for which the same continue in force; and that upon the expiration of such certificate or authority as aforesaid, the Excise licence to sell beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed upon the house or premises where sold, granted upon such certificate or authority as aforesaid expires, and the Excise licences to sell spirits, foreign wines, sweets or made wines, and mead or metheglin by retail, to be drank or consumed upon the house or premises, which are granted upon such retail beer Excise licence do thereupon also expire: be it therefore enacted, that if the term for which any such certificate or authority as aforesaid is granted shall expire (no conviction as before mentioned having taken place) at any time within the first quarter of the current year for which such Excise licences as aforesaid respectively were granted, and no such certificate or authority shall be renewed or granted for the succeeding year, three-fourth parts of the duties thereupon respectively paid by the person or persons to whom the same respectively were granted shall be returned to the person or persons then holding such licences, and carrying on trade or business in such house or premises; and if such certificate or authority as aforesaid shall expire as aforesaid at any time within the second quarter of the current year for which such licences as aforesaid respectively were granted, and shall not be renewed or granted for the succeeding year, one-half part of the duties paid thereon respectively shall be returned as aforesaid; and if such certificate or authority shall so expire as aforesaid at any time within the third quarter of the current year for which such licences as aforesaid respectively were granted, and shall not be renewed or granted as aforesaid, then one-fourth part of the duties paid thereon respectively shall be returned as aforesaid; and the collector or other person or persons to whom the duty or duties payable on such licences respectively was or were paid at the time of granting the same, shall and are hereby respectively authorized and required to return such sum or sums of money as aforesaid to such person or persons as aforesaid, on application to him or them being thereupon made by such person or persons for that purpose."

goods or commodities, or for the exercising or carrying on of which trade or business, a licence is required by this act, without taking out such licence as is in that behalf required, he, she, or they shall for every such offence respectively forfeit and lose the respective penalty thereupon imposed, as hereinafter follows; (that is to say),

Penalties. (a)

Every distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, and every rectifier or compounder of spirits, so offending respectively, shall respectively forfeit and lose five hundred pounds:

Every manufacturer of tobacco or snuff, so offending, shall forfeit and lose two hundred pounds:

Every person exercising or carrying on the trade or business of an auctioneer, or selling any goods or chattels, lands, tenements, or hereditaments by auction; every brewer of table beer only, for sale; every brewer of beer (other than table beer only) for sale; every brewer of beer for sale, who shall retail such beer to be consumed elsewhere than on his, her, or their premises; every person, not being a brewer of beer, who shall sell strong beer only in casks, containing not less than four gallons and a half, or in not less than two dozen reputed quart bottles at one time, to be drank or consumed elsewhere than on his, her, or their premises; every maker of wax or spermaceti candles, for sale; every chandler or maker of candles for sale, other than wax or spermaceti candles; every glass-maker; every tanner; every tawer; every dresser of hides or skins in oil; every currier; every maker of vellum or parchment; every maltster, or maker of malt; every maker of paper, pasteboard, or scale-board; every printer, painter, or stainer of paper; every calico printer, and every printer, painter, or stainer of linens, cottons, stuffs, or silks; every maker of soap for sale; every dealer in spirits, not being a retailer thereof; every retailer of spirits in Ireland, being licensed to trade in, vend, and sell coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, chocolate, or pepper; every starch maker for sale; every maker of sweets or made wines, or of mead or metheglin, for sale; every maker of vinegar or acetous acid, for sale; every dealer in foreign wine; and every wire-drawer or other person who shall draw or cause to be drawn any gilt or silver wire, commonly called big wire, so offending respectively; shall respectively forfeit and lose the sum of one hundred pounds:

Every person who shall sell beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed in his, her, or their house or premises; every retailer of spirits, not being a retailer of spirits in Ireland, duly licensed to sell coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, chocolate, or pepper; every retailer of foreign wine; every retailer of sweets or made wines, or of mead or metheglin; every person trading in or selling coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, chocolate, or pepper; every dealer in or seller of tobacco or snuff; every maker of stills in Scotland or Ireland; every person in Scotland or Ireland, not being a distiller, rectifier, or compounder of spirits, who shall keep or use any still for the carrying on the trade of a chemist, or any other trade or business requiring the use of any still or stills; so offending respectively, shall respectively forfeit and lose the sum of fifty pounds."

Sect. 27. "That if any spirits shall be sold or delivered in any quantity

The occupiers' of premises where goods are retailed without licence by persons unknown shall be deemed to be the retailers thereof, if privy or consenting thereto.

(a) A., B., C., D., and E. carried on trade in partnership as distillers, and C. alone carried on the business of a retail dealer in spirits within two miles of the distillery, contrary to the 4 Geo. IV., c. 94, s. 132, 133; and his name was not inserted as one of the partners in the distillery in the Excise-book, or licence, as required by the 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 7; held, that these being mere revenue regulations, the breach of them by one of the partners, with the knowledge of the others, did not render the trade carried on by the five so illegal as to deprive them of the right to recover the price of spirits sold by them, or for the breach of a guaranty for the due accounting of an agent, to whom they had consigned the spirits for sale; 10 Bar. & Cress. 93; and see 3 Term Rep. 560.

less than two gallons, or if any beer, wine, cyder, perry, sweets, mead, or metheglin, or vinegar, or any other goods for the retail of which a licence is by this act required, shall be sold by retail in any house or premises, or in any part of any house or premises, by any person or persons unknown, or who shall not be licensed for that purpose according to this act, the occupier of such house or premises, or part of any house or premises, where such spirits or other liquors or goods shall be so sold as aforesaid, if but one occupier only, and if more than one, then the several occupiers thereof, being privy or consenting thereto, shall be deemed and taken to be the retailer or retailers of such spirits, or other liquors or goods, and as such shall be subject and liable to the penalties imposed upon persons for the sale of spirits, or such other liquors or goods, by retail, without licence."

Sect. 28. "That if any person or persons licensed to exercise or carry on any trade or business, or make or sell any goods for which an Excise licence is required, shall not produce and deliver such licence to be read and examined by any officer or officers of Excise, within a reasonable time after such officer or officers shall demand the production thereof, such person or persons shall for each and every such offence forfeit the sum of twenty pounds."

Sect. 29. "And for the encouragement of those who shall discover offences committed against the laws relating to Excise laws, be it further enacted, that where any person or persons shall be lawfully convicted of any offence in carrying on any trade or business, or making or selling any goods without licence, for the carrying on of which trade or business, or the making or selling of which goods, a licence or licences is or are required by this act, and the pecuniary penalty imposed for such offence shall not be paid and cannot be levied, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of Excise to cause such reward as they shall think fit, not exceeding ten pounds in each case, to be paid to the several and respective persons who shall appear to them to be entitled thereto as informers, out of any moneys in their hands arising by any penalties or forfeitures incurred under the laws of Excise."

Sect. 30. "Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall in anywise prejudice the privileges heretofore used and enjoyed by any university in the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or the respective chancellors or scholars of the same respectively, or their successors, or the master, wardens, freemen, and commonalty of the vintners of the city of London, or other city or town corporate in any part of the united kingdom, or the mayor or burgesses of the burgh of St. Alban's, in the county of Hertford, or their successors, but that they may respectively use and enjoy such privileges as they have heretofore respectively lawfully used and enjoyed the same."

Sect. 31. "That all powers, authorities, rules, regulations, restrictions, exceptions, provisions, clauses, matters, and things, which in and by any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise in force in Great Britain or Ireland respectively on or immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, are provided, settled, or established for securing, enforcing, managing, raising, levying, collecting, paying, mitigating, or recovering, adjudging, or ascertaining the Excise duties or penalties thereby granted or imposed, and for preventing, detecting, and punishing frauds relating thereto, other than and except in such cases for which other penalties, regulations, or provisions are made or prescribed by this act, shall be exercised, practised, applied, used, and put in execution in and for the managing, raising, levying, collecting, mitigating, adjudging, ascertaining, recovering, and paying the several duties and penalties respectively hereby granted or imposed, and for the due enforcement of all other matters and things herein contained, so far* the same are not repugnant to or inconsistent therewith, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes, as if all and every the said powers, authorities, rules, regulations, restrictions,

Sect. 32. "That all penalties and forfeitures imposed by this act (save and except in such case where any special provision is herein made) shall be sued for, levied, recovered, mitigated, and distributed by such ways, means, and methods, and in such manner, as by any law or laws of Excise in force is or shall in that behalf be directed, provided, and enacted in Great Britain and Ireland respectively."

Sect. 33. "That all powers, authorities, rules, regulations, restrictions, exceptions, provisions, clauses, matters, and things, provided for or contained in any act or acts of parliament in force relating to the revenue of Excise in Great Britain or Ireland respectively, on or immediately before the 5th day of July, 1825, expressly repealed, altered, or re-enacted by this act, or which are repugnant to or inconsistent with the several matters, clauses, provisions, and regulations of this act, any or either of them, shall, and the same are hereby respectively, from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, declared to be repealed, and shall no longer be put in force or observed in any part of the united kingdom."

Sect. 34. "Provided always, that for and upon the several Excise licences taken out by any person or persons in Ireland, in and for the year 1825, under the laws of Excise then in force, there shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid, so much only of the duties payable thereon as shall be equal and correspondent to the several sums of money made payable by this act upon such licences, from and after the 5th day of July 1825, so far as the same can be computed, adjusted, and ascertained; and that it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners and several collectors of Excise, and they are hereby authorized and required to repay out of any money in their hands arising from duties of Excise, to all and every person and persons who have taken out any Excise licence in Ireland, in and for the year 1825, and paid the duty thereon payable by the laws then in force, so much as may be the computed, adjusted, and ascertained excess of the duties so paid over and above the rate of duty on such licence made payable by this act from and after the 5th day of July, 1825, upon the application of such person and persons to such commissioners, or the collectors of Excise for the same."

Sect. 35. "Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend to repeal the Excise duties on licences for selling or making gold or silver plate in Ireland, or on licences for exercising the trade or calling of a hawker, pedlar, petty chapman, or other trading person going from place to place in Ireland; or on licences to travelling tinkers or person, hawking about tea for sale in Ireland; or on licences for servants or other persons employed in carrying goods of any such hawker or pedlar; or on horses or other beasts bearing or drawing burden, which such person shall so travel with in Ireland; nor to repeal the duties on Excise licences to persons letting horses to hire, for the purpose of travelling post in Ireland; or on Excise licences to persons trading in, vending, or selling gold and silver plate in Great Britain; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 36. "That this act shall commence and take effect from and immediately after the 5th day of July, 1825."

Sect. 37. "That this act, or any of the provisions thereof, may be altered, varied, or repealed, by any act to be passed in this session of Parliament."

(6.) Complaints of Overcharges of Duty, &c.6. Of Overcharges, &c.

7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 120. "That it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, or any three or more of them, within the limits of the chief office of Excise, and for any two or more of the justices of the peace in any other part of the united kingdom, within whose jurisdiction respectively any person or persons chargeable with any duty of Excise shall have been charged therewith, upon complaint to them respectively made by any such person or persons, of any overcharge in that behalf made by any officer of Excise, within twelve calendar months next after the making of such charge, and such commissioners and justices are hereby respectively authorized and required to hear, adjudge, and determine such complaint, and to examine the witness or witnesses upon oath, who shall be thereupon produced, as well on the behalf of the person or persons making such complaint as on the behalf of His Majesty, and of all parties therein concerned, and shall thereupon, by warrant under their hands, discharge or acquit such person or persons of so much of such charge as shall be made out and proved before such commissioners of Excise or justices of the peace respectively to have been overcharged; and if such person or persons shall, before such acquittal, have paid any money upon or in respect of such overcharge, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, and they are hereby respectively required upon such acquittal as aforesaid, to repay to such person or persons out of the public monies in their hands, or at their discretion, to allow out of the next duties becoming payable by such person or persons, so much money as shall have been so paid as aforesaid; any thing in this act or in any other act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding. Provided always, that no such complaint shall be heard before the said commissioners of Excise, unless the same shall be entered by or on behalf of the complainant in a book to be kept for that purpose in the office of the solicitor of Excise, for the summary jurisdiction at the chief office of Excise, stating the particulars thereof, and the name and place of residence of every such complainant; and upon every such complaint being so entered, a notice shall be given by the said commissioners of the time and place by them appointed for the hearing of such complaint, and if such complainant shall not appear at the time and place appointed for the hearing of any such complaint, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or any three or more of them, to dismiss such complaint, upon proof of notice of the time and place appointed for the hearing of such complaint having been given to such complainant, or left at the place mentioned in such complaint book as aforesaid to be the place of the residence of such complainant; and that no such complaint shall be heard before any justices of the peace, unless a notice in writing of the time and place of hearing thereof (which notice shall contain and set forth the ground and substance of such complaint) shall be given to the collector of Excise in whose collection, or to the supervisor of Excise in whose district such overcharge shall have been made, within eight days at the least before the time appointed for the hearing of such complaint: and provided always, that the payment of any duty with which any such complainant as aforesaid shall have been charged, or any proceedings for the recovery of such duty, shall not be delayed or suspended by reason of the making of any such complaint, or of the same being depending."

Complaints of overcharge may be heard and determined by any three commissioners or two justices, in their respective jurisdictions, within twelve months after. (a)

No complaint shall be heard in London unless entry thereof be made at the chief office, or, if in the country, unless notice be given to the Excise officer.

Not to suspend the payment of duty, or any proceedings.

(a) It was resolved, that an action for money had and received does not lie against an Excise officer for an overpayment, Whitbread v. Brooksbank, Corp. 69.

(7.) Of Entries and Specimen Books.—Payments to be made by Traders.—Searches, and obstructing Officers.—Seizures and Warrants.—Liability of Goods, Materials, &c.—Administering Oaths.—Perjury.—Fraudulent Removal and Concealment.—Unlawful Manufacturers.—Assisting Officers.—Indictments for obstructing, &c.

In what manner the entry of premises, &c. subject to the survey of the Excise shall be made.

What shall be sufficient proof of such entry.

Sect. 18. "That all and every person or persons required to make entry (a) of any building, place, vessel, or utensil, under this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall deliver such entry, with his or their signature thereto, to the officer of Excise in whose survey such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall be intended to be used; and such officer shall copy such entry into the book kept and known by the name of the general entry book, for the division or ride in which such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall be intended to be used; and the supervisor of the district shall examine and compare the copy so made in such book as aforesaid with the original entry; and such officer, upon his being removed from such division or ride, shall deliver over to the officer succeeding him in such station such book and all such original entries."

Sect. 19. "That where, upon the trial of any indictment, information, action, suit, or prosecution, or upon any other legal or judicial proceeding whatsoever, any such original entry shall be tendered or offered in evidence, it shall be lawful to prove by any credible witness the signature or signatures to such entry to be the handwriting of the person or persons by whom or in whose name or names such entry was made; and that in any such case it shall not be necessary to prove such entry by the testimony of the officer who received, or of the person who may have attested such signature or signatures, or the receipt of such entry; and if upon any trial as aforesaid, or upon any other legal or judicial proceeding, any question shall be made or shall arise, whether any building or place, or any vessel or utensil, of which entry is required to be made under this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, was entered by the person or persons by whom the same shall have been used, it shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient proof of such entry, if upon the production of any credible witness of the entry book of the division or ride in which such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall have been used, such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall be found, or shall appear in the copy, or what shall purport to be the copy in such book of any entry thereof, made by such person or persons as aforesaid; and if, upon the production of such book, no such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall be found, or shall so appear therein, or if found shall so appear to have been entered for another or different purpose than the purpose for which the same shall be charged or alleged to have been used by such person or persons, every such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall be deemed and taken to be and* unentered to all intents and purposes whatsoever, unless by other evidence the contrary be made appear; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. Provided always, that where in any indictment or information it shall be averred that any person or person was or were a trader or traders under any law or laws of Excise, it shall not be necessary to prove the same by the production or proof of any entry made by or in the name of such person or persons."

* Sic. In the act the word "and" is used by mistake instead of "as."

No entry shall be legal except in the name of the real owner; but the ostensible owner shall be liable.

Sect. 20. "That no entry of any building, place, vessel, or utensil made by any person or persons under any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall be or be deemed or taken to be a legal entry thereof, unless the same shall have been made by and be in the name or names of a person or persons who shall, at the time of making such entry, have attained the age of twenty-one years, and who shall be the true and real owner or owners of the trade or business therein or thereby carried on, or in respect of which such entry of such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall have been made. Provided always, that the person or persons who shall act as the visible owner or owners of any trade or business in respect of which any such entry shall have been made, or by whom the same respectively shall be occupied or used, or who shall have the principal management thereof, shall in all respects, and notwithstanding the minority of such visible owner or owners, (a) be subject and liable to all duties, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, or any part thereof, to which the real owner or owners of such building, place, vessel, or utensil, or of such trade or business therein or thereby carried on, would have been liable; and all stock in such trade or business, and all materials, vessels, and utensils which shall then and there be found in or upon such building or place, to whomsoever the same shall then and there belong, shall be subject to and be charged with all such duties, penalties, and forfeitures." (b)

Sect. 21. "That every person making entry of any building, place, vessel, or utensil under any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall in every such entry distinguish and describe every such building, place, vessel, or utensil, by a particular letter or number, and shall, to the satisfaction of the supervisor or surveyor of the district or due execution of this act or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, or in the execution of any of the powers or authorities by this act or any such act or acts given or granted to such officer or person so employed, every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of two hundred pounds."

Sect. 25. "That every person carrying on any trade or business, under or subject to any law or laws of Excise, shall pay and clear off the duty or duties in that behalf imposed by any act or acts of parliament respectively in such case made and provided, and charged upon or incurred by such person, (a) at such time and place and to such person respectively as shall for that purpose be specially directed in any act or acts of parliament relating to such duties respectively, or as shall be from time to time directed by the commissioners of Excise; and if any such person shall not pay and clear off such duty or duties at such time and place, and to such person respectively as aforesaid, or upon demand thereof made (under order of the commissioners of Excise or of the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively) by the collector of Excise in whose collection such trade or business shall be carried on, or by any officer authorized and directed by such collector, under such order as aforesaid, to make such demand, (whether such demand be made personally of any person who shall have incurred such duty or duties, or shall be left at the dwelling-house of any such person, or on the premises where such duty or duties shall have been charged or incurred,) every such person shall forfeit and lose double the value of the duty or duties so neglected to be paid and cleared off as aforesaid."

Sect. 26. "Provided always, that no person who shall carry on trade or business in any such market town as aforesaid, or in any such other town as hereinbefore specified, shall be compelled to travel out of such market town or other town, for the purpose of paying any duty of Excise, or of making any entry (other than the entry required to be made of any building, place, vessel, or utensil for the purpose of carrying on trade or business); and that no person who shall carry on trade or business out of any such market town, or other town as aforesaid, shall be compelled to travel to any other place than such market town, or other town as aforesaid, next to the place for or at which such duty shall have been charged, or such entry (other than as aforesaid) is required to be made for the purpose of paying such duty or making such entry."

Sect. 27. "That in all cases in Scotland or Ireland where any duties of Excise charged upon or payable by any person or persons shall be unpaid, and shall be in danger of being lost to His Majesty, unless immediate proceedings are taken for the recovery of such duty or duties, it shall be lawful for the collector of Excise, or other officer in charge of the collection within which such duty or duties shall have been charged or be payable, on affidavit being made before him of the facts, showing the danger such duty or duties are in of being lost, to issue a warrant under his hand against every or any person or persons upon whom such duty or duties shall have been charged, or by whom the same shall be payable, empowering any person or persons to levy such duty or duties in like manner as any penalty may be levied by any warrant issued under and by virtue of this act; and such warrant of such collector or other officer as aforesaid shall for that purpose have the same force and effect as a writ of fieri facias issued at the suit of His Majesty out of the Court of Exchequer; and such collector or other officer as Sect. 28. "And in order to secure the duties of Excise from time to time due and owing and in arrear from any person or persons carrying on any trade or business under or subject to any law or laws of Excise, and on or by whom such duties shall have been charged or become payable, and for the enforcement of all penalties incurred by any person or persons for any offences committed against this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise; be it enacted, that all goods and commodities for or in respect whereof any duty or duties of Excise is, are, or shall be by law imposed, and all materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for the making thereof, or by which any such trade or business shall have been carried on, in the custody or possession of the person or persons carrying on such trade or business, or in the custody or possession of any other person or persons, to the use of or in trust for the person or persons carrying on such trade or business, shall be and remain subject and liable to, and the same are hereby made chargeable with all the duties of Excise which, during the time of any such custody or possession, shall be charged or become chargeable, or be in arrear or owing, from or by the person or persons carrying on such trade or business for or in respect of the same, or of any such or the like goods and commodities respectively; and shall also be and remain subject and liable to all penalties and forfeitures which, during any such custody or possession, shall be incurred by the person or persons carrying on such trade or business, for any offences by such person or persons committed against this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise; and all such goods, commodities, materials, preparation, utensils, and vessels shall be and remain subject and liable to all such duties, penalties, and forfeitures, into whose hands soever the same shall afterwards come, or by what conveyance or title soever the same shall be claimed; (a) and it shall be law-

(a) See 28 Geo. III. c. 37, s. 21. In the case of Austin, assignee of Dormer, v. Whithead, 6 T. R. 436, it was determined, that a soap-maker, having incurred a forfeiture for concealing soap contrary to 1 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 2, and having become bankrupt, and a provisional assignment of his estate having been made, after which the soap was condemned and the bankrupt convicted, and thereupon a warrant issued to levy the penalty on his goods generally, such a warrant was bad, and could not justify a seizure of the soap in the hands of the assignees; and Lord Kenyon, C. J., said (inter alia) that even if no bankruptcy had intervened in this case, the warrant could not have been supported, because it directed a seizure of the goods of Dormer generally; whereas the Excise laws only give a lien on those goods that are liable to the duties, and the materials and utensils for making the same. In Stacey v. Hulsc, Doug.

411; Attorney-General v. Serle and R. v. Fowler, Doug. 416, it was held, that a penalty for not paying the Excise duties incurred before a bankruptcy, but not substantiated by conviction till after, continues a lien upon the estate in the hands of the assignees, and might be distrained for. Calicoes in the white frame, marked the property and manufacture of third persons, in the hands of the printer, are not liable to seizure under an extent for bygone duties due from the printer, by virtue of the stat. 28 Geo. Sect. 34. "That if any officer of Excise shall have cause to suspect that any goods or commodities forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, are deposited or concealed in any place, then and in every such case, if such place shall be within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London, upon oath being made by such officer before the commissioners of Excise, or any two or more of them, or if such commissioners shall not be publicly sitting for the despatch of business, or such place or places shall be in any other part of the united kingdom out of the limits of the said chief office, then upon such oath being made before one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, shire, division, city, town, or place where such officer shall suspect such goods or commodities to be deposited or concealed, setting forth the ground of such suspicion, it shall be lawful to and for the said commissioners, or any two or more of them, or the justice or justices of the peace respectively (as the case may be), before whom such oath shall be made, if he or they shall judge it reasonable, by special warrant or warrants under his or their hands respectively, to authorize and empower such officer, by day or by night (but if between the hours of eleven of the clock at night and five in the morning, then in the presence of a constable or other lawful officer of the peace), to enter into every such place where any such goods or commodities shall be suspected to be deposited or concealed, and to seize and carry away the same; and it shall be lawful for any officer to whom any such warrant shall be given or granted, and he is hereby authorized, in case of resistance, to break open any door, and to force and remove any other impediment or obstruction to such entry, search, or seizure, and removal as aforesaid."

Sect. 35. "That all justices of the peace, mayors, bailiffs, constables, and all His Majesty's officers, ministers, and subjects, serving under His Majesty, by commission, warrant, or otherwise, shall be aiding and assisting, and they are hereby respectively required to be aiding and assisting to every officer of Excise in the due execution of any act or thing required and enjoined by this act, or by any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, to be done; and all such persons who shall be so aiding and assisting unto any such officer of Excise as aforesaid are and shall be defended and saved harmless by virtue of this act; and if any such person shall be sued or prosecuted for or on account of any act, matter, or thing by such person done in giving such aid and assistance, every such person shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence in defence in such behalf."

Sect. 36. Sect. 42. "That where any such defendant is or shall be committed to and detained in gaol for want of bail, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information to cause a copy thereof to be delivered to the gaoler, keeper, or turnkey of the gaol wherein such defendant is or shall be so detained, with a notice thereon indorsed, that unless such defendant shall, within such space of time as shall be for that purpose limited and fixed by the Court in which such indictment or information shall be found or filed, or into which the same shall have been removed, cause an appearance and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in the said Court to such indictment or information, and appearance and the plea of not guilty will be entered thereto in the name of such defendant; and the prosecutor of such indictment or information shall also be at liberty to indorse on the copy of such indictment or information so delivered a further notice, that the issue to be joined on such indictment or information will be tried in the next term, or at the next assizes, or at the next general gaol delivery or Court of Justiciary to be holden in or for the county, shire, division, city, town, or place in which the offence shall be alleged to have been committed, or the venue laid in such indictment or information; and in case any defendant so committed or detained as aforesaid shall neglect to cause an appearance and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in such Court to such indictment or information, within the space of time so to be limited and fixed by such notice as aforesaid, then, upon an affidavit being made and filed in such Court, of the delivery of a copy of such indictment or information, with such notice as hereinbefore first mentioned indorsed thereon as aforesaid, to such gaoler, keeper, or turnkey, as the case may be, (which affidavit may be made before any judge or commissioner of the said Court authorized to take affidavits in the said Court), it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information to cause an appearance and the plea of not guilty to such indictment or information to be entered in the said Court for such defendant, and such proceedings shall be had thereupon as if the defendant in such indictment or information had appeared and pleaded not guilty according to the usual course of such Court; and if upon the trial of such indictment or information the defendant so committed and detained as aforesaid shall be acquitted of all the offences therein charged upon such defendant, it shall be lawful for the judge before whom such trial shall be had, although he may not be one of the judges of the Court in which such indictment or information shall be found or filed, or into which the same shall have been removed, to order that such defendant shall be forthwith discharged out of custody as to such commitment."

Sect. 43. "And for the better and more impartial trial of any indictment or information which shall be found, commenced, or prosecuted for any such violent assault or resistance as aforesaid, be it enacted, That every such offence shall and may be inquired of, examined, tried, and determined in any county in England, if such offence shall have been committed in England, or in any of the islands thereof, or in any county in Scotland, if the same shall have been committed in Scotland or in any of the islands thereof, or in any county in Ireland, if the same shall have been committed in Ireland or in any of the islands thereof, in such manner and form as if the same offence had been committed in such county respectively; and that whenever any person shall be convicted of any such violent assault or resistance as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the Court before which any such offender shall be convicted, or which by law is authorized to pass sentence upon any such offender, to award and order (if such Court shall think fit) sentence of imprisonment, with hard labour, for any term not exceeding the term of three years, either in addition to or in lieu of any other punishment or penalty which may by law be inflicted or imposed upon any such offender; and every such offender shall thereupon suffer such sentence in such place, and for such term as aforesaid, as such Court shall think fit to direct."

Sect. 64. "That all goods, commodities, and chattels whatsoever forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, or person or persons employed in the revenue of Excise, or person or persons acting in the aid and assistance of any such officer or person so employed as aforesaid; and that on all trials of seizures whatsoever, in any of the Courts of Exchequer or elsewhere, the seizure, together with the form and manner of making the same, shall be taken to have been as set forth in the information, without any evidence thereof; and it shall be lawful for all judges and other judicial persons before whom any such seizure shall be brought to trial or hearing, and having respectively jurisdiction in that behalf, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required to proceed to trial on the merits of the cause, without inquiring into the fact, form, or manner of making the seizure."

Sect. 107. "That all officers of the Customs who shall make any seizure under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, of any exciseable goods or commodities, shall forthwith give notice of such seizure at the next office of Excise, or to the supervisor or other officer of Excise of the district where such seizure shall have been made; and such supervisor or other officer of Excise shall, on such notice, take a particular account of the species and quantities of all such goods and commodities so seized respectively; and the same or any part thereof shall not afterwards be removed without a permit (where a permit is, for the removal of goods or commodities of a similar quantity, sort, or kind, required under any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise), signed by the proper officer of Excise of the place or district from whence the same shall be intended to be removed, on pain of forfeiture thereof for such removal."

Sect. 108. "That all goods or commodities whatsoever which are or shall be prohibited, or which are or shall be subject to any duty or duties of Excise, and which shall be stopped, detained, or taken by any police officer or peace officer, or any other person, under or by virtue of any act or acts of parliament, or under or by virtue of any other authority whatsoever, shall be conveyed, and the same is and are hereby directed and required to be forthwith conveyed to and deposited and lodged in the chief office of Excise, if the same shall have been stopped, detained, or taken within the limits of the chief office, or in the nearest office of Excise if in any other part of the united kingdom, in order that all such goods or commodities as aforesaid, and the person or persons in whose custody or possession the same were found, may be prosecuted or proceeded against as the nature of the case shall or may require; any thing in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 109. "Provided always, that in case any such goods or commodities as aforesaid shall be stopped, detained, or taken by any police officer or peace officer, or any other person, on suspicion of the same having been feloniously stolen or taken or received, it shall be lawful to and for such police officer or peace officer, or other person so stopping, detaining, or taking the same, to convey to, deposit, and lodge forthwith all such goods

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 62. "That no claim shall be entered in any of His Majesty's Courts of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, to any goods, commodities, or chattels whatsoever, seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, which are returned into such Court, unless such claim shall be, within the time limited by the practice of the said Court, entered in the real name or names of the proprietor or proprietors of the same, describing the place of residence and the business or profession of such person or persons; and if such person or persons shall reside in London, Edinburgh, or Dublin, or within ten miles thereof respectively, oath shall be made by every such person before one of the barons of the said Courts of Exchequer respectively, that the goods, commodities, or chattels respectively so claimed was or were really and truly the bonâ fide property of such person or persons at the time of such seizure; but if any such person shall not reside in London, Edinburgh, Dublin, or within ten miles thereof respectively, then and in such case oath shall be made in like manner by such person, or by the agent or attorney or solicitor by whom such claim shall be entered, that he has full and legal authority and directions from such proprietor to enter such claim, and that to the best of his knowledge and belief such goods, commodities, or chattels respectively were at the time of the seizure thereof really and truly the bonâ fide property of the person or persons in whose name or names such claim is so entered, which oath shall be indorsed and certified on the back of the indenture of appraisement upon which such claim shall be entered; and on failure thereof, the goods, commodities, or chattels respectively shall be condemned, and judgment shall be entered thereon by default, in the same manner as if no claim had been entered thereto; and every person who shall be convicted of making or taking a false oath to any of the facts hereinbefore directed or required to be sworn, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be liable to all the pains and penalties to which persons are liable for wilful and corrupt perjury."

Sect. 63. "That upon the entry of any such claim to any goods, commodities, or chattels whatsoever, seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, which are returned for condemnation as aforesaid, the person or persons who shall enter any claim as proprietor or proprietors thereof respectively, and who shall reside within the jurisdiction of the Court in which such claim shall be entered, shall be bound, with two other sufficient persons as sureties, in the penalty of 100*l.*, to answer and pay the costs occasioned by such claim; and where any such proprietor or proprietors shall not reside within such jurisdiction, the agent, attorney, or solicitor by whose directions such claim shall be entered shall in like manner be bound, with two other sufficient persons as sureties, in the like penalty, to answer and pay the costs occasioned by such claim; and in default of giving such security within the time limited by the practice of the Court in which such claim shall be entered, all such goods, commodities, or chattels respectively shall be adjudged to be forfeited, and shall be condemned as unclaimed; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 64. "That all goods, commodities, and chattels whatsoever forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, or person or persons employed in the revenue of Excise, or person or persons acting in the aid and assistance of any such officer or person so employed as aforesaid; and that on all trials of seizures whatsoever, in any of the Courts of Exchequer or elsewhere, the seizure, together with the form and manner of making the same, shall be taken to have been as set forth in the information, without any evidence thereof; and it shall be lawful for all judges and other judicial persons before whom any such seizure shall be brought to trial or hearing, and having respectively jurisdiction in that behalf, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required to proceed to trial on the merits of the cause, without inquiring into the fact, form, or manner of making the seizure."

[Former acts, 24th edition of Burn's J. Vol. II. p. 58.]

By whom informations to be laid.

To be in name of attorney-general, or officer of Excise, &c.; otherwise void.

The statute 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 13, enacts, "That no person shall commence, prosecute, enter, or file any action, bill, plaint, or information, in any of His Majesty's Courts, against any person, for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture made by any act relating to the Customs or Excise, unless in the name of the attorney-general, or of some officer or officers of the Customs or Excise; and if any action, &c. shall be commenced in any other name, the same shall be void, and the Court in which such action shall have been commenced shall not suffer any proceedings to be had thereon."

And 46 Geo. III., c. 1, s. 12, after reciting the foregoing provision, extends the regulations thereof to all proceedings for penalties and forfeitures, under any act relating to the Excise, before the commissioners of Excise, or any three or more of them in England, or before any justice or justices of the peace in England or Scotland respectively.

General regulations.

By 56 Geo. III., c. 104, s. 15, "no person shall commence or prosecute any action or information for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, incurred by virtue of any act now in force, or hereafter to be made, relating to the Customs or Excise, or issue any writ of appraisement for the condemnation of any ship, &c., or any goods seized as forfeited, by virtue of any such acts, unless the same be commenced, prosecuted, or issued by order of the commissioners of the Customs or Excise, or by or in the name of His Majesty's attorney-general; and if any action, information, or writ of appraisement is commenced, prosecuted, or issued, except upon such order, or by or in the name of His Majesty's attorney-general, the same, and all proceedings thereupon, shall be void; and the Court, or justices of peace, where, or before whom, such action, &c. shall be commenced, &c. shall not permit any proceedings to be had thereupon." See 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, s. 100; ante, p. 204.

And now, by 5 Geo. IV., c. 94, "it is enacted, that the averment of the fact in the information, &c. for the recovery of any fine, &c. that such information, &c. is commenced by order of the commissioners, shall be sufficient evidence in and throughout the united kingdom, that such prosecution was commenced, &c. by order of the said commissioners, without any other evidence of the fact, unless by other positive evidence the contrary shall be made to appear." See 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, ss. 104, 105; ante, p. 205.

The practice, therefore, of the commissioners of Excise, which prevailed before the passing of these acts, of not receiving informations from any other than their officers, (a) is now strictly necessary, as well in respect to prosecutions before them, as to informations before the justices. (b) By these means informations at the suit of common informers are superseded, and the practice of filing collusive informations, which first gave rise to these statutes, is entirely prevented. (c)

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 57. "That all penalties imposed by this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, and incurred for or by reason of any offence or offences against this act, or the said other acts or any of them, may be sued for and recovered, and all goods, commodities, and chattels seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, may be returned for condemnation and condemned, in His Majesty's Courts of Exchequer at Westminster, Edinburgh, or Dublin respectively, as the cause of such prosecution may have arisen in England, Scotland, or Ireland. (d) Provided always, that the proceedings for the recovery of any such penalty or penalties, or for the condemnation of any such goods, commodities, or chattels, shall be commenced respectively within three years next after the commission of the offence or offences by which such penalty or penalties shall have been incurred, or after the seizure of such goods, commodities, or chattels shall have been made."

Sect. 58. "That His Majesty's Courts of Exchequer in Scotland and Ireland respectively, and the barons and judges of the said Courts respectively, shall and they are hereby respectively empowered, authorized, and required to exercise in Scotland and Ireland respectively the like jurisdiction, and to make, issue, hold, and enforce the like rules, orders, process and proceedings in and for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, and chattels forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, and in and for the recovery of any debts, duties, penalties, and forfeitures due to His Majesty, his heirs or successors, arising from or relating to the revenue of Excise, or incurred under or by virtue of this act, or the said other acts or any of them, as are directed by this act to be, or as at and immediately before the commencement of this act are, or as hereafter may be exercised, made, issued, held, or enforced for such purposes respectively in or by His Majesty's Court of Exchequer in England, and the barons and judges thereof, and according to the practice of such last-mentioned Court. Provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall repeal or be deemed or construed to repeal a certain act made in the sixth year of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Anne, entitled An act for settling and establishing a Court of Exchequer in the north part of Great Britain called

Sect. 59. "And for the recovery of any debt relating to the revenue of Excise, which, by record in any of His Majesty's Courts of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, shall be due to His Majesty, his heirs or successors, in any case where the person or persons of the debtor or debtors, or the estate or effects of such debtor or debtors, shall be within the jurisdiction of either of such Courts, but such debt shall not have originally accrued within the jurisdiction thereof; be it enacted, that where, by, or upon any judgment, decree, inquisition, specialty, account, or other matter recorded in any of His Majesty's Courts of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, any debt relating to the revenue of Excise shall be due to His Majesty, his heirs or successors, a copy of the record of such judgment, decree, inquisition, specialty, account, or other matter, upon application made on behalf of His Majesty, his heirs or successors, to such Court, shall be forthwith exemplified and transmitted, under the seal of the said Court, to such other of His Majesty's said Courts of Exchequer as shall be named or specified in such application; and such last-mentioned Court shall, upon application made on behalf of His Majesty, his heirs or successors, cause such copy so exemplified and transmitted to be forthwith enrolled in the rolls of the said last-mentioned Court; and upon the same being so enrolled, the said last-mentioned Court shall cause execution or other process to issue for recovering and levying the said debt so due, according to the rules and practice of such Court, in like manner in all respects as if such record had been originally entered or filed in the said last-mentioned Court, or the said debt had originally accrued within the jurisdiction thereof; and the proceeds of such debt, when so recovered, shall be accounted for and paid over in the same manner as if the same had been recovered within the jurisdiction of the Court in which such debt originally accrued."

Sect. 60. "And whereas it is fit to provide for the appearance of every person to any writ or process of subpoena issued against such person out of the Court of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, whether to answer His Majesty in such Court concerning any articles on behalf of His Majesty to be there objected against such person, or to give evidence upon the trial of any information or issue depending in such Court, or upon any inquisition to be taken upon any commission or writ of extent issued out of such Court, in whatever part of the united kingdom the person against or to whom such subpoena respectively may be issued shall be or reside; be it therefore enacted, that the service of any writ of subpoena or other process issued out of any of His Majesty's Courts of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, upon any person who shall reside or be in any part of the united kingdom out of the jurisdiction of such Court, requiring the appearance of such person to answer His Majesty in the said Court concerning any articles to be there on His Majesty's behalf objected, or to give evidence upon the trial of any information or issue depending in such Court, (a) or upon any inquisition to be taken upon any commission or writ of extent issued out of such Court, shall be as good and effectual in law as if such writ or process had been served in that part of the united kingdom within the jurisdiction of the Court where the person so served shall be required to appear; and in case any person so served shall not appear according to the exigence of such writ or process, it shall be lawful for the Court out of which the same shall have been issued, upon proof being made of the service thereof to the satisfaction of such Court, to transmit a certificate of such default, under the seal of such Court, to the Court of Exchequer in that part of the united kingdom in which such writ or process shall have been served; and it shall thereupon be lawful for such last-mentioned Court in all such cases, and such last-mentioned Court is hereby authorized and required to proceed against and punish the person so having made default, in like manner as such last-mentioned Court might lawfully have done if such person had neglected or refused to appear in obedience to a like writ of subpoena or other process issued out of such last-mentioned Court. Provided always, that in cases where the subpoena or other process served shall be to give evidence, no person so having made default as aforesaid shall be proceeded against or punished by reason or on account thereof, unless it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of such last-mentioned Court, that a reasonable and sufficient sum of money to defray the expenses of so attending to give evidence, and of returning from giving such evidence, had been tendered to such person previous to such default."

Sect. 61. "That it shall not be lawful to commence, prosecute, enter, file, or exhibit any action, bill, plaint, or information, or other legal proceeding, against any person or persons, for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture incurred under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, or to issue or cause to be issued any writ of appraisement for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels whatsoever, seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or the said other acts or any of them, except by order of the commissioners of Excise or Customs, or by order of the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioner of Excise or Customs in Ireland, and in the name and at the suit of an officer of Excise or Customs, or by and in the name and at the suit of His Majesty's attorney or solicitor-general for England or Ireland respectively, or by order of the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise or Customs in Scotland, and in the name and at the suit of such officer, or by and in the name and at the suit of the lord advocate or His Majesty's solicitor-general for Scotland in Scotland; and if any such action, bill, plaint, or information, or other legal proceeding, or writ of appraisement, shall be commenced, prosecuted, entered, filed, exhibited, or issued in any other manner than as aforesaid, such action, bill, plaint, information, or other legal proceeding, or writ of appraisement, and all proceedings thereupon respectively had, shall be and are hereby declared to be null and void; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed or construed to extend to any summary proceeding by or at the instance of any officer of Excise or Customs, for the conviction upon immediate arrest of any person or persons under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs."

Sect. 64. "That all goods, commodities, and chattels whatsoever forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, or person or persons employed in the revenue of Excise, or person or persons acting in the aid and assistance of any such officer or person so employed as aforesaid; and that on all trials of seizures whatsoever, in any of the courts of Exchequer or elsewhere, the seizure, together with the form and manner of making the same, shall be taken to have been as set forth in the information, without any evidence thereof;

(d) In R. v. Abbot, H. T. 1782, Dougl. 55, note, it was contended by counsel, and assented to by the Court, that the commissioners of Excise within the bills of mortality, and justices of the peace in all other places, are put exactly upon the same footing by the different statutes relating thereto.

person or persons as hereinafter mentioned, to proceed to the examination of the fact or facts in such information alleged, and to give judgment, (a) as well for any such penalty or penalties which upon the due examination of one or more credible witness or witnesses upon oath, or upon the voluntary confession of the party accused, shall be found to have been incurred, as for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels seized as aforesaid, which upon such examination or confession shall be found to be forfeited, or respectively as the case may require; and such commissioners and justices respectively shall and they are hereby authorized and required thereupon to award and grant a warrant or warrants under their hands, (b) for the due execution of and carrying into effect, as hereinafter mentioned, such judgment: Provided always, that where any such information as aforesaid shall be exhibited before any justice or justices of any county or shire in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, in which there are several and distinct commissions of the peace, no information thereupon exhibited before any such justice or justices, nor any judgment thereupon given by such justices, nor any warrant or warrants thereupon granted for the due execution thereof, shall be subject or liable to any objection whatsoever by reason of any offence alleged in such information having been committed, or the person or persons committing the same having been found, or the goods, commodities, or chattels having been seized as aforesaid, in any division, city, town, or place of such county or shire having local jurisdiction, whether such city, town, or place be or be not a county in or of itself; any thing in this act, or any other act or acts of parliament, to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

11. Proceedings, &c. before Justices, &c.

No information exhibited before justices of the county shall be objectionable, because there are distinct commissions of the peace within whose jurisdiction the offence was committed.

Sect. 66. "That every such information as aforesaid shall be exhibited before the commissioners of Excise, or justice or justices of the peace respectively, within four calendar months next after the offence or offences alleged in such information shall have been committed, or the goods, commodities, or chattels therein alleged to have been forfeited shall have been seized; and a notice in writing of such information having been so exhibited shall be given to the person or persons against whom the same shall have been exhibited, for the penalty or penalties incurred for such offence or offences, or to the person or persons who shall claim the goods, commodities, or chattels in such information alleged to have been forfeited, within one week next after such information shall have been exhibited; and the commissioners of Excise, or justice or justices of the peace, before whom any such information shall have been exhibited as aforesaid, are hereby respectively authorized and required to summon every person against whom any such information shall have been exhibited, or who shall claim any goods, commodities, or chattels as aforesaid, to appear and plead to and to attend the hearing of such information, at a time and place to be stated in such summons, which summons shall be served upon every such person or persons fourteen days at the least before the time appointed in such summons: Provided always, that where such information shall be exhibited as aforesaid for the recovery of double the value of any duty or duties neglected to be paid or cleared off, as by this act before directed, it shall be sufficient if such summons as aforesaid be served within twenty-four hours at the least before the time appointed in such summons: And provided also, that in all such cases it shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient service of any such notice or summons as aforesaid, if the same be left at or upon the place used or occupied by any such person or persons respectively for carrying on trade

Information to be laid within four months after offence committed; and notice of information to be given within a week after.

Summons to parties to appear and plead to the information.

Sect. 67. "That the justices of the peace, or any two or more of them, in the several counties, shires, divisions, cities, towns and places throughout the united kingdom, shall meet once in every three calendar months in their respective jurisdictions, or oftener if there shall be need or occasion so to do, to receive, hear, adjudge, and determine all matters and things brought before them relating to the revenue of Excise, and all informations exhibited or to be exhibited within such jurisdiction, for or in respect of any penalty incurred, or for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels seized as forfeited, under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise: Provided always, that if it shall happen that any justice or justices of the peace before whom any such information shall have been exhibited as aforesaid, or before whom any proceedings shall have been had upon any such information, shall die or be absent at any time after such information shall have been so exhibited, and before the person or persons against whom such information shall have been exhibited shall appear or plead to such information, or before any judgment shall be thereupon given, or before any judgment thereupon given shall be duly executed, so that the further attendance of any such justice or justices thereupon cannot be procured, it shall be lawful for any other justice or justices of the peace within the same jurisdiction to act therein for and in lieu of the justice or justices of the peace so dying or absent, in all respects relating to such information, and the due completion of the proceedings thereupon, in the same manner as if such information had been at first exhibited before such other justice or justices respectively; and that all powers and authorities, rules and regulations, given and granted by any act or acts of parliament relating to justices of the peace, or to constables or other officers acting under their authority, respecting summary proceedings, shall be enforced, and shall be applied to and executed (excepting wherein altered or otherwise specially provided for by, or which shall be repugnant to or inconsistent with, this act), for the conviction of any person or persons prosecuted by orders of the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, for any penalty incurred by such person or persons under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, and for the levy of any such penalty, or for the imprisonment of any such offender or offenders, in the same manner as if such powers and authorities, rules and regulations, had been and were repeated and contained in the body of this act."

Sect. 68. "That it shall not be lawful for any assistant commissioner of Excise, or for any officer of Excise or person employed in the collection or management of the revenue of Excise, to act as a justice of the peace in any part of the united kingdom, in the execution of any of the powers, authorities, clauses, matters, or things contained in this act, or in any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise; and that it shall not be lawful for any trader subject to the Excise laws to act as a justice of the peace as aforesaid in any case which relates to the particular trade or business of such trader, or in any case in which he shall be in anywise, as such trader, concerned or interested; and if any such assistant commissioner, or any such officer or person employed as aforesaid, or any such trader as aforesaid, shall presume to act as a justice of the peace, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act all proceedings in that behalf shall be and the same are hereby declared to be utterly null and void to all intents and purposes."

Sect. 69. "That where any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, a penalty of treble the value of goods or commodities is imposed for or in respect of any offence committed by any person or persons against such acts, or any of them, every person so offending shall thereupon severally forfeit and lose for every such offence, either treble the value of the goods or commodities, to be estimated and taken according to and at the rate and price for which the best goods or commodities of the like sort or kind and denomination for which the duty or duties thereon have been paid were sold for in London, Edinburgh, or Dublin respectively (as the penalty may have been incurred in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively), at the time of the commission of such offence, or the sum of one hundred pounds in lieu and instead of such treble value, at the election of the commissioners of Excise or Customs, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise or Customs in Scotland and Ireland respectively, or the person who shall inform or sue for the same."

Sect. 70. "That whereby this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, a penalty is imposed upon every person committing the offence by which such penalty is incurred, and such offence shall have been or shall be committed by several persons jointly, such several persons shall jointly and severally incur every such penalty, and it shall be lawful to proceed against such persons jointly or severally for the recovery thereof, as the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively may deem expedient; any thing in this act, or in any other act or acts of parliament, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 71. "That where, in any information for the recovery of any penalty, or for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels seized as forfeited under this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, any allegation or averment shall be made that such information was exhibited, or that the commissioners of Excise or Customs, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise or Customs in Scotland and Ireland respectively, had ordered such information to be exhibited, or that the commissioners of Excise or Customs, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise or Customs in Scotland and Ireland respectively, or the informant or person suing by such information, had made their or his election, as in such information shall be alleged or averred, such allegation and averment shall be, and the same respectively shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient proof of such facts so alleged or averred respectively, without any other or further evidence thereof."

Sect. 72. "That upon the trial of any indictment, information, action, suit, or prosecution whatsoever, or in any other legal or judicial proceeding, where it may be necessary to give proof of any order issued by the lord high treasurer or commissioners of the treasury, or by the commissioners of Excise respectively, the letter or instructions which shall have been officially received by the collector, supervisor, surveyor, or officer of Excise of the collection, district, or place in which the subject matter of any such indictment, information, action, suit, or prosecution, or other legal or judicial proceeding, may have arisen, for the direction and government of such collector, supervisor, surveyor, or officer, and in which such order is mentioned or referred to, and under which said letter or instructions such collector, supervisor, surveyor, or officer shall have acted,

Sect. 74. "That it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise and justice or justices of the peace, and commissioners of appeal under this act respectively, before whom any such information as aforesaid, or any matter or thing under this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall be judicially brought, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required to summon any and every person (other than the person or persons against whom such information is exhibited), in whatever part of the united kingdom any such person so summoned shall then reside or be, to appear before the said commissioners or the justices or the said commissioners of appeal, who are to hear, adjudge, and determine such information, matter, or thing, at a certain time and place to be specified and set forth in such summons, to give evidence upon oath of the truth of any facts alleged in such information, or touching or relating thereto, or to such matter or thing as aforesaid; and every person, other than as aforesaid, being so summoned, and having the reasonable expenses for such attendance tendered, who shall neglect or refuse to appear according to the exigency of such summons, or who, having so appeared, shall refuse to take oath, or, if a quaker, to affirm, or shall refuse to give evidence, or to answer, according to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, any legal question, when thereunto required, shall for every such default or offence forfeit and lose the sum of fifty pounds."

Sect. 75. "And whereas, for better securing His Majesty's revenue of Excise, and the encouragement of the officers and others who shall detect or give information of any offence committed against the several acts of parliament relating thereto, the penalties and forfeitures by such acts imposed are directed, where such penalties are recovered, or the goods, commodities, or chattels seized as forfeited are condemned, to be divided between His Majesty and the person or persons who shall have detected or given information of the offences: and whereas, from the secret manner in which such offences are committed, it frequently happens that the officer of Excise, or other person detecting or informing of the offence, is the only or a principal witness to prove the same, but the offenders escape conviction by reason of objection being made and allowed to the competency of such witness on the trial or hearing for the recovery of such penalty, or the condemnation of such goods, commodities, or chattels, on account of his interest as a person entitled to a share of such penalty or seizure; and it is therefore expedient to remove all such objections: be it therefore enacted, that upon the trial or hearing of any information or other legal proceeding for the recovery of any penalty incurred, or for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, any officer of Excise, or any other person who shall or may be entitled to the whole or any share of such penalty or of such seizure, shall be admitted by the Court in which, or the commissioners or the justices before whom, such information shall be tried or heard, to give evidence upon such information, and shall be deemed and taken to be a competent witness upon such trial or hearing, notwithstanding any such interest as aforesaid."

Sect. 76. "That if upon any information, for the recovery of any penalty or penalties incurred, or for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, or in any action brought by the proprietor or claimer of such goods, commodities, or chattels, against any officer of Excise, or any person employed in the revenue of Excise, or any person acting in the aid and assistance of any such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, for any act, matter, or thing done in pursuance of any such act or acts of parliament, any question shall be made or shall arise whether any duty of Excise or Customs has been paid upon or in respect of the goods or commodities in such information mentioned, or whether such goods, commodities, or chattels are respectively of such sort or kind as in such information is in that behalf alleged, the proof of the payment of such duty, or that the said goods, commodities, and chattels respectively are not of such a sort or kind as aforesaid, shall lie upon the proprietor or claimer thereof."

Sect. 77. justices of the peace respectively, when they shall see cause, except in cases where there is or shall be any provision that no mitigation shall be made by the justices of the peace, and they are hereby respectively authorized and empowered to mitigate any penalty incurred for any offence committed against this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, for which any information shall have been exhibited before such commissioners or justice or justices respectively, as they the said commissioners and justices respectively in their discretion shall think fit, so as such mitigation shall not reduce such penalty to less than one fourth part thereof; and that every such mitigation, and payment thereupon accordingly made, shall be a sufficient discharge of every such penalty to the person or persons convicted of such offence. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, and the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, when they shall see cause, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to further mitigate or entirely remit any such penalty; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 79. "That no writ of certiorari or other writ or process shall be issued at the suit of any defendant, out of any of His Majesty's Courts of record in England, Scotland, or Ireland, nor shall any bill of suspension, advocation, or reduction be passed, nor shall any letter or letters of suspension, advocation, or reduction, or any other proceeding, be issued out of the Court of Session or Court of Justiciary in Scotland, to supersede, sist, stay, remove, or in anywise affect any information or judicial proceeding before the commissioners of Excise or commissioners of appeal in this act after mentioned, or before any justice or justices of the peace in the united kingdom, in pursuance of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, or any judgment thereupon; and that every such information shall be tried and determined, and every such judicial proceeding shall be had and completed, and every such judgment executed, any such writ of certiorari or other writ or process, or bill or letter or letters of suspension, advocation, or reduction, or other proceeding notwithstanding. Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to extend, to any writ of certiorari sued or issued in such cases in behalf of His Majesty, out of His Majesty's Courts of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively."

Sect. 80. "That it shall be sufficient, in the record or written account of any proceedings before the commissioners of Excise, to state that the information was exhibited to and before the commissioners of Excise, without stating their names; and that every adjudication and determination upon any such information, by any three or more of such commissioners, shall and the same is hereby declared to be good and valid in law, and may be executed and put in force by virtue of a warrant or warrants under the hands of any three commissioners of Excise, whether the commissioners setting their hands to such warrant or warrants shall or shall not happen to be the particular commissioners by whom such adjudication or determination was made, or whether such three commissioners so setting their hands to such warrant or warrants were commissioners at the particular time or times when such adjudication or determination as aforesaid was made; provided that the persons so setting their hands to such warrant or warrants shall at the time and times of such their setting their hands thereto actually be such commissioners; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 81. "That it shall be lawful for the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, from time to time, under his hand and seal, or under their hands and seals, to appoint such and so many persons to be commissioners of appeal in England as he or they shall deem advisable, for and on behalf of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the purpose of hearing appeals, as hereinafter mentioned, from any judgment given by the commissioners of Excise upon any information exhibited before them, with such salaries respectively, payable to such commissioners of appeal out of the revenue of Excise, as the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, may in that behalf order and direct; and any three or more of such persons so appointed shall constitute a Court of appeal for all such purposes as hereinafter mentioned."

Sect. 82. "That in case any officer of Excise who shall exhibit any information, or any person or persons against whom any information shall have been exhibited, or who shall appear and claim any goods, commodities, or chattels alleged to be forfeited in any information exhibited before the commissioners of Excise, shall feel aggrieved by the judgment given thereon by such commissioners, it shall be lawful for such officer, or such person or persons, upon giving such notice as hereinafter mentioned, to appeal therefrom to such commissioners of appeal as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for such commissioners of appeal, or the major part of them, upon being served with such notice, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required, at such place and at such time as they shall in that behalf appoint, to hear, adjudge, and finally determine such appeal; and in case any officer who shall exhibit any information, or any person or persons against whom any information shall have been exhibited, or who shall appear and claim any goods, commodities, or chattels alleged to be forfeited in any information exhibited before any justice or justices of the peace as aforesaid, shall feel aggrieved by the judgment given thereon by such justices, it shall be lawful for such officer, or such person or persons, upon giving such notice as hereinafter mentioned, to appeal therefrom to the justices assembled at the next general quarter sessions of the peace (or if there be not one week between the time of giving such notice and the next general quarter sessions, then to the general quarter sessions of the peace next after the expiration of one week), to be holden in and for the county, shire, division, city, town, or place in which such judgment so appealed against shall have been given; and it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace at such general quarter sessions, upon being served with such notice, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required, at such general quarter sessions, to hear, adjudge, and finally determine such appeal; and if upon any such appeal, either to the commissioners of appeal, or justices of the peace at quarter sessions, any defect in form shall be found in the information, or in any part of the proceedings thereon or relating thereto, or in the record thereof, every such defect of form shall thereupon be rectified and amended by order of such commissioners of appeal, or of such justices, or the major part of them assembled at such general quarter sessions, before whom respectively such appeal shall be brought; any thing in this act, or any other act or acts of parliament, to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 83. "Provided always, that no such appeal as aforesaid shall be allowed, unless the party or parties appellant shall, at and immediately upon the giving of the judgment appealed against, give notice in writing of such appeal to the commissioners of Excise or justices of the peace respectively from whose judgment such appeal shall be made, and also to the adverse party or parties on such appeal, and shall lodge such notice at the office or with the registrar of the commissioners of appeal, or with the clerk of the peace for the justices of the peace at such general quarter sessions as aforesaid, respectively, by and before whom such appeal is to be finally adjudged and determined; and no such appeal as aforesaid

Sect. 84. "That upon every such appeal it shall be lawful for the commissioners of appeal, or the justices of the peace at the general quarter sessions respectively, before whom respectively any such appeal shall be brought, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required to proceed to re-hear upon oath and to re-examine the same witness and witnesses, and to re-consider the same evidence, and the merits of the case whereon the original judgment appealed against shall have been given, and they shall not examine any evidence, or any witness or witnesses other than or different from the evidence and the witness or witnesses which and who shall have been before examined before the commissioners of Excise or justices of the peace respectively, at the trial and hearing of the information upon which the original judgment shall have been given; (a) and such commissioners of appeal, and justices of the peace at general quarter sessions, are hereby respectively authorized and empowered, on any such appeal, to reverse or confirm in the whole or in part the judgment appealed against, or to give such new or different judgment as they in their discretion shall in that behalf think fit; and such commissioners of appeal, and justices of the peace at general quarter sessions respectively, shall in any such new or different judgment have the same power of mitigation as is hereinbefore by this act given to justices of the peace and commissioners of Excise in judgments respectively given by them. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for such commissioners of appeal, and justices of the peace at such general quarter sessions respectively, as aforesaid, at their discretion, to state the facts of any case on which such appeal shall be made specially for the opinion and direction of the Court of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, as the same shall have arisen therein respectively."

Sect. 85. "That where the judgment of the commissioners of Excise or justices of the peace appealed against shall be affirmed by the court of appeal, such judgment shall be enforced and executed by the commissioners of Excise or justices of the peace respectively, in like manner as if there had been no such appeal; and that where the judgment appealed against shall be reversed, and another or different judgment given by the court of appeal than the judgment given by the commissioners of Excise or justices of the peace appealed against, such new judgment shall be enforced and executed, as hereinafter mentioned, by the commissioners

Sect. 91. "Provided always, that where any goods or chattels of and belonging to any person or persons against whom any such warrant for arrest shall have been granted shall be found at any time or times after the granting or execution of such warrant, it shall be lawful for the person or persons by whom such warrant shall have been granted, or for any two or more of the commissioners of Excise, or for any one or more of the justices of the peace in whose jurisdiction respectively any such goods or chattels shall be found, and he and they is and are hereby respectively authorized and required, notwithstanding the granting of such warrant of arrest, to award and grant a fresh warrant or warrants under his or their hand or hands, to any officer or officers of Excise, to levy upon the goods and chattels so found any penalty or penalties, or any sum or sums of money, charges, and expenses, for which the former levy warrant may have been granted, or to levy so much thereof as may not have been before paid; and upon payment and satisfaction thereof, the warrant for arrest shall be discharged, and the person or persons arrested shall be forthwith liberated out of custody."

11. Proceedings, &c. before Justices, &c.

A fresh levy warrant may be issued when goods are found after the issue or execution of arrest warrant.

Sect. 92. "That where any such warrant as aforesaid shall be granted, and cannot be executed by reason that sufficient distress, or that the person or persons against whom the same shall have been granted, cannot be found within the limits of the jurisdiction of the commissioners or justices in which such warrant shall have been issued, it shall be lawful for any one or more of the justices of the peace for any other county, shire, division, city, town, or place, within the united kingdom, and such justice or justices is and are hereby respectively authorized and required to indorse his or their name or names respectively upon such warrant; and such warrant and indorsement thereon shall be a sufficient authority to the officer or officers of Excise to whom such warrant shall be directed, or having the execution thereof, to execute the same in such other county, shire, division, city, town, or place, and to levy as aforesaid the penalty and penalties, or sum and sums of money, for which such warrant shall have been granted, or so much thereof as may not have been before paid upon the goods and chattels of and belonging to the person or persons against whom such warrant shall have been granted, which shall be found within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices indorsing such warrant, or to arrest and convey such person or persons to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, shire, division, city, town, or place where such warrant shall have been executed, there to remain until delivered, as by this act is before directed. Provided always, that no action of trespass or false imprisonment, nor any information or indictment, or other prosecution, shall be brought, commenced, or prosecuted against any justice or justices of the peace respectively for or by reason of his or their having granted subsidiary warrants, or indorsed any warrant in pursuance and under the directions of this act, in execution of any judgment, but it shall be lawful for any person or persons to bring or prosecute his, her, or their action or suit against the commissioners or justices respectively by whom the original warrant in execution of such judgment shall have been granted, in the same manner as such person or persons might have done if this act had not been made."

Commissioners may forbear to prosecute for penalties, or order seizures to be restored, or compound prosecutions, at any time before judgment. (a)

(14.) Stating Proceedings, and restoring Property.

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 98, "That in all cases where any penalty or forfeiture shall be incurred under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, and it shall appear to the satisfaction of the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, that the same was incurred without any intention of fraud, or of offending against this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, it shall be lawful for such commissioners of Excise, or commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, to forbear to order any prosecution for the recovery of such penalty, or, upon such terms and conditions as they respectively shall order in that behalf, (b) to forbear to order any prosecution for the condemnation of such seizure, and to restore such seizure to the proprietor or proprietors or claimant or claimants thereof; and that in all cases where any prosecution shall have been commenced, or shall be depending, for the recovery of any duty or any penalty incurred, or for the condemnation of any seizure made under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, at any time before judgment shall be thereupon respectively entered up or given, to compound any such prosecution respectively, by the acceptance of such sum of money as they respectively shall deem fit and reasonable in that behalf, for any such duty, or in mitigation of any such penalty, or for and in lieu of the value of any such seizure, in or by way of compromise of such prosecution; and upon payment and satisfaction thereof to stay all further proceedings, and to restore the seizure to the proprietor or proprietors, or claimant or claimants thereof, making or entering into such compromise. Provided

(a) See 47 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 30, s. 19; 54 Geo. III., c. 171.

(b) It was held that it is not necessarily essential to an order of the commissioners of Customs, made under the 51st Geo. III., to restore goods seized, that any terms or conditions should be imposed on the proprietors by the order; and the Court will not refuse to stay proceedings on a writ of appraisement on that ground, although the application proceed from the Crown. But they will not quash the writ if regularly issued.

always, that if any such proprietor or claimant of any such seizure as aforesaid shall accept such terms and conditions as aforesaid, or shall receive back any such seizure upon such terms and conditions, no such proprietor or claimant shall have or be entitled to maintain any action or suit for any recompense or damages on account of the seizure or detention thereof; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

14. Of staying Proceedings, &c.

If terms accepted, or seizures received, no proceedings to be brought for detention.

Treasury may order seizures to be restored, or penalties mitigated or remitted, before or after judgment, on such terms as they shall direct.

Sect. 99. "That in all cases where any penalty or forfeiture shall be incurred under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, it shall be lawful for the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, if he or they shall see cause, by any order for that purpose to be made under his or their hand or hands, to direct the seizure, or any part thereof, to be restored to the proprietor or proprietors or claimant or claimants thereof, whether such seizure shall or shall not be condemned at the time of such order, and to mitigate or remit any penalty, or any part thereof, either before or after judgment for any such penalty, in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as under the circumstances of the case shall appear to the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, to be reasonable, and as he or they shall think fit to direct by such order as aforesaid; and no person shall be entitled to the benefit of any such order, unless the terms and conditions therein contained shall be complied with; nor shall any person accepting such terms and conditions be entitled to maintain any action or suit for any recompense or damages on account of any such seizure, or the detention thereof."

specified in such indorsement by such solicitor, for the apprehension of the person or persons named in such writ of capias, or other writ or process as aforesaid; and in default thereof every such sheriff, sheriff depute, mayor, bailiff, or other person, having execution in any such writ of capias, or other writ or process as aforesaid, and every under-sheriff, deputy, or other person acting for them in the said offices respectively, by or through whom the said default shall have been made, shall be subject and liable to such process of contempt, fine, amerciamment, penalty, and forfeiture, as they or any of them are now by any law, custom, or usage, liable to in case of refusing or neglecting to execute the like writ of capias, or other writ or process, in the common and usual method of proceeding thereon."

Sect. 96. "That all and every such sheriff, sheriff depute, mayor, bailiff, under-sheriff, deputy, and other person so granting such special warrant as aforesaid, shall be and they are hereby respectively saved harmless and indemnified against His Majesty, his heirs and successors, and against all and every other person or persons whomsoever, for or on account of any escape of any person or persons who shall or may be taken by virtue of any such warrant as aforesaid, which shall happen between the time of taking such person or persons, and the time of such person or persons being committed to proper gaol or prison, or offered and tendered to the gaol-keeper or other person having charge of such gaol or prison (who is hereby enjoined and required to receive every such person or persons so apprehended as aforesaid, and to give a receipt for the body or bodies of such person or persons), and of and from all actions, prosecutions, processes of contempt, and other proceedings for or on account of any such escape; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

(17) Selling forfeited property, &c.

Forfeitures, after condemnation (where no special directions are given), shall be sold publicly to the best bidder.

No goods to be sold for home consumption at less price than the amount of the duties.

If such price not offered, goods to be destroyed, or sold for exportation, or otherwise disposed of.

(17.) Selling forfeited Property, Paying Expenses, Distribution of Penalties and Forfeitures.

By 7 and 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 100. "That all goods, commodities, and chattels whatsoever, seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall after the same shall have been condemned (such cases only excepted for which other directions shall in any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise be specially given) be publicly sold to the best bidder, at such time and place, and in such manner, as the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, shall order and direct, under and subject to all such rules, regulations, and provisions as by this act, or any other act or acts of parliament, are in that behalf made and directed."

Sect. 101. "That no goods or commodities of a sort or kind subject to any duty of Excise or Customs, and for or in respect of which every such duty shall not have been paid, which shall be ordered or directed to be sold by the commissioners of Excise, or by the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, under this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, or the sale of which shall be directed under any other act or acts of parliament, shall be sold for home consumption at a less price than shall be equal to the amount of the duty and duties aforesaid which shall not have been paid; and that all such goods and commodities for which, on any sale so ordered or directed, a price shall not be offered equal at the least to the amount of such duty and duties, and all condemned goods and commodities, the importation whereof is or shall be wholly prohibited, shall be forthwith destroyed, or shall be sold for exportation, or applied and disposed of to such public use as shall be ordered by the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury."

Sect. 102. "That all costs and expenses attending the seizure, detention, custody, removal, prosecution, condemnation, and sale of any goods, commodities, or chattels whatsoever, forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, shall (such cases only excepted for which other directions shall in any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise be specially given) be paid out of the gross proceeds arising from the sale thereof respectively, whenever the same shall be sold; and in case the same shall not be sold, but shall be destroyed or otherwise disposed of, all such costs and expenses shall be paid out of the revenue of Excise."

Sect. 103. "That all penalties and forfeitures incurred and recovered under or by virtue of this act or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise (such cases only excepted for which other directions shall in any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise be specially given) shall, after deduction therefrom of all costs and expenses relating thereto incurred, be distributed, one moiety thereof to the use of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the officer or officers of Excise, or the person or persons who shall discover, inform, or sue for the same."

Sect. 104. "Provided always, that upon proof being made to the satisfaction of the commissioners of Excise, or of the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, that any officer or other person to whom any part or share of any penalty or forfeiture, or any reward, shall be given or payable by any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, has acted collusively or negligently, either in making any seizure, or in the wilful omission or failure to make any seizure, or to discover any fraud, or to arrest or make known any offender against any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise or Customs, in the particular case in or for which such part or share of any penalty or forfeiture, or such reward, is given or payable; it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of Excise, or commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, in such case to direct that the whole or any part of such part or share of any penalty or forfeiture, or of such reward which might and otherwise would have been given or payable to such officer or other person, shall be forfeited, and shall go and be applied in such manner as His Majesty's share of such penalty or forfeiture is by law at such time directed to be applied."

Sect. 105. "That in any prosecution for any penalty incurred under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, and carried on in His Majesty's Court of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, under the direction of the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, to order the whole or any part of the costs and expenses of such prosecution, whether the money which shall be recovered or received from the defendant or defendants, either by way of penalty or compromise, shall be sufficient to satisfy and discharge such costs and expenses or not, to be paid out of the revenue of Excise, and to allow out of such revenue to the officer or officers concerned in such prosecution, or person or persons through whose information or by whose means or assistance the offence or offences shall have been detected, any sum or sums of money, not exceeding a moiety of the sum or sums of money which shall be so recovered or received as aforesaid; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 106. "That in any prosecution carried on in His Majesty's Court of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, under the direction of the commissioners of the treasury, or any three of them, to order the whole or any part of the costs and expenses attending the seizure, detention, custody, removal, or prosecution of any such goods, commodities, or chattels, whether the same be condemned or not, and also of the costs and expenses attending the condemnation thereof, if the same be condemned, and of the sale thereof if sold, whether the produce arising from the sale thereof shall be sufficient to answer the said costs and expenses or not, to be paid out of the revenue of Excise; and to distribute to and amongst the officers and persons who shall have made any such seizure, or by whose information or through whose means or assistance such seizure shall have been made, a sum or sums of money not exceeding the part, share, or proportion of such seizure, or the value thereof, in case the same shall have been sold, or if not sold, but destroyed, or otherwise applied or disposed of as aforesaid, such sum of money or reward for making such seizure as shall be by law directed to be paid in such behalf respectively as aforesaid, in full, without deducting therefrom the said costs and expenses, or any part thereof."

Sect. 107. "That all officers of the Customs who shall make any seizure under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, of any excisable goods or commodities, shall forthwith give notice of such seizure at the next office of Excise, or to the supervisor or other officer of Excise of the district where such seizure shall have been made; and such supervisor or other officer of Excise shall, on such notice, take a particular account of the species and quantities of all such goods and commodities so seized respectively; and the same or any part thereof shall not afterwards be removed without a permit (where a permit is, for the removal of goods or commodities of a similar quantity, sort, or kind, required under any act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise), signed by the proper officer of Excise of the place or district from whence the same shall be intended to be removed, on pain of forfeiture thereof for such removal."

Sect. 112. "That the commissioners of Excise, and the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, shall, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required to keep a separate and distinct account of the surplus (after deduction of all costs and expenses) of the money received on behalf of His Majesty from any penalties and forfeitures incurred under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, and to account for the same in such manner as the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury, shall direct. Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be deemed or construed to extend to effect or alter the hereditary revenue of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, in Scotland, or other revenues there granted to His late Majesty King George the Second during his life, and reserved to His present Majesty during his life by an act made in the first year of His present Majesty's reign, but the same shall continue to be paid over in like manner as heretofore; any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Limitation of action against officers.

Venue.
General issue.

* Sic in the statute the word "for" seems to have been omitted by mistake.

Treble costs.

Tender of amends may be made within one month after notice given, and pleaded in bar if not accepted.

In case of non-suit, &c., costs may be awarded.

If verdict for plaintiff, damages and costs may be given.

Defendant may pay money into Court before issue joined. (a) as aforesaid, or left at the usual place of his abode, by the attorney or agent for the person or persons who shall intend to sue out such writ or process, or to bring, raise, or prosecute such action as aforesaid; in which notice shall be clearly and explicitly contained and set forth the cause of such action, the time when and the place where such cause of action arose, the name and place of abode of the person or persons in whose name or names such action or suit is intended to be brought, and the name and place of abode of the said attorney or agent; and that a fee of twenty shillings, and no more, shall be paid for the preparing and serving of every such notice."

Sect. 115. "That if any action or suit shall be brought, raised, or commenced against any officer of Excise, or any person employed in the revenue of Excise, or any person acting in the aid and assistance of such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, for any thing done in pursuance of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, such action or suit shall be commenced within the space of three calendar months next after the cause of action shall have arisen, and shall be laid and prosecuted in the proper county or place wherein the same arose; and the defendant or defendants in any such action or suit may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence thereunder at any trial to be had thereupon; and if afterwards a verdict shall pass* the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be nonsuited, or shall discontinue such action or suit, or if judgment shall be given against such plaintiff or plaintiffs upon demurrer or otherwise, then and in every such case such defendant or defendants shall have treble costs awarded to him or them against such plaintiff or plaintiffs."

Sect. 116. "That it shall be lawful to and for any officer of Excise, or any person employed in the revenue of Excise, or any person acting in the aid and assistance of such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, to whom such notice shall be given as aforesaid, at any time within one calendar month next after such notice shall have been given, to tender amends to the person or persons in whose name or names such action or suit shall be brought, raised, or commenced, or to the agent or attorney of such person or persons; and in case such amends shall not be accepted, it shall be lawful for any such officer or person to plead such tender in bar to such action or suit, together with the plea of not guilty, and any other plea or pleas, with leave of the Court in which such action or suit shall be brought; and if upon issue joined thereon the jury shall find the amends so tendered to have been sufficient, they shall give a verdict for the defendant or defendants; and in such case, or in case the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be nonsuited, or shall discontinue such action or suit, or in case judgment shall be given against such plaintiff or plaintiffs upon demurrer or otherwise, then and in every such case the same costs shall be awarded to such defendant or defendants as if the general issue only had been pleaded; and if, upon issue so joined, the jury shall find that no amends were tendered, or that the same were not sufficient, and also against the defendant or defendants, on such other plea or pleas as aforesaid, such jury shall give a verdict for such plaintiff or plaintiffs, with such damages as they shall think proper, together with costs of suit."

Sect. 117. "That in case any such officer of Excise, or any person employed in the revenue of Excise, or any person acting in the aid and assistance of such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, shall neglect to tender amends, or shall have tendered insufficient amends before action or suit brought, raised, or commenced, it shall be lawful for the defendant or defendants, by leave of the Court in which such action or suit shall be brought, raised, or commenced, at any time before issue joined, to pay into Court such sum of money as such defendant or defendants shall think fit, whereupon such proceedings, orders, and judgments shall be had, made, and given in and by such Court, as in other actions where the defendant is allowed to pay money into Court."

Sect. 118. "Provided always, that no such plaintiff or plaintiffs shall, on the trial of any such action or suit, be permitted to produce any evidence of any cause of action, except such as shall be contained and set forth in such notice as aforesaid; nor shall recover any verdict against any such officer or person as aforesaid, unless it shall be proved on the trial of such action or suit that such notice was given; and the defendant or defendants in such action of suit shall in default of such proof recover a verdict with such costs as aforesaid."

Sect. 119. "That in case any information shall be commenced and brought to trial or hearing for the condemnation of any goods, commodities, or chattels seized as forfeited under or by virtue of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, wherein a verdict or decision shall be given or made for the claimant or claimants thereof, and it shall appear to the judge or Court before whom the same shall be tried or heard that there was a probable cause of seizure, such judge or Court shall certify upon the record or other written proceedings on such information, that there was a probable cause for making such seizure; and in such case the officer of Excise, or person who made or assisted in making such seizure, shall not be liable to any action, indictment, or other suit or prosecution on account of such seizure, or of the detention of any such goods, commodities, or chattels; and in case any action, indictment, or other suit or prosecution shall be brought to trial or hearing against any officer of Excise or person, on account of the seizing of any such goods, commodities, or chattels, or of the detention thereof, (whether any information shall have been or shall be brought to trial or hearing for the condemnation of the same or not,) and a verdict or sentence shall be given thereupon against the defendant or defendants therein, if the Court or judge before whom such action, indictment, or other suit or prosecution shall be tried or heard, shall certify in like manner as aforesaid that there was probable cause for such seizure, then and in such case the plaintiff or plaintiffs therein, besides the goods, commodities, and chattels respectively so seized, or the value thereof, shall not be entitled to more than two-pence damages, nor to any costs of suit, and the defendant or defendants therein shall not be imprisoned, nor be fined more than one shilling thereon."

20. Protection of Officers, &c.

No evidence to be given of a cause of action not expressed in the notice.

On trial for seizures, if the judge shall certify probable cause of seizure, the officer shall not be liable to action. (a)

In actions against officers, if the judge shall certify, plaintiff shall not be entitled to more than 2d. damages.

(21.) Offenders removing.

By stat. 32 Geo. III., c. 10, s. 1. "Where any person against whom any warrant of commitment in execution, commonly called a body-warrant, shall, by any three commissioners of Excise, or by any justice, under any act relating to duties of Excise, be issued, shall escape, go into, reside, or be in any other county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, out of the jurisdiction of the commissioners, &c. granting such warrant, any three commissioners or a justice of the peace where such person shall so be, on proof being made on oath of the handwriting of such commissioners or justice granting such warrant,

Offenders removing out of the jurisdiction where they were convicted. (b)

(a) It was held that a condemnation of goods by the commissioners of Excise is not conclusive evidence to a jury on an action of trespass; nor does the onus probandi lie on the plaintiff, but on the officer. Henshaw v. Plousance, 2 Bla. Rep. 1174; but see ante, s. 76, ante, 291.

may indorse the same, which shall be a sufficient authority to the person bringing such warrant, and to all other persons to whom such warrant was originally directed, to execute the same within such jurisdiction, and to convey such offender before the commissioners or justice who indorsed the same, or some other justice of the county, &c. where such warrant was indorsed, who may, by indorsement upon such warrant, commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or place where such warrant shall be executed, according to the exigency of such warrant, there to remain until delivered by due course of law."

(22.) Trial of offences.*(22.) Trial of Offences.

By 19 Geo. II. c. 34, s. 5, offences relating to the Excise made felony by any act may be tried in any county, but the attainder shall work no corruption of blood or forfeiture of lands.

(23.) Alehouse keepers.*(23.) Alehouse Keepers harbouring Offenders.

Alehouse keepers harbouring offenders, &c., forfeited 100*l.* and not to have licence.

By 9 Geo. II., c. 35, s. 30, 31, any alehouse harbouring offenders forfeited 100*l.*; but this enactment was repealed by 6 Geo. IV., c. 105.

(24.) Concealment, &c.*(24.) Concealing prohibited Goods, Seizures, Utensils, Deceiving Officers, False Weights, &c.

Concealing goods liable to duties, forfeits the goods and treble value.

Besides the provisions in 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 32, relating to the fraudulent removal or concealment of goods (ante, 271), there are other former provisions still in part in force. Thus

By 11 Geo. I. c. 30, s. 16. "And for the more effectual discovering and detecting the running of any goods, merchandises, and commodities whatsoever, which are either prohibited to be imported, or which are liable to any duty or duties of Customs and Excise, and inland duty or duties, or to any or either of them, be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that in case, from and after the said twenty-fourth day of June, one thousand seven hundred and twenty-five, any person or persons whatsoever shall knowingly harbour, keep, or conceal, or shall knowingly permit or suffer to be harboured, kept, or concealed, such prohibited goods or run goods, wares, merchandises, or commodities whatsoever, liable to any duty or duties of Customs, Excise, and inland duties, or to any or either of them, the party or parties offending therein, whether he, she, or they, have or have not, or do or do not claim or pretend to have any property or interest in such goods, wares, merchandises, or commodities so harboured, kept, or concealed, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose all such goods, wares, merchandizes, and commodities whatsoever so harboured, kept, and concealed, and treble the value thereof."

(25.) Of Permits and Certificates.*(25.) Of Permits and Certificates.

General regulations.

To prevent fraud, there are certain regulations relating to the removal of some commodities, requiring the party before removing them to obtain a permit or certificate. We will here consider only the general clauses and regulations. The particular regulations for the removal of particular commodities, with the decisions thereon, will be found under those particular heads.

By 23 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 8. "The commissioners of Excise in England and Scotland shall, on or before 29th September, 1783, provide moulds or frames for making of paper to be used for permits, which paper shall have the words Excise Office visible in the substance thereof; and shall also provide plates engraved with certain marks, stamps, and devices, in manner as to them shall seem meet (which marks, stamps, and devices, on the said plates, may be altered in such manner and as often as the said commissioners shall think necessary), for printing, stamping, and marking the said paper; and all permits from thenceforth to be granted by the officers for the duties of Excise and inland duties for the removal of any exciseable commodity shall be printed, stamped, and marked by the said plates on paper so made; which paper shall be made, and the said plates engraven, by persons appointed by the said commissioners; and the said paper and plates shall be kept by officers appointed by the said commissioners: and the officers appointed for printing permits shall not print, stamp, or mark any paper whereon permits shall be granted but on the paper provided as aforesaid."

25. Of Permits and Certificates.

1. Paper to be used for permits.

Plates to be used.

Sect. 9. "If any person not authorized by the said commissioners shall make, or cause to be made, or knowingly assist in making, or, without being authorized as aforesaid, shall knowingly have in his possession, without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused), any frame, mould, or instrument, for making such paper; or shall make, or cause to be made, or knowingly assist in making such paper; or shall procure the words Excise Office to appear visible in the substance of any paper whatever; or (not being appointed as aforesaid) shall engrave, cast, cut, or make, or procure to be engraven, &c., any plate or other thing, with any mark thereon, in imitation of that made and used for the printing, stamping, and marking paper to be used for permits; every person so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged a felon, and shall suffer death, without benefit of clergy."

Felony for any other person to engrave, &c.

52 Geo. III., c. 143, s. 9. "If any person (not being lawfully appointed or authorized) shall make, or cause to be made, or knowingly assist in making, or, without being authorized as aforesaid, shall knowingly have in his possession, without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused), any frame, mould, or instrument, for the making of paper, with the words Excise Office visible in the substance of such paper; or shall make, or cause to be made, or knowingly assist in making any paper in the substance of which the words Excise Office shall be visible; or shall, by any art or contrivance, procure the words Excise Office to appear visible in the substance of any paper whatever; or (not being appointed as aforesaid) shall engrave, cast, cut, or make, or cause to be engraven, cast, cut, or made, any mark, stamp, or device, in imitation of that made or used by the direction of the commissioners of Excise in England or Scotland for the printing, stamping, or marking paper to be used for permits to accompany any exciseable commodity removing from one part of Great Britain to another; every person so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and suffer death without benefit of clergy."

11 Geo. I., c. 50, s. 10. "No person shall demand or receive any permit from the officer, for the removal of brandy, arrack, rum, spirits, and strong waters, coffee, tea, and cocoa-nuts, without the special direction in writing of the person, or his servant, out of whose stock the same are to be removed, on pain of forfeiting 50*l.*, or, in default of payment, to suffer imprisonment for three months."

2. Limitation of time in permits, and removing the goods.

Sect. 10. "If any person shall take out permits for removing such goods, and if, within the time limited in such permits, he shall not either send away the goods, or return such permits to the officer, he shall forfeit treble the value of the goods mentioned in such permits, and not removed, to be estimated according to the highest rate of the like goods at the time of the forfeiture; and if such permits are not so returned, and there shall not appear a sufficient decrease to answer the removal, the person out of whose stock the goods shall be authorized to be removed shall forfeit the like quantity, to be seized by the officer out of the like goods then in his possession."

21 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 27. "It is the true intent and meaning of the several acts which direct the giving of permits for removing exciseable goods, that the officers who give the same should, and they are bound to express and limit, in every such permit, as well the time for which such permits shall be in force for removing such goods from the stocks of the persons taking out such permits, as also the time within which the same shall be delivered into the stocks of the persons to whom the same shall be permitted to be sent."

Sect. 27. "If any goods liable to Excise or inland duties, and which are required to be removed with permit, are not actually removed from the stocks of the persons taking out such permits, within the time limited in the respective permits; or, in default of removing the goods, the respective permits shall not be returned to the officer from whom the same were had; the person from whose stock the said goods are thereby authorized to be removed shall be subject to the penalties and forfeitures in 11 Geo. I., c. 30: and in case the goods mentioned in such permits shall be removed from the stocks of the persons taking out the same, within the time limited therein, and shall not, within the time limited, be actually delivered into the stocks of the persons to whom the same are mentioned to be sent, all such goods so removed shall be deemed goods removed or removing without permit."

Sect. 28. "In case the said goods shall, by unavoidable accident, be prevented from being delivered within the time limited in such permit, the Court, where any information shall be brought for the condemnation of any such seizure, shall, upon proof of such accident, direct the goods to be restored to the owner." altering, or
permits.

22 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 26. "If any person shall counterfeit or forge, or cause to be counterfeited or forged, any permit or certificate for the removal of any exciseable commodity; or shall knowingly give any false permit or certificate, or receive any false permit or certificate to accompany any such commodity; or shall fraudulently alter or erase any permit or certificate after the same shall have been granted by the proper officer of Excise; or shall knowingly publish or make use of any permit or certificate so counterfeited, forged, false, altered, or erased; every person so offending shall, for each offence, forfeit 200*l.*; which forfeiture shall be prosecuted in any of the Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland; one moiety whereof shall be to the king, and the other to him who shall sue; and such permit or certificate so counterfeited, &c. shall be of no effect."

23 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 10. "If any person shall counterfeit or forge, or cause to be counterfeited or forged, any permit for the removal of any exciseable commodity; or shall knowingly give any false permit, or receive any false permit with any such commodity; or shall fraudulently alter or erase any permit after the same shall have been granted by the proper officer of Excise; or shall knowingly publish or make use of any permit so counterfeited, forged, false, altered, or erased; every person so offending shall, (in lieu of any former penalty) for every offence, forfeit 500*l.*; which forfeiture shall be prosecuted in any of the Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland."

Sect. 12. "Upon every action entered for the said penalty of 500*l.* a capias in the first process shall issue, specifying the penalty; and the defendant shall give bail to appear at the day of the return of the writ; and at the time of such appearance shall give bail to pay the penalty, in case he shall be convicted, or to yield his body to prison.”

57 Geo. III. c. 123, s. 13. “ Every person who shall sell, lend, or make use of, or cause or suffer any permit, granted under any law of Excise, to be sold, lent, or made use of, for any other purpose than to accompany the removal of the goods for which the same was granted, and which shall be therein described, or shall produce or cause the same to be produced to any officer or person as having been received with any goods other than as aforesaid, or shall use, or cause or suffer to be used, any permit, so as that any account kept by the officers of Excise by such permit may be frustrated or evaded, shall forfeit 500*l.* over all other penalties and forfeitures; and every permit used for any purpose other than to accompany the removal of the goods for which it was granted shall be deemed a false permit, and such use shall, over all other penalties and forfeitures, subject the person using the same to the penalties and forfeitures for using any false permit.”

22 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 26. See Art. 3.

41 Geo. III. c. 91, s. 5. “ If any person shall counterfeit or forge, or cause to be counterfeited or forged, any certificate authorized or required to be granted by any officer of Excise, by virtue of any act in force relating to the duties of Excise, or shall knowingly give any false certificate, or receive any false certificate, or alter or erase any certificate after the same shall have been granted by any officer of Excise, or shall knowingly publish or make use of any certificate so counterfeited, forged, false, altered, or erased, every person so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and be transported for seven years.”

38 Geo. III. c. 54, s. 9. “ If any person shall counterfeit or forge, or cause to be counterfeited or forged, any debenture, in any case in which a debenture is, by any act relating to the duties of Excise, required to be granted, or knowingly make use of any counterfeited or forged debenture, every person so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and suffer death without benefit of clergy.”

52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 10. “ If any person shall forge, counterfeit, or alter, or cause to be forged, counterfeited, or altered, or assist in forging, counterfeiting, or altering, any debenture or certificate for the payment or return of money, or any part of such debenture or certificate, or any signature thereon, in any case in which such debenture or certificate is by any act relating to the duties of Customs or Excise required, or shall wilfully utter or make use of any such debenture or certificate so forged, counterfeited, or altered, every person so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and suffer death without benefit of clergy.”

23 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 11. “ If any officer of Excise or inland duties shall deliver out, or suffer to be delivered out, any paper having the words Excise Office visible in the substance thereof, either before or after the stamp or mark provided by the commissioners of Excise shall be printed thereon, or before the same shall be filled up, agreeable to the request-note brought from any trader for the purpose of having a permit for the removal of some exciseable commodity; or if any such officer shall knowingly grant any false permit, or make a false entry in the counterpart of any permit by him granted for the removal of any exciseable commodity, or shall knowingly take any exciseable commodity into the stock of any dealer, brought in with a false or forged permit, or shall knowingly permit the same to be done; every such officer, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and be transported for any time not exceeding seven years.”

38 Geo. III., c. 54, s. 8. “ If any officer of Excise shall knowingly accept any counterfeited, forged, or untrue certificate, or, under colour of any such certificate, knowingly give to any maker, manufacturer, or dealer, any undue credit in any book relating to the duties of Excise, with intent that any such maker, &c. may obtain any undue drawback for any goods never in reality shipped and exported, every officer so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and be transported for seven years."

11 Geo. I. c. 30, s. 39; 21 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 46; 57 Geo. III. c. 123, s. 17. "The penalties and forfeitures by these acts shall be sued for, recovered, or mitigated, as by any law of Excise, or in any of the Courts of Record at Westminster, (those by 11 Geo. I. c. 30, and 21 Geo. III. c. 55, also in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland); one moiety of which shall be to the king, and the other to him who shall discover, inform, or sue for the same."

And see the general clause of 49 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 9; 21 Geo. I. c. 55, s. 49; 23 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 34. "Actions against persons sued for any thing done in pursuance of these acts shall be commenced within three months, and be laid in the proper county; and the defendants may plead the general issue, and recover treble costs."

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 107, contains a regulation that goods seized by officers of Customs or Excise shall not be removed without a permit; and if they be they shall be forfeited.

With respect to ale and beer, the 1 & 2 Geo. IV., c. 22, s. 4, enacts, that no beer shall be sent out by brewers without a certificate stating the date, quantity, and quality of beer sent out by him. See post, title Ale, &c.

The 10 Geo. I., c. 10, s. 16, and 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 10; 12 Geo. III., c. 46, s. 5; 21 Geo. III., c. 55, s. 24 and 26; 22 Geo. III., c. 68, s. 21, 24, relate to permits on removal of coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, and chocolate. But by 9 Geo. IV., c. 44, s. 5, permits for removal of coffee and cocoa are rendered unnecessary. See title Coffee, &c., post, —.

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 80, s. 115, &c. contains regulations as to the permit on removing spirits. See title Spirits and cases thereon, post, —. Upon a prior act (57 Geo. III., c. 123, s. 13.) it was held, that the word officer or officers of Excise therein mentioned are general, and apply to any officer of Excise whose accounts may be frustrated or evaded by the fraudulent use of permits. (a)

So with respect to soap, the 59 Geo. III., c. 90, s. 8, requires the maker to cause a certificate to accompany soap about to be delivered, stating the date, quantity, quality, sort, and kind of soap, &c. See title Soap, post, —.

The 26 Geo. III., c. 59, s. 30, &c. as to wholesale dealers, and the 42 Geo. III., c. 93, s. 6, as to others, and the 54 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 6, contain regulations as to the permit on removing wine. See title Wine, and cases thereon, post, —, (b) ditary duties on ale, beer, and cyder, brewed or made for sale in Great Britain, shall not be collected, nor the laws for collecting and securing such duties enforced; and that after the 10th day of October, 1830, brewers shall pay the licence duty in proportion to the quantity of malt which they shall use in brewing. See the regulations, post, 333, 4, 5.

For the drawbacks on the same, see 59 Geo. III., c. 53; 3 Geo. IV., c. 18 & 31, and 1 Will. IV., c. 51, s. 9, post, 335.

For the duties, allowances, and drawbacks on ale and beer made in Scotland or Ireland, see stat. 6 Geo. IV., c. 58.

It will be important to keep in view, that besides many of the regulations stated under this head, most of the general provisions contained in the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, ante, 229 to 306, are applicable, and the reader must refer to them. The recent important provisions in 1 Will. IV., c. 51, 64, s. 17, must also be observed. See post, 333 to 352.

Former duties on licences repealed.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 1, ante, 246, (and which is still applicable: see the regulations in 1 Will. IV., c. 51.) from the 5th July, 1825, all the duties on Excise licences granted by any act of parliament in force at the passing of the act are repealed; except in all cases relating to arrears of duty, or any fine or penalty incurred before the 5th day of July, 1825, and remaining unpaid; and also except as to any Excise licence or licences theretofore granted, and any bond or bonds given by any Excise trader before the said 5th day of July, 1825, and then in force and unexpired. And

Duties on licences for brewers of beer.

By sect. 2. From the 5th day of July, 1825, every brewer of table or other beer, in Great Britain and Ireland, for sale, shall annually take out an Excise licence for that purpose, and shall for every such licence pay the annual sums following; that is to say, (a)

Every brewer of table-beer only for sale, if the quantity of beer brewed by such brewer within the year ending the 10th day of October, previous to taking out such licence, shall not exceed 20 barrels, 10s.; if exceeding 20, and not exceeding 50 barrels, 1l.; if exceeding 50, and not exceeding 100 barrels, 1l. 10s.; if exceeding 100 barrels, 2l. (a)

And every brewer of beer (other than table-beer only) for sale, if the quantity of beer brewed by such brewer within the year ending the 10th day of October, previous to taking out such licence, shall not exceed 20 barrels, 10s.; if exceeding 20, and not exceeding 50 barrels, 1l.; if exceeding 50, and not exceeding 100 barrels, 1l. 10s.; if exceeding 100, and not exceeding 1000 barrels, 2l.; if exceeding 1000, and not exceeding 2000 barrels, 3l.; if exceeding 2000, and not exceeding 5000 barrels, 7l. 10s.; if exceeding 5000, and not exceeding 7500 barrels, 11l. 5s.; if exceeding 7500, and not exceeding 10,000 barrels, 15l.; if exceeding 10,000, and not exceeding 20,000 barrels, 30l.; if exceeding 20,000, and not exceeding 30,000 barrels, 45l.; if exceeding 30,000, and not exceeding 40,000 barrels, 60l.; or, if exceeding 40,000 barrels, 75l. That every person who shall first become a brewer of beer for sale, on taking out such licence as aforesaid, for that purpose, shall pay the sum of 10s., and within ten days after 10th October next, after taking out such licence, pay such further additional sum as with the said 10s. shall amount to the duty hereinbefore mentioned, according to the number of barrels of beer brewed within the preceding year, or period for which such licence was granted.

Duty on licence of person first becoming brewer.

Every brewer of beer for sale, who shall retail such beer to be consumed elsewhere than on his, her, or their premises, 5l. 5s.

---

(a) By the recent act, 1 W. IV. c. 51, s. 7, after the 10th of October, 1830, brewers are to pay their licence duty in proportion to the quantity of malt which they shall use in brewing, and shall be deemed to have brewed one barrel of beer for every two bushels of malt used by such brewer in brewing. See the act, post, 335.

Every person, not being a brewer of beer, who shall sell strong beer only, in casks containing not less than 4½ gallons imperial standard gallon measure, or in not less than 2 dozen reputed quart bottles at one time, to be drank or consumed elsewhere than on his, her, or their premises, 3*l.* 3*s.*

Every person who shall be duly authorized by justices of the peace to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling-house, and who shall sell beer, cyder, or perry by retail, to be drank or consumed in his, her, or their house or premises, if the dwelling-house in which such person shall reside or retail beer, cyder, or perry as aforesaid, at the time of taking out such licence, shall not, together with the offices, courts, yards, and gardens therewith occupied, be rated, under the authority of any act or acts of parliament for granting duties on inhabited houses, at a rent of 20*l.* per annum or upwards, or shall not be rented or valued at such rent or annual value, or upwards, 1*l.* 1*s.*

And if rated, rented, or valued as aforesaid at 20*l.* per annum or upwards, 3*l.* 3*s.*

The said duties to be under the collection and management of the commissioners of Excise.

Sect. 3. Reciting "that the duty imposed by this act, on every licence to be taken out by any brewer or brewers of beer for sale, is rated according to the quantity of beer brewed by the person or persons taking out such licence; and that no account is taken or kept by the officers of Excise in Ireland of the quantity of beer brewed there for sale, but of the malt only used and employed by all and every brewer or brewers there for that purpose;" it is enacted, "that all and every brewer or brewers of beer for sale in Ireland shall, for the purpose of fixing and regulating the rate and amount of duty to be paid by such brewer or brewers for the licence to be taken out by him, her, or them, under this act, be deemed to have brewed one barrel of beer for every two bushels of malt used or employed by such brewer or brewers in brewing; and shall, for every licence to be taken out by him, her, or them, under this act, for brewing beer for sale, pay such amount of duty, according to the rate by this act imposed, as shall be correspondent to the quantity of beer which he, she, or they shall be deemed to have brewed as aforesaid."

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

Brewers in Ireland to be deemed, for the purposes of this act, to have brewed one barrel of beer for every two bushels of malt employed in brewing. (a)

Sect. 5. Reciting that "the duty upon certain licences authorized and required to be taken out by this act is imposed at and according to the rent at which the premises used for the purpose or purposes mentioned in such licence are rated to the duty on inhabited houses;" and that "many houses or premises in different parts of the united kingdom, for or in respect of which such licences may be required, may not be so rated;" it is enacted, "that in all cases, and in any part of the united kingdom, in which any such house or premises shall not be so rated as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful, in order to ascertain the rent or annual value of such house or premises, for the person or persons, being the tenant or occupier thereof, who shall apply for any such licence upon which the duty is so imposed as aforesaid, to produce to the person or persons authorized to grant such licence as aforesaid, a certificate, signed by himself and the owner or landlord of the said house and premises, stating the true rent paid by or for which such house or premises is or are let to such tenant or occupier; or if the true rent, by reason of the payment of any premium, or performance of any condition or otherwise, shall not be reserved and payable to the owner or landlord by the tenant or occupier of such house or premises, then and in such case stating the estimated rent or true annual value of such house or premises, and the rate of duty payable by such tenant or occupier for such licence shall be paid, taken, and received, according to the rent or value so certified. Provided always,

Where the house and premises shall not be rated, the rent or annual value is to be certified by the tenant and landlord; and if such certificate be unsatisfactory, the commissioners of Excise shall adopt other means for ascertaining the true rent or value thereof, which shall be conclusive.

(a) After the 10th of October, 1830, this applies also to brewers in England, by 1 W. IV., c. 51, s. 7, post, 335.

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

Licences to be granted within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London by the commissioners of Excise, or such person as they may employ for that purpose, and within the limits of the cities of Edinburgh and Dublin respectively by the commissioners or assistant commissioners there, or such persons as they may employ for that purpose, and elsewhere by the collectors and supervisors of the respective Excise collections, on payment of the duties. (a) that if the person or persons authorized to grant such licence shall be dissatisfied with the rent or value so certified, he or they shall and is and are hereby authorized and required to adopt such other means as the commissioners of Excise shall think fit, and shall from time to time direct, to ascertain the true rent or annual value of such house or premises; and that thereupon the rate of duty payable for and upon such licence shall be paid, taken, and received, according to the rent or annual value of the house and premises so ascertained as last aforesaid; any thing herein or in any other act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 6. "Every Excise licence which is authorized or required to be taken out by this act shall be granted, and the duty thereupon imposed shall be paid in and throughout the united kingdom in manner and form following; that is to say, if any such licence shall be taken out within the limits of the head or chief office of Excise in London, then such licence shall be granted under the hands and seals of two or more of H. M.'s commissioners of Excise, or of such person or persons as such commissioners shall from time to time employ for that purpose, and the duty thereupon imposed as aforesaid shall be paid at such head or chief office at the time of granting the licence; or if such licence shall be taken out within the limits of the cities of Edinburgh or of Dublin respectively, such licence shall be granted under the hands and seals of H. M.'s commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise acting in and for Scotland or Ireland respectively for the time being, or of any two of them respectively, or of such person or persons as such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners shall from time to time employ for that purpose, and the duty thereupon imposed shall be paid at the chief office of Excise in Edinburgh or Dublin respectively, at the time of granting the licence; or if such licence shall be taken out in any other part of the united kingdom without such respective limits as in that behalf respectively aforesaid, then and in every such case the same shall be granted under the hands and seals of the collector, or other person having charge of the collection, and supervisor of Excise within the collection and district in which such licence is taken out, and the duty thereupon imposed shall be paid to such collector or other person as aforesaid at the time of granting the licence; and such respective commissioners of Excise in England, and commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise acting in and for Scotland and Ireland respectively, and the person or persons by them respectively employed as aforesaid, and every collector or other person having charge of the collection, and supervisor as aforesaid, is and are hereby respectively authorized and required to grant and deliver every such licence to the person or persons who shall apply for and be legally entitled to receive the same, forthwith upon payment of the duty or sum of money thereupon imposed, free from all poundage, fee, gratuity, or any other payment whatsoever."

The 7th section regulates the contents of licence, and enacts, that "partners need not take out more than one licence, except," &c. See ante, 250.

The 9th section enacts that "no person or persons taking out licence shall give bond, except brewers of beer for sale in Ireland, and auctioneers whose bonds shall bear date with that of the licence, and be binding upon them from that day." But by 1 W. IV. c. 51, s. 8, it is enacted "that no bond shall be required of brewers taking out a licence." See the act, post, 335.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 10, ante, 252, enacts that "no one licence shall

(a) And now a retail licence may also be taken out by any inhabitant paying 2l. 2s. Vide 1 W. IV., c. 64, post, 341.

authorize any person, except auctioneers and maltsters, subject to the lowest rate of duty, to carry on his trade in more than one separate and distinct set of premises."

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 11, ante, 252, then enacts "that nothing therein contained should extend to selling beer, cyder, or perry by publicans being licensed beer retailers, or spirits, wine, or sweets, by the licensed retailers thereof, at fairs or races;" and provides "removal of the licence in case of fire or accident."

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 13, provided that "no licence should be granted for selling beer or cyder by retail, to be drank on the premises, without a justice's licence." Ante, 253. And the 9 Geo. IV., c. 61, s. 17, enacted that "No licence for the sale of any exciseable liquors (which include ale and beer, see s. 37,) by retail, to be drank or consumed on the premises of the person licensed, shall be granted by the commissioners of Excise, or by any officer of Excise, to any person whatsoever, unless such person shall have previously obtained from the justices a licence under this act, and which said licence of such justices shall be retained by such person after being produced to the commissioners or officers of Excise; and every licence granted by the commissioners of Excise, or by any officer of Excise, contrary to this provision, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes."

No Excise licence was to be granted except to a person licensed by justices.

But the new regulations in 1 W. IV. c. 64, at the end of this title, have now enabled inhabitants to sell ale, beer, or cyder, on taking out a two-guinea licence, although they have no justice's licence. See post, 341.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 16, (ante, 254), it was enacted, that "licences taken out by brewers and distillers, and by publicans, as retailers of beer, spirits, or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, should expire on the 10th of October in each year, and all other licences on the 5th day of July, to be renewed yearly, and notice for renewal given by the trader 21 days at least before the expiration of his current licence, every such licence to bear date from the expiration of the former licence when regularly renewed, and when afterwards or otherwise granted, from the date of the application."

But this now altered by 1 W. IV. c. 64.

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 17, provides that "licences may be granted to new beginners, in any trade or business, for a proportional part of the year, who shall pay duty accordingly, according to the quarter of the year in which the licence shall be taken out." See ante, 254.

But s. 18 provides, that persons who were before licensed, taking out a new licence, shall not be considered beginners, unless the old licence expired two years before such new licence is taken out. See ante, 255.

Then s. 18 enacts, that "licences taken out by any brewers, distillers, or publicans, as retailers of beer, spirits, or foreign wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, under any former acts, which shall expire between the period herein mentioned, shall be renewed for a proportional part of the year, upon payment of duty accordingly, according to the quarter of the year in which taken out."

The sect. 21 provides that "licences may be transferred to the executors, wife, child, or assignee of the person licensed; but, in the case of retailing beer to be consumed upon the premises, not without certificate of a magistrate." Ante, 257; but see 1 W. IV., c. 64, post, 342.

Sect. 22 enacts, that "persons disabled by conviction from keeping a common inn, &c. shall not be allowed to retail beer under any Excise licence; and clerk of the peace neglecting to deliver a copy of conviction shall forfeit 10*l*." Ante, 258.

And sect. 23 enacts, that "where the retail beer licence shall become void by conviction as aforesaid, the retail spirit licence shall become void also." Ante, 258.

And sect. 24 enacts, that "upon the expiration of the magistrate's authority to keep a public house within the year (no conviction having taken place) a proportional part of the duties on the Excise licences shall be returned." Ante, 258.

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

'Then sect. 25 enacts, that " parties licensed shall put up over their premises their names and trades. Penalty for not so doing, or unlicensed persons doing the same, 20*l*." Ante, 259.

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 26, then prescribes the penalties on brewers and sellers of beer, cyder, and perry, for not taking out licences. (a) See ante, 259, 260.

The 27th sect. enacts that " the occupiers of premises where goods are retailed without licence by persons unknown shall be deemed to be the retailers thereof, if privy or consenting thereto." Ante, 260, 1.

The 28th prescribes a " penalty on licensed persons not producing their licence on demand of officer, 20*l*." Ante, 261.

Sect. 29. The " informer against an unlicensed trader is to be paid such sum as the commissioners shall direct, not exceeding 10*l*. if the penalty cannot be recovered."

The 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34, then provided, " Nothing in the act contained shall prejudice the universities, the vintners' companies, or the borough of St. Alban's;" and that " former regulations should be put in force in execution of this act, except where repealed or altered by this act;" and that " penalties and forfeitures should be recovered and applied as other Excise penalties, unless otherwise by that act provided;" and that " former regulations which are inconsistent with this act shall be deemed repealed;" and that " Irish licences of 1825 shall be charged and paid according to the rates imposed by that act." Ante, 261, 2.

By 5 Geo. IV., c. 54, s. 7, it is enacted, " that where the entered premises for brewing of any brewer shall be situated out of a city or market town, and such brewer shall by reason thereof not retail beer, or be licensed to retail beer from such brewery, or make entry of any part of such premises for that purpose, it shall be lawful for any such brewer to make entry of some one place, room, storehouse, cellar, shop, house, or outhouse, for the retail of beer in any one adjoining city or market town, and to take out a licence for and retail therefrom the strong beer brewed by him, her, or them at such brewery as aforesaid, to be drank or consumed elsewhere, subject nevertheless to the several provisions and penalties in this act contained, relating to brewers retailing beer from the premises where brewed. Provided always, that no retail brewer, not being duly licensed to sell beer as a keeper of a common inn, alehouse, or victualling-house, shall deal in or sell any table-beer, or any beer except the strong beer which he or they shall brew, and be charged with the duty thereon, or shall at any one time use, employ, or consume any less quantity than 16 bushels of malt at any one brewing, upon pain of forfeiting for each and every such offence the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 11. " That no licensed brewer of beer for sale, who shall also be duly licensed to retail such beer under this act, shall sell, deliver, or send out, at or from his, her, or their brewery, or the premises belonging thereto or entered as aforesaid, or to any of his, her, or their customers, any beer in any quantity less than a whole barrel, except between the hours of six of the clock in the morning and nine of the clock in the evening, or shall sell, deliver, or send out any beer during the usual hours of divine service on Sundays, upon pain of forfeiting for each and every such offence the sum of 20*l*."

Brewers whose premises are out of a market town, &c. may make entry of a place within some town to retail their beer. (b)

Penalty on brewers not licensed as victuallers selling table-beer, or using less than 16 bushels of malt at a brewing, 100*l*.

Retail brewers not to retail beer, except at hours herein mentioned, or during divine service on Sundays.

(a) The information and conviction must not be in the alternative; and therefore an information on 48 Geo. III., c. 143, for selling " beer or ale" without an Excise licence, was held bad, and a conviction thereon, showing that the defendant had sold ale only, was quashed. King v. North, 6 Dowl. & Ry. 143.

(b) See form of a brewer's entry, ante, 265.

By 9 Geo. IV., c. 68, s. 1, after reciting the said 11th sect. of 5 Geo. IV., c. 54, enacts "that it shall be lawful for any such brewer, as in the said act is in that behalf mentioned, to sell beer by retail as aforesaid, at or from his, her, or their brewery, or other premises entered by such brewer for that purpose as in the said act is provided, between the hours of four of the clock in the morning and ten of the clock in the evening, subject nevertheless in all other respects to the several rules, regulations, and restrictions by and in the said act enacted and contained."

By 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 18, "No person, not being a common brewer, shall retail beer at any higher price than 1½d. the quart, without entering into a recognizance and obtaining a licence as a common alehouse keeper, under pain of forfeiting for each offence 50*l.* over and above any penalty imposed upon selling beer or ale without a licence."

By 3 Geo. IV., c. 18, s. 11. "All beer and ale above the price of 16*s.* the barrel (exclusive of the duties) shall be deemed to be strong beer or ale; and all beer of the price of 16*s.* the barrel or under (exclusive of the duties) shall be deemed to be table-beer within the meaning of the several acts in force relating to beer or ale."

By 15 Car. II., c. 11, s. 1. "No common brewer, innkeeper, victualler, or other retailer of beer or ale, shall, without first giving notice at the next office of Excise, or to the commissioners or sub-commissioners, or one of them, erect, alter, or enlarge any tun, fat, back, cooler, or copper, and make use thereof for brewing or making any beer, ale, or worts, on pain of 50*l.* And every other person, in whose occupation any house, outhouse, or other place shall be, where any such private tun, &c. shall be found, shall also forfeit 50*l.* And the same, together with all beer, ale, or worts therein, shall be taken up, seized, and forfeited, to be sold to the use of the poor."

By 5 Geo. III., c. 43, s. 25. "If any common brewer shall alter the position of any tun, batch, float, cooler, or copper after the same hath been set up and fixed, without first giving notice thereof in writing to the officer; or shall place any boards, stone, wood, or any other materials at, in, or upon the dipping-place thereof; or shall, by any other means, prevent or hinder the officer from taking true dips and gauges of such beer, ale, or worts, he shall forfeit 20*l.*"

And by 7 and 8 W. III. c. 30, s. 27. "The officer of Excise in the daytime, and in the presence of a constable, where he shall have just suspicion that any private back, tun, or other concealed vessel or receptacle is used by any brewer, distiller, or maker of exciseable liquors, on request first made and cause declared, may break open the door, or any part of such brewhouse, warehouse, or other room in his possession, and enter and break up the ground in such house or room, or ground near adjoining, in his possession, to search for such back, tun, or other vessel, or any pipe or conveyance leading thereto; and if he find any private pipe or other conveyance, he may search after and follow the same, and if it shall lead into any ground, house, or place in the possession of any other person, on like request and with a constable, he may enter the same, and break open the ground or any part of the house, if occasion shall be, to follow such private pipe, in order to find out such concealed back, tun, or other vessel, making good the ground or house so broken up, or giving reasonable satisfaction to the owner; and if any person shall oppose such officer, he shall forfeit 20*l.*"

By 8 and 9 W. III. c. 19, s. 4; and 42 Geo. III. c. 38, s. 15. "No common brewer shall keep any pipe or other private conveyance from any copper in his brewhouse, except the regular discharge-pipes leading directly to his mash-tun, hopback, or coolers; nor shall keep any fixed or other pipe or conveyance leading from any underback, hopback, back, or

And by 8 and 9 W. III. c. 19, s. 5. "The Excise officer in the day-time, and in the presence of a constable, on request made and cause declared, may break up the ground in any common brewhouse or the ground near adjoining, or any wall, partition, or other place, to search for any such private pipe or other conveyance, and, upon finding, may follow the same, and break up the ground, house, wall, partition, or other place, through or into which the same shall lead, and break up or cut such pipe or other conveyance, and may turn any cock to try whether it can convey as aforesaid."

Sect. 6. "And if on search no such pipe or other private conveyance shall be found, the officer shall make good the ground, wall, or other place so broken up, or make satisfaction to the owner; and if any person shall oppose such officer, he shall forfeit 50*l.*"

Sect. 7. "But any common brewer may use any pipes, stopcocks, or other conveyances above ground, which are public and in open view, for letting his worts out of his copper into his public backs or coolers, and out of the same into his tuns, batches, or floats; or out of the tun into his cask."

utensils.

The 5 Geo. IV. c. 54, s. 18, recites that "by 22 and 23 Car. II. c. 5, it was, amongst other things, enacted, that if any person or persons inhabiting in any market town, or in any city or town corporate, or parts adjoining to any city or town corporate, where there is or shall be a common brewhouse, having and lawfully using any private brewing-vessels for the brewing and making of beer or ale to be spent and consumed in his or their private families, shall lend out any of their brewing-vessels to be made use of by any other person or persons, not being of his or their family, for the brewing of beer or ale for the use of any other person or persons, then such person or persons shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 50*l.*; and that it was expedient to repeal so much of the said act as was hereinbefore recited; and it is enacted, that from the passing of this act, viz. 4th June, 1824, the same shall be and is repealed."

(a) See 1 W. IV., c. 51 and 64, post. 333 to 352.

By 12 Car. II. c. 24, s. 33. "The gauger shall at all times in the day (and in the night with a constable) be permitted, upon his request, to enter the brewhouse and all other houses and places belonging to or used by any person brewing of beer, or by any retailer of beer, ale, wort, perry, cyder, or metheglin; and to gauge all coppers, vats, and vessels in the same; and to take an account of all such liquors brewed or made therein; and thereof shall make return in writing to the commissioners, leaving a true copy of such return under his hand with such brewer, maker, or retailer; which return shall be a charge upon such brewers, makers, or retailers."

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

Gauger to enter and take account.

Sect. 33. "And if any such common brewer, maker, or retailer shall refuse to permit such gauger to enter his brewhouse or other place aforesaid, or to gauge or take account of his vessels or liquor aforesaid, he shall be forthwith forbidden by the gauger to sell, carry out, or deliver to any of his customers, any beer, ale, or other the liquors aforesaid; and if he shall, after such warning given, sell, carry, or deliver out the same, or any part thereof, not having paid the duty of Excise, he shall, besides the forfeiture of double value, forfeit also the sum of 10*l*."

If there be refusal to permit the gauger, he may forbid sale of the liquor.

By 7 & 8 W. III., c. 30, s. 22. "If any common brewer, innkeeper, or victualler shall, on request or demand made by the gauger in the daytime, or in the night in presence of a constable, refuse to permit him to come into his house, brewhouse, or other place used by him; or, being entered, shall refuse him to stay in the brewhouse whilst his guile is brewing, and quietly gauge and take an account of the several worts as they are brewed off, and let into his backs and tuns, and to see their strong and small [and table-beer by 42 Geo. III., c. 33, s. 7,] drink cleansed and carried out without mixture, and to take an account of the goods in the mesh-tun, or the quantity of malt from which such worts are made, he shall forfeit 20*l*., and the prosecutor shall not be obliged to prove that the party carried out any part of such guile before he paid the duties."

Penalty on the brewer for refusal.

By 15 Car. II., c. 11, s. 16. "If any brewer shall bribe the gauger to make a false return, or to omit the executing of his employment, he shall forfeit 10*l*.; and the officer taking the bribe shall also forfeit 10*l*. upon conviction, on the oaths of two witnesses before two justices of the peace, or the chief magistrate of the place, to be levied by distress; and, for want of distress, the offender to be committed to the common gaol for three months."

Offering or taking bribes.

Sect. 7. "As often as there shall be occasion, two able artists shall be appointed, one of them by the commissioners or subcommissioners, and the other by the brewers of any city or place, who shall be sworn before a justice to take and compute the just contents and gauge of all coppers, fats, tuns, backs, and coolers, and all other brewing-vessels of that nature, and to deliver under their hands one copy of the contents to the commissioners, and another to each respective brewer."

Indifferent gaugers may be sworn.

By 8 & 9 Will. III., c. 19, s. 2. "Every common brewer who shall make any guile of beer or ale shall declare to the gauger how much strong beer or strong ale he intends to make of such guile, and how much small, [or table-beer by 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 7,] before any part of the guile is cleansed or removed out of his tuns; and if such brewer or his servants shall refuse to make such declaration, the gauger shall return the whole as strong, and the brewer pay the duties, and shall also forfeit for every barrel in such guile [100*l*. by 42 Geo. III. c. 38, s. 16, the penalty of 20*s*. by 8 & 9 Will. being found insufficient to prevent the fraud.] If such brewer or his servants, after such declaration, shall make any increase of the strong beer or ale, or if the gauger shall find any beer, ale, or worts of the same guile laid off, over and above the quantity so declared, he shall forfeit for every barrel so increased, laid off, or found over and above such quantity, 5*l*., and the servant assisting therein 20*s*. for every such barrel, and in default of payment be imprisoned three months; and if, on an information against the brewer for the said penalties, it appear by his evidence that the

Sect. 3. "Whereas many brewers, having strong beer or ale remaining in the brewhouse from the time it was brewed until the next guile or brewing, the quality of which they frequently alter by mixing with the same new small beer or old returned drink, and then add the beer and ale so altered to the next guile; if it shall appear to the gauger that the quality of such strong beer or ale so remaining in the brewhouse of a former guile, and added to a guile of new drink, hath been so altered since it was brewed, he shall return all such beer and ale so altered and added to a guile of new drink, as if the same were then originally brewed, and had never been charged before; and the duties shall be paid accordingly."

By 1 & 2 Geo. IV., c. 22, s. 1. "Every brewer of beer for sale shall enter, or cause to be entered, in a book or paper, to be delivered to him by the officer of Excise, and at all times kept by such brewer in some public and open part of his entered premises ready for the inspection of the officers of Excise, the quantity of malt which he or she shall intend to use in his or her next brewing, together with the day when such brewing is intended to be made; and such entry shall be so made before any part of such malt shall be mashed, or any water or other liquor put thereto or mixed therewith; and every such brewer shall, at the time of making such entry, write or cause to be written, in such book or paper, opposite such entry, the date when such entry was so made; and if any such brewer shall refuse or neglect to make such entry as aforesaid, or shall cancel, obliterate, or alter, or cause, or suffer, or permit to be cancelled, obliterated, or altered, any such entry, or shall make any untrue entry therein, or shall not at all times keep such book or paper in some public and open part of his entered premises, ready for the inspection of the officers of Excise, or shall mash, or put to, or mix any malt with water or other liquor before such entry shall be made, he or she shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 200l."

Sect. 2. "No such brewer shall remove or cause to be removed his or her malt which has been mashed, or any part thereof, from the tun or vessel in which the same has been mashed, until the proper officer shall have gauged and taken an account of the quantity of such malt; or use, cause, permit, or suffer to be used any means whatever to prevent or hinder such officer or officers of Excise from taking an accurate gauge and account thereof: and if any person or persons shall remove, or cause, suffer, or permit to be removed any part of such malt, before such officer shall have gauged and taken an account of the same, or shall use any means as aforesaid, or obstruct, hinder, molest, or prevent any such officer or officers in or from so doing, or in execution of any of the powers and authorities given or granted to him or them by this act, every such person or persons shall severally forfeit for every such offence the sum of 200l. Provided, that no such brewer or other person shall incur the penalty aforesaid, for removing any such malt after all the worts have been drawn off from such malt, without any officer having gauged and taken an account thereof, if such brewer shall, at the time of making such entry, have specified in such book or paper and entry as aforesaid the time for such officer to attend to take such gauge and account, and such officer or officers shall not attend for that purpose within an hour after the time so specified."

Sect. 3. "It shall be lawful for any officer of Excise to take a sample or samples, not exceeding one pint at each time, of any wort or worts at or on the entered premises of any such brewer, at any time after the same shall have been drawn from the mash-tun, as often as may be necessary for the purpose of ascertaining the specific gravity thereof; returning such sample to such brewer after the specific gravity thereof has been ascertained, or paying him or her for the same at and after the rate of the current price of beer made from such wort; and no such brewer shall ferment or mix, or cause, permit, or suffer to be fermented or mixed, any wort with any yeast or other matter or thing for or occasioning fermentation, until the proper officer has taken such sample; and if any such brewer shall ferment or mix, or cause, permit, or suffer to be fermented or mixed, any of his or her wort with any yeast or other matter or thing for or occasioning fermentation, until such officer has taken such sample, he or she shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 200*l.* Provided that no such brewer shall incur the penalty last aforesaid, for fermenting or mixing any of his or her wort with yeast, or any other matter or thing occasioning fermentation, after the expiration of one hour after such wort has been run or drawn off from the copper in which the same has been boiled with hops, without any sample being thereof taken as aforesaid, if such brewer shall at the time of making such entry have specified in such book and paper and entry the time for such officer to attend to take and draw such sample, and such officer shall not attend for that purpose within an hour after the time so specified."

Sect. 4. "There shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every such brewer, and to every dealer in beer or ale, a book or books to be prepared with proper printed forms and titles for the purpose hereinafter mentioned, and kept by every such brewer and dealer in some public and open part of his or her entered premises; and no beer or ale shall be sold, sent out, or delivered by the brewer thereof, or by any dealer therein, to any brewer, victualler, dealer in or retailer of beer or ale, or other person or persons, without a certificate filled up and cut out progressively from the printed forms for such certificates contained in such book as aforesaid, to be left therewith, signed by such brewer or dealer selling, sending out, or delivering the same, or some person on his behalf, certifying the date, quantity, and quality of such beer or ale, to whom sold, and that the duty has been duly charged thereon, and at what place, at what rate, and upon what person such charge was made; and the brewer or dealer selling, sending out, or delivering any such beer or ale as aforesaid, shall at the same time make a correspondent entry thereof, containing the same particulars, in such book as aforesaid; and such book, with such entries so made therein as aforesaid, shall at all times be open and exposed in the entered premises of such brewer or dealer as aforesaid, to the perusal of any officer of Excise surveying the said premises, and shall be delivered by such brewer or dealer to any officer of Excise upon demand; and if any such brewer or dealer shall at any time sell, send out, or deliver any beer or ale to any brewer, victualler, dealer in or retailer of beer, or other person, without delivering such certificate, or making such entry in such book, or shall convey away or conceal any such book or books, or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or tear out any leaf therefrom, or entry therein, or shall make any false entry therein, or shall oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer of Excise in inspecting any such book, or entry therein, or shall at any time neglect or refuse, when required, to give up to any officer such book or books, every such brewer or dealer so offending shall for every such offence severally forfeit the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 5. "If any officer of Excise shall discover and find any increase in the stock of any brewer, victualler, dealer, or retailer, over and above the quantity of beer or ale which the officer found in such brewer, victualler, dealer, or retailer's custody, at the time of the last preceding survey upon such brewer, victualler, dealer, or retailer; and which increase such brewer, victualler, dealer, or retailer, shall not thereupon satisfactorily account for, as arising from beer duly received with such certificate as aforesaid, or brewed by himself, and on which the duty has been duly charged; such increase, or a quantity of beer or ale equal thereto, shall

By 7 & 8 W. III., c. 30, s. 21. "If any common brewer, innkeeper, or victualler, shall cleanse or remove out of his brewhouse any part of his guile or brewing of beer, ale, or worts, before the whole of such guile is brewed off, and until the gauger shall or might have taken an account of the same, without first giving notice to the supervisor or gauger, at what time, what quantity, and to what place he intends to remove, he shall, for every barrel, forfeit 40*s*."

By 1 W. III., sess. 1, c. 24, s. 6. "Where it shall appear to the gauger that any worts are missing or not fairly let down into the tun, and the gauger cannot find the same, he may charge for so much beer or ale as such worts so missing would reasonably make."

Sect. 7. "Gaugers may take their gauges, and make their returns and charges upon warm worts in the backs, coolers, or other vessels; and, in such case, make allowance of one tenth part thereof for wash and waste; which worts shall not be afterwards charged when made into beer or ale."

By 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 12. "If any common brewer shall mix any strong beer or strong worts with any table-beer or table-beer worts, or with water in any guile-tun, working-tun, or fermenting-tun, after such declaration of the quantity of the guile; or shall mix the same in any vat, cask, tub, measure, or other vessel or utensil, not being an entered guile-tun, working-tun, or fermenting-tun, he shall forfeit 200*l*."

By 15 C. II., c. 11, s. 12; and 1 W. III., sess. 1, c. 24, s. 11. "If any common brewer, innkeeper, victualler, or other retailer of beer or ale, shall, after an account hath been taken by the gauger, convert any small beer or small worts so taken account of into strong beer or ale, by mingling, letting down, or striking over the same, and shall sell, deliver out, or retail the same, without giving notice to the same gauger of the quantity so mingled and converted, or if any such brewer or retailer shall, after the said time, conceal or convey any beer, ale, or worts not gauged from the sight of the gauger, whereby the king may be defrauded of the duty, he shall forfeit 20*s*. a barrel."

By 2 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 2. "If any common or other brewer, innkeeper, victualler, or retailer of beer or ale shall mix, or cause or suffer to be mixed in any vessel, tub, measure, or otherwise however, any strong beer, ale, or strong worts, with any small beer or small worts, or with water, after the gauge shall have been taken, he shall forfeit 50*l*."

(a) A count on the 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 12, stating that the defendant, between the 21st day of October, 1819, and on each and every of divers, to wit, twenty other days, between that day and the day of exhibiting the information, did mix a large quantity, to wit, twelve gallons of strong beer, with a large quantity, to wit, twelve gallons of table-beer, in each and every of divers, to wit, five other casks, whereby, &c. the defendant had for each of the said offences forfeited the sum of 200*l*., amounting in the whole to 21,000*l*., was held to be a good count against the objections that it was cumulative and multifarious, being a single count for many penalties,—that the divers other days on which, &c. ought to have been specified and stated, that the charge was uncertain and unintelligible, or repugnant, and that from the calculation of the amount of the sums alleged to be forfeited, it appeared that the defendant was charged with five offences on each day, whereas he could not in point of law be considered to have committed more than one offence on each particular day. In penal informations filed in the Court of Exchequer by the attorney-general, ancient precedents are considered good authority for the form of particular counts. Attorney-General v. Freer, 11 Price, 183; and 4 Price, 122, S. P.

By 42 Geo. III. c. 38, s. 20, "which recites, that whereas many persons, under pretence of recovering stale beer, or making or preparing beer-finings, or colouring for beer, or under other pretences, have fabricated from divers ingredients, injurious to the health of H. M.'s subjects, liquor to resemble beer or ale brewed entirely from malt and hops, or to be mixed with beer or ale so brewed, to the great injury of H. M.'s subjects, of the fair trader, and of H. M.'s revenue, it is enacted, that from the 1st of May, 1802, no person shall mix, fabricate, or prepare, or suffer to be mixed, &c. from beer-grounds, stale beer, sugar-water, distiller's spent-wash, sugar-melasses, vitriol, quassia, cocculus indiæ, grains of paradise, guinea pepper, opium, or any other material whatever (except malt and hops), any liquor to imitate, resemble, or to be mixed with or used as beer or ale brewed from malt and hops; nor shall sell or dispose of, or cause to be sold, &c. to any brewer of, dealer in, seller, or retailer of beer or ale, or to any other person whatever, any liquor so mixed or prepared, on pain of 200*l.* for every offence; and all liquor so mixed or prepared, and also all beer-grounds, stale beer, &c. &c. other than malt and hops, in the custody or possession of such person, together with every copper, cooler, back, tun, vat, or other vessel or utensil whatsoever, in which any such liquor or material shall be contained, or which shall have been used in the mixing, preparing, or keeping any such liquor; and all such liquor and materials, together with every such copper, &c. as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 21. "No brewer of, or dealer in, or seller of beer or ale, shall receive into his custody or possession any stale beer, or beer-grounds, or shall mix with any beer or ale any liquor fabricated or prepared from beer-grounds, stale beer, or any of the ingredients aforesaid (except malt and hops), or in the preparation whereof any of the said ingredients is or shall be mixed or made use of, nor shall receive into his custody or possession any liquor compounded or prepared as aforesaid, on pain of forfeiting 100*l.*"

Sect. 22. "No brewer, or dealer in or seller of beer or ale, shall be subject to the said penalty of 100*l.* for receiving any stale beer returned to him for being disliked by any person to whom he had sold such beer, or of taking back any beer-grounds in the bottom of any cask returned to him by any person to whom he had sent the same, filled with the beer from whence such grounds were produced; also, no dealer in or seller of beer or ale, not being a brewer of beer or ale, shall be liable to the said penalty for having or taking into his custody or possession any liquor compounded or prepared from stale beer-grounds, stale beer, or any of the ingredients aforesaid, or in the fabrication or preparation whereof any materials or ingredients as aforesaid, other than malt and hops, have been mixed or made use of, if at the trial or hearing for recovery of the said penalty such dealer or seller shall prove to the satisfaction of the Court and jury, or of the commissioners of Excise, or justices before whom such hearing shall be had, that such liquor was bought and received by such dealer or seller in the fair and usual course of trade, of some regular brewer of beer or ale, and that such dealer or seller had no knowledge of such liquor being compounded or prepared contrary to this act."

Sect. 23. "Every Excise officer may, whenever it seems to him expedient, take samples of any liquor which he shall suspect to be liquor so mixed or prepared as aforesaid, to resemble or be mixed with or used as beer or ale brewed from malt and hops, such sample not exceeding three gallons at any one time, on paying after the rate of 1*s.* 6*d.* by the gallon."

Sect. 24. "If any officer of Excise shall have cause to suspect that any person does in any place mix or prepare from any such ingredients as aforesaid any liquor to resemble, be mixed with, or used as beer or ale brewed from malt and hops, or to be disposed of to any brewer of or dealer in beer or ale, or to any other person, or that such liquor so mixed

By 56 Geo. III. c. 58, (by which 51 Geo. III. c. 87, was repealed) s. 2. "No brewer or brewers of, or dealer or dealers in, or retailer or retailers of beer, shall receive or take into or have in his, her, or their custody or possession, or make, or use, or mix with, or put into any worts or beer,

(a) The provisions that have been made by the legislature to preserve the purity of beer are liberally construed in our courts of justice in advancement of the objects for which they were enacted. Where a druggist, after the passing of the stat. 42 Geo. III., c. 38, sold a quantity of drugs, consisting of Spanish juice, isinglass, ginger, and other articles, to a brewer, knowing they were to be used in a brewery, it was holden that he could not recover the price (Langton v. Hughes, 1 M. & S. 593.); and a remedy was also provided for this particular case by the stat. 51 Geo. III., c. 87, s. 17. which also provided, that brewers should not receive or take into their possession certain ingredients, as grains of paradise, &c. (51 Geo. III., c. 87, s. 16. Penalty 200*l*., and forfeiture of goods); these articles having been found to be frequently employed to an unlawful purpose: and it is no defence to a person charged with an offence against this statute, that he also exercised the trade of a distiller at a place distinct from his brewery, and that the noxious ingredients were found at that place. (Attorney-General v. King, and others, 5 Price, 195.) But an information on such statute, charging a receiving and taking into possession, has been holden not to be maintainable, where it was proved that the act of receiving was antecedent to the statute, although the possession had continued ever since. (Ibid.) It was held that a record of condemnation in the Court of Exchequer was conclusive evidence against the defendant in an action for the penalty; but it was not evidence of immaterial averments, which are stated in it under a scilicet; and a condemnation for an act of forfeiture created by one statute is not evidence on a charge of an offence against the same party, with respect to the same goods, created by another statute. (Attorney-General v. King, 5 Price, 195.)

or to be reputed to be so licensed, or shall sell, send, or deliver, or cause or procure to be sold, sent, or delivered to any other person or persons for or on account of, or in trust for, or for the use of any such brewer or brewers, or dealer or dealers, or retailer or retailers of beer, any liquor called or known by the name or description of or sold as colouring, from whatever materials the same may have been made, or any other material or preparation, other than unground brown malt, for the purpose of darkening the colour of worts or beer, or any liquor or preparation such as has been heretofore used or as shall hereafter be made use of for or in the darkening the colour of worts or beer, except as aforesaid, or any melasses, honey, liquorice, vitriol, quassia, cocculus indiæ, grains of paradise, guinea pepper, or any extract or preparation of melasses, honey, liquorice, vitriol, quassia, cocculus indiæ, grains of paradise, guinea pepper, opium, or any article or preparation to be used in worts or beer for or as a substitute for malt or hops respectively; all such liquor called or known by the name or description of or sold as colouring, and material or preparation for the purpose aforesaid, and liquor and preparation used, or which shall hereafter be used for or in the darkening the colour of worts or beer, melasses, honey, liquorice, vitriol, quassia, cocculus indiæ, grains of paradise, guinea pepper, extract or preparation of melasses, honey, liquorice, vitriol, quassia, cocculus indiæ, grains of paradise, guinea pepper, opium, and article or preparation to be used for or as a substitute for malt or hops, respectively, shall be forfeited, and the same respectively shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, and the druggist or druggists, vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in drugs, or chemist or chemists, or other person or persons whatever so offending, shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 500*l*."

delivered out.

By 7 & 8 W. III. c. 30, s. 23. "If any common brewer or innkeeper shall, on carrying out his drink, or after it is carried out, mix any small beer or small worts with any strong beer or strong ale on his dray, or in any victualler's cellar or other place, he shall forfeit 5*l*.; and the gauger may taste the drink upon the dray, and also, upon request, may enter the cellar or other room in the possession of any innkeeper or victualler that shall receive any drink from a common brewer, and taste the drink in the same, and if the innkeeper or victualler shall refuse him to enter into his cellar or other rooms, or to taste the drink in the same, he shall forfeit 5*l*."

retailer.

By 22 and 23 Car. II. c. 5, s. 11. "No retailer of beer or ale shall, after the receipt thereof from the common brewer, mix any beer, ale, or worts of extraordinary strength with any small beer, ale, or worts, in any vessel or tub containing three gallons or more, on pain to forfeit for every barrel so mixed double the duty of Excise for strong beer or ale, and so proportionably for any greater quantity."

Measure of the
or ale.

And by 43 Geo. III. c. 69, s. 12, "reciting that it is expedient that the quantities to be returned as and for a barrel of beer or ale brewed by the common brewer, and the allowances for waste, should be in all places the same, it is enacted, that after the 5th day of July, 1803, every 36 gallons of beer or ale brewed by the common brewers in Great Britain, whether within the weekly bills of mortality, or without the same, taken according to the standard of the ale quart, four thereof to the gallon, in the Exchequer, shall be reckoned and returned by the gauger or other officer of Excise for a barrel of beer or ale."

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 54, s. 17. "Whereas it is expedient that the duties on beer should be charged throughout Great Britain by the same measure, every 36 gallons of beer taken either by gauge or measure shall, throughout Great Britain, be reckoned and returned by the officers of Excise for a barrel of beer, and the several rates of duty imposed in respect of beer shall be charged thereon accordingly, and so in proportion for any less quantity; and no beer shall be sold by any brewer, dealer, or retailer, at any other rate or quantity per barrel than the above quantity of 36 gallons, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

And by 6 Geo. IV. c. 58, s. 6, "it is enacted, that after 5th January, 1826, in every act of parliament relating to the revenue of Excise, whenever and for whatever purpose any gallon measure is mentioned, it shall be deemed and taken to be a gallon imperial standard gallon measure; and that all duties, &c. under any law or laws of Excise, shall thenceforth be made and kept according to such imperial standard gallon measure only, or some multiple part or proportion thereof."

By 43 Geo. III. c. 69, s. 12. "The allowances to be made in Great Britain to the common brewer not selling beer, ale, or worts in any less quantity than a whole cask containing  $4\frac{1}{2}$  gallons, whether within or without the said limits, for waste by fillings and leakage, or otherwise, out of the returns by the gaugers or other officers, shall be three barrels upon every thirty-six barrels, both of strong beer or table-beer and ale, and after that rate for any greater or less quantity."

Sect. 13. "The said allowance to the common brewer of three upon every thirty-six barrels of beer or ale shall be in full compensation for all waste or other losses whatsoever."

Sect. 14. "And no beer or ale brewed by the common brewers in Great Britain shall be sold by them at any other rate or quantity for the barrel than as aforesaid; provided that nothing herein shall extend to alter the quantity returned as and for a barrel of beer or ale brewed by any victualler or retailer, or other person than the common brewer who sells or takes out beer or ale publicly or privately."

By 12 Car. II. c. 24, s. 37. "If any common brewer shall wittingly and willingly make a false entry, and be convicted thereof, he shall, over and above other penalties, forfeit the allowance for six months then next ensuing."

But by 25 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 1. "Common brewers who shall sell beer, ale, or worts in a less quantity, at one time, than a whole cask containing  $4\frac{1}{2}$  gallons, shall be deemed to sell by retail, and shall not be entitled to any allowance whatsoever."

By 32 Geo. III. c. 8, s. 1. "Every common brewer who shall sell beer, ale, or worts in any less quantity, at one time, than in a whole cask containing  $4\frac{1}{2}$  gallons, shall forfeit 50*l.* for every such offence."

And by 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 18. "If any person, not being a common brewer, shall retail beer at a higher price than after the rate of one penny halfpenny the quart, alehouse measure, without obtaining a licence as a common alehouse-keeper, he shall forfeit 50*l.* over and above any other penalty for selling beer or ale without such licence."

By 7 & 8 W. III., c. 30, s. 46. "Notes of every gauge, signed by the gaugers, containing the inches and tenths of the backs, and wants of the tuns, and quality of the liquors, shall be left by them with the common brewers of ale or beer, or some servant (if demanded), at the time of taking the gauges, on pain of 40*s.*"

And by s. 25. "The gauger shall, within three days after the end of every week, deliver to or leave with the brewer or retailer, or their servants, a true copy under his hand of each respective charge by him made, containing the quantity and quality of the liquors by him charged in such week; and if he shall neglect or refuse (after demand in writing, 12 Geo. III. c. 28, s. 30) to leave such copy, or shall charge such person more than such copy contains, he shall forfeit 10*l.*"

By 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 14. "Upon complaint made before the commissioners of Excise or justices of the peace on the behalf of any common brewer on account of any overcharge made on him by any officer of Excise, in respect of any table-beer charged and returned by such officer as strong beer, it shall not be lawful for such commissioners or justices to discharge such brewer of such charge, or any part thereof, unless proof be made before them on oath by a credible witness to their satisfaction that the whole quantity of the table-beer made in the guile or brewing to which such complaint refers, or at least the greater part thereof, was actually sold at a price not exceeding 16s. the barrel, exclusive of the duty, nor unless the names and residences of the party to whom such beer, or the greater part thereof, was sold and delivered, and the days of delivery, be given on the oath of such witness or witnesses." (See stat. 3 Geo. IV., c. 18, s. 11, ante.)

By 12 Car. II., c. 24, s. 29. "All common brewers of beer and ale shall once in every week, and all innkeepers, alehouse-keepers, victuallers, and other retailers of beer, ale, cyder, perry, or metheglin, brewing, making, or retailing the same, shall once in every month make entries at the Excise office of all such liquors brewed, made, or retailed in that week and month respectively."

Sect. 30. "All such common brewers who do not once a week make due entries shall forfeit 10l.; and every such innkeeper who doth not make true entries once a month shall forfeit 5l.; and every alehouse-keeper, victualler, or other retailer, who does not once a month make due entries, shall forfeit 20s."

Sect. 31. "Every common brewer who shall not pay within a week after he made his entry, or ought to have made his entry, shall pay double value of the duty; and every innkeeper, alehouse-keeper, victualler, or other retailer who shall not pay within a month after he made his entry, or ought to have made his entry, shall pay double value of the duty." (M.)

Sect. 32. "Provided that no such person shall be compelled to travel for making the said entries, or payment of the said duties, or other cause whatsoever touching the same, if he live in a market-town, out of the said town; if he live out of a market-town, then to no other place than to the next market-town to his habitation in the same county, on the market-day."

But by 15 Car. II., c. 11, s. 6. "No common brewer shall be prosecuted for any forfeiture for any mis-entry or short entry, if he shall in one week after the delivery of the copy of the return made by the gauger rectify his entry according to the said return, or otherwise discharge himself."

But by 1 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 24, s. 10. "No brewer shall have any benefit of this proviso, on any information to be brought against him for non-entry, false entry, or non-payment, if it shall appear by the evidence that he did not bonâ fide show to the gauger all the beer, ale, and worts of each respective guile for such time for which such copy of the return was made; or if any apparent fraud was acted, to defraud the king of his duty, for any part of the drink brewed in the time for which such copy of the return is made or given by the gauger."

By 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 17. "Every dealer in and seller of table-beer, selling, delivering, or disposing of more than one gallon at one time, shall make entry at the Excise of all places for storing, laying, keeping, or selling such beer, and shall be subject to the laws of Excise as victuallers and retailers of ale are; and if any such shall not make such entry, he shall forfeit 50l."

Sect. 13. "And if any common brewer shall sell, or permit to be sold, any beer made as and for table-beer, and charged with duty as such, at any higher price than 16s. the barrel (exclusive of the duties), either as to the price of the beer, or under pretence of carriage, credit, or interest of money, or other pretence, he shall for each offence forfeit 100l."

Sect. 9. "When such table-beer shall be cleansed into casks, such brewer shall mark each cask on the most conspicuous part with the letter T. of the length of four inches at least, to denote that the beer therein is such table-beer as aforesaid; and in case of neglect, or if any common brewer shall not continue such mark, or cause the same to remain and continue visible and distinct on every such cask, during the whole time the same shall remain in his possession, and until the same shall be delivered into the pos-

Penalty for selling table-beer at more than the barrel price, exclusive of duty.

When table-beer is cleansed into casks, the same to be marked, session of the person to whom the same shall be sold or delivered for consumption or otherwise, he shall forfeit 50*l.* for every such cask on which such mark shall not be put and continued."

Sect. 10. "Every such cask shall be kept in a separate place from all other casks of beer or ale, on pain of forfeiting 50*l.*"

Sect. 11. "No table-beer shall be put into or tunned, cleansed, or stored in any cask, vat, or other vessel, exceeding the content or size of a butt or pipe of three barrels, on forfeiture, for each offence, of 100*l.* Provided, that nothing herein shall prevent any common brewer, upon twenty-four hours' notice thereof in writing to the proper officer of Excise, from putting into any vessel of a larger size or content a sufficient quantity of table-beer, not exceeding two barrels for every 100 barrels of the full content of such tun or vessel, to preserve such vessel in a proper condition for receiving or storing strong beer; and provided also that no strong beer shall be put into any such large vessel until all such table-beer shall have been taken out of the same, in presence of and to the satisfaction of the proper officer of Excise."

But by 12 C. II., c. 24, s. 39. "If any person shall brew and sell by retail any small quantities of beer or ale in any fair, who is not otherwise a common brewer or retailer thereof, and shall, before such selling and retailing, pay the Excise for the same, he shall be freed from all penalties relating to such entries and the like."

By 42 Geo. III., c. 38, s. 19. "No entered dealer in beer, being an exporter of beer or ale, shall have or keep any table-beer in any cellar, or other place entered for laying or keeping strong beer; and if any such dealer shall have or keep any table-beer in any such cellar or other place, the person so offending shall for every offence forfeit 50*l.*"

Sect. 40. "The commissioners and sub-commissioners may compound with innkeepers and others for the duties."

But by 15 C. II., c. 11, s. 14. "No person who hath compounded shall, during the term of such composition, suffer any beer or ale to be brewed within his brewhouse for any other common brewer, without first giving notice to the commissioners or sub-commissioners, and forthwith paying down the Excise thereof; upon pain that as well the brewer who shall brew the same, as the brewer for whom it shall be brewed, shall forfeit 5*l.* for every barrel."

By 15 C. II., c. 11, s. 13, and 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 21. "All brewing-vessels and utensils for brewing, into whose hands soever they shall come, and by what conveyance or title soever they be claimed, shall be subject to all the debts and duties of Excise in arrear for any beer or ale made in the said brewhouse, and shall also be subject to all penalties and forfeitures against the laws of Excise; and it shall be lawful to levy debts and penalties, and use such proceedings against the utensils therein contained, as it may be lawful to do in case the debtor or offender using the said utensils had been the real owner thereof."

All fines, penalties, and forfeitures, shall be sued for, recovered, or mitigated as directed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 57, et seq. (see ante, 227 to 310.) and the other statutes before then in force; and for the general powers of justices (see ante, p. 286 to 297.)

By 1 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 24, s. 16; 12 & 13 W. & M. c. 11, s. 17. "No information shall be brought against any common brewer or ale-housekeeper or cyder-maker, for any mis-entry or offence, but within three months after the offence committed; and notice thereof shall be given to him in writing, or left at his dwelling-house, within a week after laying and entering the information."

By 4 Geo. IV., c. 51, s. 12. "Every person who shall make or shall be entered, or used respectively as aforesaid, contrary to this act; and all and every entries or entry of any such house or premises so entered and made use of contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act shall be null and void."

Sect. 13. "Every person who shall make entry of any buildings or premises for brewing beer or ale under the provisions of this act shall specify in such entry the room, storehouse, or place, rooms, storehouses, or places, in which he shall intend to store the malt for such brewing, and shall, when and so often as he shall receive any malt, store, lodge, and place the same in one or more of such entered rooms, storehouses, or other places, and shall use or employ no other malt, ground or unground, for brewing beer or ale under this act, than such as shall be taken by him from one or more of such entered rooms, storehouses, or places for that purpose, and of which entry shall on the same day be made in the book hereinafter mentioned; and if any such person shall not make such entry as aforesaid, or specify and distinguish every such room, storehouse, or place as aforesaid, or shall receive or take into or have in his possession any malt, ground or unground, for brewing, without such malt, ground or unground, being lodged, put, or placed by him, her, or them, in one or more of such rooms, storehouses, or places, entered for that purpose, and entered in such book as hereinafter mentioned, or shall use any malt, ground or unground, in or for such brewing as aforesaid, without taking the same from one or more of such entered rooms, storehouses, or other places, and making entry thereof in such book as is hereinafter mentioned, every such person or persons so offending as aforesaid shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 200l."

Sect. 14. "Every brewer of beer or ale under this act shall keep a book to be delivered to him by the proper officer of Excise, which book shall be prepared with distinct columns for entering accounts of all the malt which shall be received by any such brewer, to be used, and which shall be used by him, in the brewing of such beer or ale; and every such brewer shall, under the date and on the same day on which he shall receive any malt into his possession for brewing, write and enter or cause to be written and entered in such book, and in the proper columns, a true and particular account of the number of bushels of malt, distinguishing the same whether ground or unground, which he shall receive into his possession for brewing as aforesaid; and shall also write and enter the christian and surnames and places of abode of the persons of whom such malt was purchased, or from whom such malt was received; and shall also write and enter an account of the quantity of such malt in bushels, and distinguishing whether ground or unground, which shall from time to time be used at such brewery in the brewing or making of such beer or ale, and make every such last-mentioned entry in such book, under the date and on the same day in which such malt was so used; and if any such brewer shall neglect or refuse to make or cause to be made any such entry or entries, or shall cancel, obliterate, or alter, or cause or suffer to be cancelled, obliterated, or altered, any such entry or entries, or shall make any untrue entry or entries therein, or shall at any time withhold, conceal, or make away with any such book or any part thereof, every such brewer or brewers so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100l."

Sect. 15. "All such books shall at all times be produced to and left open to the free inspection of the proper officers of Excise, who shall be permitted to examine and cast up and make copies or extracts from the entries contained therein, and to insert therein the time of such inspection, and sign their names thereto, and to take away any such book and deliver any such trader a new book of a similar kind; and if any person shall by any act, matter, or thing, or by any art or contrivance, obstruct or hinder, or cause or permit or suffer to be obstructed or hindered, any officer of Excise therein, or in the performance and execution of any of the powers and authorities by this act given, or of his duty in respect thereof, every person and persons so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 200/."

Sect. 16. "Every such brewer shall, when and so often as thereto required by any officer of Excise, cast or place all the malt in his possession in such regular form as may enable the officer of Excise conveniently to gauge and ascertain the true quantity thereof; and if upon such admeasurement the quantity of malt then in stock shall be found to disagree with the quantity which such brewer ought to have in his possession, according to the true balance drawn from casting up and adjusting such book and the entries therein, and allowing for so much as shall in and by the aforesaid book and the entries therein appear to have been used for the purpose of brewing such beer as aforesaid, then every such brewer, the quantity of whose malt then in stock shall be found so to disagree, or who, upon being thereunto required as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to cast or place such malt as aforesaid in his, her, or their custody or possession, in or unto such regular form as aforesaid, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 200/."

Sect. 17. "Every brewer shall, before the officers take any such account of malt as aforesaid, be required by the proper officer, and be permitted to make due entries in such book of all malt which he may have received into his possession, or may have used in the brewing of beer in the course of the day in which such account is proposed or intended to be taken; and if any dispute shall arise between any such brewer and the officer of Excise respecting the true quantity of malt in stock so taken an account of as aforesaid, such brewer shall have the option of and be allowed immediately to measure the same in the presence of such officer by a just Winchester bushel measure, to be provided by such brewer, and the quantity ascertained by such admeasurement shall be taken to be the true quantity of the malt in stock in the possession of such brewer."

Sect. 18. "On every brewing by any brewer under the provisions of this act, the whole of the worts made on and by such brewing shall be collected and mixed together by such brewer, and made of one and the same quality, before the same or any part thereof shall be cleansed, removed, or run from the fermenting-tun; and no such beer or ale shall be put into or tunned, cleansed, kept, or stored in any cask, vat, or other vessel exceeding the content or size of a butt or pipe of three barrels; and before any such cask, vat, or other vessel shall be used for any such purpose, the same shall be entered at the proper office of Excise, and be truly gauged and inched to the satisfaction of the proper officer or officers of Excise; and if any such brewer shall on any brewing not collect and mix together the whole of the worts made on and by such brewing, and make the same of one and the same quality, before the same or any part thereof is cleansed, removed, or run from the fermenting-tun, or shall put into, or tun, cleanse, keep, or store any such beer or ale in any cask, vat, or other vessel exceeding such size as aforesaid, or shall make use of the same for any such purpose before the same have been entered, gauged, and inched as aforesaid, or afterwards alter by enlarging or diminishing the same without notice thereof to the proper officer, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 100/.; and every cask, vat, or other vessel which shall have been so used as aforesaid, with all the beer contained therein, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 19. "When and as often as any beer or ale brewed under the provisions of this act shall be sold and sent out or delivered for consumption or otherwise in any quantity of four gallons or upwards, such beer shall be sent out by the brewer in a cask on which shall be branded and permanently marked, in large and legible letters, the name of such brewer, and of the place or brewery where such beer was brewed, as well as the numeral figure five, of the length of four inches at the least, to denote the quality of such beer; and if any such brewer shall neglect or refuse to distinguish all such beer when sold and sent out, or delivered in any such quantity or quantities as aforesaid, in a cask which shall be so branded and marked, every such brewer or brewers shall for every such offence forfeit 50*l*. Provided always, that no such brewer shall be subject to any such penalty in any case where such beer shall be taken away by the person to whom the same may be sold, in any cask produced by him, and then filled for such purpose."

Sect. 20. "From and after the passing of this act, every brewer of beer or ale brewed under the provisions of this act, and every brewer of any other beer, ale, porter, or table-beer for sale, shall, before he shall cleanse or remove or run any wort or beer from the fermenting-tuns, or into any cask or vessel other than a known tun, cask, or vessel for fermenting beer, and specially entered by such brewer for that purpose, make in writing, in the same book or paper in which every brewer of beer for sale is now by law required to give notice of every intended brewing, and of the quantity of malt by him intended to be used in such intended brewing, and opposite the entry of such notice, and the quantity of malt therein mentioned, a declaration of the whole length or quantity or quality of all the beer brewed by any such brewer at every such brewing, such declaration, when so made, being at the time signed by such brewer, or by his principal servant, the proper handwriting of such person being affixed and subscribed thereto; and if any such brewer shall refuse or neglect to make and enter such declaration in writing, or shall cancel, obliterate, or alter, or cause or suffer or permit to be cancelled, obliterated, or altered, any such declaration or entry, or if any such brewer or their or any of their servants shall make any untrue declaration or entry, or shall not at all times keep such book or paper in some public and open part of his entered premises, ready for the inspection of the officers of Excise, or shall, before such declaration or entry is so made, cleanse, remove, or run away any of the beer brewed at such brewing from the fermenting-tuns, or into any cask or vessel other than a known tun, cask, or vessel for fermenting beer, and specially entered by such brewer, every brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 200*l*."

Sect. 21. "All fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by this act shall be sued for or mitigated by such ways as any fine, &c. may be sued for or mitigated by any law of Excise, or by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland; and one moiety of every such fine, &c. shall be to His Majesty, and the other moiety to him or them who shall discover or sue for the same."

By 1 W. IV. c. 51, (a) intituled An act to repeal certain of the duties on cyder in the United Kingdom, and on beer and ale in Great Britain, and to make other provisions in relation thereto. "That from and after the 10th day of October, 1830, all the rates and duties and drawbacks payable on cyder in the United Kingdom, and all the rates, duties, allowances, drawbacks, and bounties now payable on beer or ale brewed or made in Great Britain (except the said hereditary duties of Excise on cyder, beer, and ale granted to His said Majesty King Charles the Second, and hereinafter more particularly specified) shall be repealed, cease and determine, and be no longer levied or collected, paid or payable."

Sect. 2. "That the hereditary duties on beer and ale and cyder brewed or made for sale in Great Britain, granted by the said first-recited act to His said Majesty King Charles the Second, his heirs and successors, (that is to say) for and upon every barrel of beer or ale above 6*s*. the barrel, brewed by the common brewer or any other person or persons who doth or shall sell or tap out beer or ale publicly or privately, to be paid by the common brewer or by such other person or persons respectively, and so proportionably for a greater or lesser quantity, a duty of 1s. 3d.: for every barrel of 6s. beer or ale, or under, brewed by the common brewer or any other person or persons who doth or shall sell or tap out such beer or ale publicly or privately, to be paid by the said common brewer or such other person or persons respectively as aforesaid, and so proportionably for a greater or lesser quantity, 3d.: for all cyder and perry made and sold by retail, upon every hogshead, to be paid by the retailer thereof, and so proportionably for a greater or lesser measure, 1s. 3d.: shall from and after the said 10th day of October, 1830, cease to be collected and paid, and shall not during the life of His present Majesty be levied, collected, or demanded, or be paid or payable; and the several acts, enactments, clauses, provisions, and regulations in the said recited act of the reign of His said Majesty King Charles the Second, or in any other act or acts contained for securing, levying, or collecting the duties on beer and ale and cyder, save and except the acts hereinafter continued in force, shall not, from and after the said 10th day of October, 1830, and during the life of his present Majesty, be enforced or executed, save and except for the purpose of recovering any duties incurred or charged before the said 10th day of October, 1830, or any arrears thereof, or any fine, penalty, or forfeiture for the breach of any of the said clauses, enactments, provisions, or regulations, committed previous to the said 10th day of October, 1830; but all such duties and arrears, penalties, fines, and forfeitures, shall and may be recovered, levied, enforced, and applied in the same manner, and by the same means, powers, and authorities, as if this act had not been passed."

Sect. 3. "Provided always, that an act passed in the fifty-sixth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, intituled An act to repeal an act made in the fifty-first year of his present Majesty, for allowing the manufacture and use of a liquor prepared from sugar for colouring porter, and an act passed in the first and second years of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled An act for securing the payment of the duties on ale and beer brewed in Great Britain, except so much thereof as relates to certificates and increases in stock, shall be and remain in full force and effect; and all brewers of beer or ale for sale, and all and every person who shall be licensed under any act as a brewer, dealer in, or retailer of beer, shall continue subject to the provisions, enactments, and regulations in the said last-mentioned acts contained; and the said provisions, enactments, and regulations shall continue to be respectively executed and put in force by the commissioners and officers of Excise in Great Britain, as fully and effectually as if this act had not been passed."

Sect. 4. "Provided always, that on and immediately after the demise of His Majesty, whom God long preserve, the said hereditary duties of Excise on beer and ale and cyder granted by the said first-recited act to his said Majesty King Charles the Second, his heirs and successors, shall revive and be again payable, collected, and paid in Great Britain; and it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of Excise for the time being, and they are hereby required, on and immediately after the demise of his present Majesty, to cause the said hereditary duties to be again charged, levied, collected, and paid in and throughout Great Britain, to and for the use of his Majesty's successors, and to cause all the laws, clauses, enactments, provisions, powers, authorities, and regulations for raising, levying, securing, and collecting the duties on beer and ale and cyder to be again put in force and execution for levying and collecting the said hereditary duties in the same manner as if this act had not been passed; and the said commissioners of Excise shall and they are hereby required to keep true and particular accounts of all the said duties so raised, levied, and collected by them for the use of His Majesty's successors."

Sect. 5. "And whereas the said hereditary duties of Excise on beer, ale, and cyder, granted by the said first-recited act of the reign of King Charles the Second are now vested in his present Majesty, and are subject to certain charges thereon, and it is necessary to make provision for supplying the deficiency which will occur by the said hereditary duties on beer and ale, and cyder, not being collected during His Majesty's life: and whereas by a medium of ten years, computed from the 5th day of January, 1820, to the 5th day of January, 1830, the sum of 348,000*l.* is taken to be the medium of the annual produce of the said hereditary duties on beer and ale and on cyder in England, and the sum of 6,500*l.* the medium of the annual produce of the said hereditary duties of Excise on beer and ale and on cyder in Scotland: to the end, therefore, that neither His Majesty, nor any other person or persons, may receive any prejudice by the nonpayment of the said hereditary duties, be it enacted, that from and after the 10th day of October, 1830, there shall be paid to His Majesty, during his natural life, which God long preserve, the clear yearly sums of 348,000*l.*, out of the revenues of Excise arising in England, and 6500*l.* out of the revenues of Excise arising in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, for and in lieu of what has annually been the amount of the said hereditary duties."

beer, the sums of 348,000*l.* in England, and 6,500*l.* in Scotland, to be annually paid to His Majesty.

Sect. 6. "That the said sums of 348,000*l.*, and 6500*l.* shall be paid by four quarterly payments, on the 5th day of January, the 5th day of April, the 5th day of July, and the 10th day of October, in each year, out of the revenues of Excise arising in England and Scotland respectively, in preference to all other payments, charges of management excepted, and shall be paid over to the account of and for the use of His Majesty; and the said sums of money respectively shall be, and the same are hereby declared to be subject and liable to, and to be charged with all such charges and sums of money as the hereditary duties, in lieu of which such payments shall be made, are subject and liable to and are charged with.

The sums to be paid by quarterly payments, and subjected to the same charges as the hereditary duties on cyder and beer were subject to.

Sect. 7. "And whereas the duty imposed by law on every licence to be taken out by any brewer or brewers of beer for sale is rated according to the quantity of beer brewed by the person or persons taking out the licence; and whereas, when the duties on beer shall cease to be collected in Great Britain, no account will be taken by the officers of Excise of the quantity of beer brewed for sale, but of the malt only used and employed by every brewer or brewers for that purpose; be it therefore enacted, that all and every brewer and brewers of beer for sale in Great Britain and Ireland shall, for the purpose of fixing and regulating the rate and amount of duty to be paid by such brewer or brewers for the licence to be taken out by him, her, or them, under an act passed in the sixth year of His late Majesty's reign, intituled An act to repeal several Duties on Excise Licences in Great Britain and Ireland, and to impose other Duties in lieu thereof, and to amend the Laws for granting Excise Licences, be deemed to have brewed one barrel of beer for every two bushels of malt used or employed by such brewer or brewers in brewing; and shall for every licence to be taken out by him, her, or them, for brewing beer for sale, pay such amount of duty, according to the rate by the said act imposed on brewers of other than table-beer, as shall be correspondent to the quantity of beer which he, she, or they shall be deemed to have brewed as aforesaid."

After 10th October, 1830, brewers to pay their licence duty in proportion to the quantity of malt which they shall use in brewing.

6 Geo. 4., c. 81.

Sect. 8. "That it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons in Great Britain or Ireland to take out a licence to brew beer for sale under the provisions of the said recited act of the sixth year of His late Majesty's reign, without giving or being required to give any bond or other security as a brewer or brewers of beer; any thing in the said recited act or any other act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Bond not to be required of brewers on taking out licence.

Sect. 9. "That from and after the said 10th day of October, 1830, there shall be granted and paid for and upon every barrel of thirty-six gallons, and so in proportion for any greater quantity of beer brewed or made by any entered brewer of beer for sale in the united kingdom, and

Sect. 10. "That it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons to export and ship as merchandise, from any port in the united kingdom to foreign parts, any beer or ale brewed or made by any entered and licensed brewer of beer for sale in the united kingdom, such beer or ale being in casks of not less than thirty-six gallons, and in the brewing whereof not less than two bushels of malt shall have been used to every thirty-six gallons of such beer or ale; and all and every person intending to export such beer or ale from any part of the united kingdom shall give to the Excise port surveyor, or officer of Excise acting as port surveyor, at the port of shipment, notice thereof, in manner directed and required by an act passed in the fifty-sixth year of the reign of His Majesty King George the Third, intituled An act for the making more effectual provision for the prevention of smuggling, and rewarding officers and persons making seizures and capturing smuggling-vessels, for licensing luggers employed in the North Sea fishery, and obliging exporters of exciseable goods on drawbacks to give notice of shipment; and the said export surveyor, or other officer of Excise acting as export surveyor, having examined or caused to be examined the beer or ale so intended to be shipped, and of the shipping whereof such notice shall have been given, or otherwise satisfied himself with respect to the same, shall sign his name to the said notice as having received the same, and shall transmit the said notice so signed to the proper officer of Customs in whose presence such beer or ale is to be shipped, and the said officer of Customs, having seen the said beer or ale duly shipped in his presence in and on board of the ship or vessel specified in the notice, shall certify the due shipment thereof and the day when the same was shipped on the said notice, and shall return the said notice, with such certificate of shipment thereon, to the Excise export surveyor, or officer of Excise acting as export surveyor; and the said export surveyor or officer of Excise having received such notice, with such certificate of shipment thereon, shall, at the expiration of one calendar month from the date of such shipment, make out and deliver to the exporter, or his clerk or manager, a debenture, expressing the quantity of beer so shipped, and the amount of drawback payable in respect thereof."

Sect. 11. "That before any such debenture shall be paid, the exporter of the beer or ale therein mentioned, or his principal clerk or manager, together with the brewer thereof, or his foreman or manager, shall make oath on the said debenture before the said export surveyor, or officer of Excise acting as such, that the said quantity of beer or ale was put on board the ship, and exported therein as merchandise to be spent beyond the seas, and no part thereof for the ship's use, and that according to the best of his and their knowledge and belief the same has been brewed wholly from malt which has been charged with and paid the duty of 2s. 7d. for every bushel thereof, and shall also specify in such oath the time when and the place where, and the brewer, being an entered and licensed brewer for sale, by whom such beer or ale was brewed, and that the quantity of malt employed in the brewing of such beer was in the proportion of not less than two bushels imperial standard bushel measure for every thirty-six gallons thereof; and if any such oath shall be found to be false or untrue in any particular or respect, the person making the false or untrue statement shall forfeit and lose the sum of 200l., and the debenture on which the same shall be made shall be and become null and void, and if unpaid, payment thereof shall be withheld, or if paid, the amount thereof shall and may be recovered back, in the same manner and by the same means and methods as any duty of Excise or penalty may be sued for and recovered under any law or laws of Excise."

Sect. 12. "That every such debenture, together with the said oath thereon, being produced to the collector of Excise within whose collection such beer or ale shall have been exported, the said collector shall forthwith, out of the monies in his hands, pay the amount thereof to the person or persons who shall appear by the said debenture to be entitled to the same."

Sect. 13. "Provided always, that where by any law or laws of Excise in force a certificate of the due landing of any goods or commodities at the place to which the same shall have been exported on drawback as merchandise shall be required, such certificate of the due landing of any ale or beer exported to any such place shall be produced to the collector of Excise before any such debenture shall be made out or paid."

Where a landing certificate is required, it shall be produced before payment of debenture.

Sect. 14. "That all the laws, clauses, enactments, powers, authorities, rules, regulations, fines, penalties, and forfeitures in force in Great Britain before the passing of this act, relating to the export of any exciseable goods or commodities on drawbacks, shall, as far as the same shall be applicable, extend to and be deemed and construed to extend to the exportation of beer and ale under the authority of this act from any part of the united kingdom, and shall be observed, enforced, and put in execution with respect to such exportation, and the payment of the drawback hereby granted, as fully and effectually as if the same were repeated and re-enacted in this act."

All laws in force in Great Britain relating to the export of exciseable commodities on drawbacks to apply to the export of beer.

Sect. 15. "That every brewer of beer for sale in Great Britain shall make a true and particular entry in writing of every store, building, room, and place, and of every mash-tun, by him or her intended to be used in or for the brewing or keeping of worts or beer, at the nearest office of Excise, specifying in such entry the particular use or purpose for which such store, building, room, or place shall be intended to be used, and shall also specify and distinguish in such entry every building or place in which he or she shall intend to store and keep the malt and the hops to be used by him or her in the brewing of beer, and shall store and deposit all such malt and all such hops in one or more of such entered buildings so specified to be used for keeping malt or for keeping hops respectively, and shall not use or employ any malt or hops which shall not have been so stored and deposited in and taken from one or more of such buildings or places so specified and distinguished; and if any such brewer shall use any store, building, room, or place, or mash-tun, without having made such entry thereof as aforesaid, in or for the brewing or keeping of worts or beer, or shall store or keep any malt or hops to be used by him or her in the brewing of beer in any building or place which shall not have been specified and distinguished in such entry as aforesaid, or shall use or employ any malt or hops in the brewing of beer which shall not have been stored and deposited in and taken from an entered building or place so specified and distinguished as aforesaid, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*; and all worts or beer which shall be found in any store, building, room, or place, or mash-tun, not specified and distinguished in such entry as aforesaid, and the casks containing the same, and all malt or hops which shall be found in any store, building, room, or place entered or used for the brewing of beer, other than malt taken from one or more of such buildings or places so specified and distinguished, for the purpose of being employed in the brewing of beer, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Brewers to make entry of all premises and utensils used for brewing or storing of beer and malt.

Penalty 200*l.* and forfeiture of utensils, &c.

Sect. 16. "That it shall be lawful for any officer of Excise, and every person in aid and assistance of such officer, at any time, to enter into and remain so long as such officer may think fit, for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, in any building or place belonging to or used by any such brewer, or by any dealer in or retailer of beer, for the brewing or keeping of worts or beer, or for the storing or keeping of malt or hops; and it shall be lawful for such officer of Excise, and any person in aid and assistance of such officer, to inspect any such building or place, and to take such account as such officer shall deem necessary of all worts, beer, and malt and hops therein, and of all other matters and things, and of all vessels,

Officers may enter any buildings or places used by brewers for the purpose of inspecting account of beer or malt therein.

Sect. 17. "That it shall not be lawful for any brewer of beer for sale in the united kingdom to have in his or her brewery, or in any part of the entered premises, or in any mill connected with such brewery or entered premises, any raw or unmalted corn or grain whatsoever, either whole or unground, or ground or bruised; and that all raw and unmalted corn or grain, whether whole or unground, or ground or bruised, which shall be found in such brewery or premises or mill, and all malted corn or grain, whether whole or unground, or ground or bruised, with which such raw unmalted corn or grain may have been or shall be mixed, shall be forfeited and may be seized by any officer of Excise, together with all sacks, casks, vessels, or packages in which such raw or unmalted corn or grain shall and may be contained, or in which such raw and unmalted corn or grain, and the malted corn or grain with which the same may or shall have been mixed, shall or may be contained; and every brewer shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 200l."

Sect. 18. "And whereas it may occur that between the passing of this act and the said 10th day of October, 1830, when the duties on beer are to cease and determine, persons other than brewers now licensed to brew beer for sale may brew quantities of beer without the payment of any duty thereon, and after the said 10th day of October, 1830, may bring forward such beer for sale, and sell the same for consumption; and persons who are now entered and licensed as brewers of beer, and are thereby subject to the payment of duty on all beer brewed by them prior to the said 10th day of October, 1830, may be thereby greatly injured and damnified, unless provision is made for allowing them to brew beer, not to be sold or consumed until after the said 10th day of October, 1830, free of duty; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any brewer of beer, from time to time, twenty-four hours before commencing to brew any guile of beer, to give notice in writing to the proper officer of Excise, that the particular guile of beer then about to be brewed is for beer not intended to be sold or sent into consumption until after the 10th day of October, 1830, and that he is desirous to brew the same without payment of duty, in which said notice shall be specified the particular vats or casks into which such beer is intended to be tunned and kept; and all such beer shall be brewed under all the same laws and regulations as are now in force, and an account taken thereof in the same manner as if the duty thereon was to be paid, levied, and collected; and when and as soon as such beer shall be brewed and made, the same shall be run into the particular vats or casks specified in the notice, and the officer of Excise shall forthwith take an account of all such beer, and of the duty which would be payable thereon; and all the beer so brewed under such notice shall be stored and deposited in a separate store-room or cellar, to be approved of by the commissioners of Excise, and under the locks and keys of the officer of Excise, or otherwise secured in such manner as the commissioners of Excise shall direct, and to their satisfaction; and when and as often as any other brewing of beer shall be made by any such brewer, to be stored or secured duty-free, the officer of Excise shall take an account of all the quantity which shall have been previously so stored or secured; and all beer so brewed without payment of duty shall be kept so stored, and shall not be sold or sent into consumption, or any part thereof tapped or drawn off, until the 11th day of October, 1830; and on the 10th day of October, 1830, the proper officers of Excise shall take an account of all the said beer which shall have been so brewed duty-free, and stored or secured as aforesaid, and if upon such account the whole quantity of such beer shall be found in the stock of the brewer who shall have brewed the same, deposited or secured as aforesaid, and the officers of Excise shall be satisfied that it is the same beer which was so brewed, and that no part thereof has been sent into consumption, or any addition made thereto, or any alteration therein, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to forego and remit the charge of duty thereon, and to allow the same to be sold without the payment of such duty."

Sect. 19. "Provided always, that if any beer which shall be brewed under the regulations aforesaid, as not to be sent into consumption until after the said 10th day of October, 1830, shall not at any time previous thereto be so stored in such separate store or cellar, or otherwise secured according to the directions of the commissioners of Excise, and to their satisfaction, or if any brewer shall tap any vat or cask in which the same shall be tunned or kept, or shall sell or send out any part thereof, or shall make any addition to or alteration therein by putting any other beer in any such vat or cask, or if on the said 10th day of October, 1830, or at any time previous thereto, the officers of Excise shall not find all such beer in the stock of such brewer so stored, or secured and unaltered, or if any such brewer shall use or practise any art or device to deceive the officer of Excise in taking an account of his stock, or to remove any of the said beer, or to evade any part of the duty on beer with which previous to the said 10th day of October, 1830, he might or would be chargeable, then, and in any such case, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, and they are hereby authorized and required, to demand and collect the duties charged on all the beer brewed by such brewer previous to the said 10th day of October, 1830; and the said brewer shall be liable to the payment of all such duties, and the same shall and may be levied, collected, and enforced under the laws, provisions, and regulations now in force for collecting and securing the duties on beer."

Sect. 20. "And whereas it is expedient to provide for continuing the drawback now payable on beer or ale exported, until the 5th day of April, 1831, on such beer as shall have been brewed in Great Britain, and charged with duty, and on which duty has been paid, and which may be exported before the said day; be it therefore enacted, that until the 5th day of April, 1831, the drawback of fourteen shillings and two-pence, now payable on the exportation of every barrel of beer, shall be paid and payable on the exportation of all beer and ale which shall have been brewed and charged with duty before the 14th day of April, 1830, and which any brewer of beer shall have declared to be intended for exportation, and of which an account shall have been taken under any orders or directions of the lords commissioners of His Majesty's treasury, or of the commissioners of Excise, issued for that purpose, and which shall have been kept stored in vats or casks of not less than eighteen hundred gallons imperial standard gallon measure content, and according to the rules and regulations contained in such orders or directions. Provided always, that such drawback shall not be allowed on any beer which shall not have been kept and stored in casks of the full size of eighteen hundred gallons, nor in any case where the rules and regulations contained in any such orders or directions shall not have been in every respect observed and fulfilled."

Sect. 21. "That all such beer shall be exported, and the drawbacks thereon paid, under the laws, enactments, and regulations relating to the exportation of beer in force before the passing of this act. Provided always, that every exporter of such beer intending to claim the said drawback of fourteen shillings and two-pence shall, on every exportation thereof after the 10th day of October, 1830, in addition to the other oaths now required to be taken by the exporter or shipper of beer, make oath that

Sect. 22. "And whereas an act was passed in this present session of parliament, intituled An act to permit the General Sale of Beer and Cyder by Retail in England, whereby the commissioners of Excise are authorized and empowered to grant licences to persons to retail ale or beer or cyder without such persons obtaining or producing a certificate or authority granted to such persons by justices of the peace or magistrates; be it further enacted, that nothing in the said act or in this or any other act contained shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend in any manner to interfere with the licences now required by law to be taken out and renewed by brewers of and dealers in beer, and persons keeping common inns, alehouses, and victualling houses, and selling beer, ale, and cyder, and wines and spirituous liquors, by retail, to be drank or consumed on the premises, but that all and every brewers and brewer of and dealer in beer shall take out such licences as are now by law required to be taken out by such brewers and dealers respectively; and every person who shall sell any beer or ale in quantities not less than four gallons and a half or two dozen reputed quart bottles, to be drank or consumed elsewhere than on the premises where sold, shall be deemed a dealer in beer; and every person who shall keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, and sell beer, ale, and cyder, and wines and spirituous liquors, by retail, to be drank and consumed on the premises, shall take out the several licences now by law required, under the same rules, regulations, restrictions, powers, authorities, provisions, penalties, and forfeitures as such licences are now granted and issued under."

Nothing in this act to interfere with the rights of magistrates, trustees, &c. in cities, burghs, and places in Scotland, to collect their local duties on beer and ale.

Sect. 23. "And whereas in the city of Edinburgh, and in other cities, towns, burghs, and places in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, by several statutes heretofore passed, certain rates, impositions, and duties are imposed and collected on beer and ale, to and for the use of the said cities, towns, burghs, and places, and are appropriated and applied to certain purposes specified in the several statutes imposing the same, for the levying and collecting of which said rates, impositions, and duties the charges made by His Majesty's officers for levying and collecting such revenue of Excise, or an abstract thereof under the hands of the officers of Excise, have been available to the magistrates of the city of Edinburgh, and the other cities, towns, burghs, and other places aforesaid, for levying and collecting the said rates, impositions, and duties: and whereas by reason of the duties on beer and ale payable to His Majesty ceasing to be collected under the provisions of this act, the magistrates of the said cities, towns, burghs, and other places will be deprived of the means heretofore used for raising, collecting, and levying the said rates, impositions, and duties; and it is therefore expedient, in order to prevent any injury or loss to any of the said cities, towns, burghs, or places in which such rates, impositions, or duties are payable, to provide means for the due collection and payment thereof; be it therefore enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall affect or be deemed or construed to affect, alter, or in any manner interfere with the right or title of the magistrates of the city of Edinburgh, or of any other city, town, burgh, or place in Scotland, or of any trustees or body corporate, or other person or persons having right by any of the statutes aforesaid to collect, receive, raise, and recover any rates, impositions, or duties now payable on beer or ale within the same; and that in order to the due collection, raising, levying, and recovering thereof, every brewer of beer or ale, liable to the payment of any such rates, impositions, and duties in the city of Edinburgh, or in any other city, town, burgh, or place, shall, from and after the 10th day of October, 1830, at the end of every month make a true and particular entry or return to the magistrates, or the trustees, body corporate, or other person or persons having the right to collect such rates, impositions, and duties within the city, town, burgh, or place in which such brewer shall reside or carry on his brewery, or to such person or persons as the magistrates, trustees, body corporate, or other person or persons having such right shall appoint, of all beer or ale which such brewer shall have brewed or made in that month preceding; and such brewer shall also at the end of every month make a true and particular entry or return to the magistrates or the trustees or body corporate or person or persons having right as aforesaid, or to such other person or persons as shall be appointed in that behalf as aforesaid, of all beer or ale which such brewer shall have sold without the limits of the city, town, burgh, or place in which such brewer shall reside or carry on his brewery, or within which such votes, duties, and impositions shall be payable; and every such entry or return shall, if required by the magistrate or other person or persons aforesaid, be verified on the oath or affirmation (which oath or affirmation any one of the magistrates of the city, town, burgh, or place is hereby authorized and empowered to administer) of the said brewer, or his principal workman or servant; and it shall and may be lawful for the magistrates, trustees, body corporate, or other person or persons having such right as aforesaid, within every city, town, burgh, and place respectively, to collect, recover, levy, raise, and enforce the payment of the said rates, impositions, and duties payable within such city, town, burgh, and place respectively, according to the quantity of beer or ale mentioned in such two several entries or returns, in the manner and by the same means, powers, penalties and forfeitures, and authorities, as they are now empowered to raise, levy, collect, and enforce the same, or as any other rates, impositions, and duties payable within any such city, town, burgh, or place may be raised, levied, collected, and enforced, or by ordinary action in any competent court. Provided always, that all and every brewer and other person and persons shall remain entitled to and shall receive all such allowances and drawbacks, in respect to such rates, impositions, and duties, as they are now entitled to."

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

Sect. 24. "That if any brewer of beer or ale shall neglect or refuse to make any such entry or return, or to verify the same when required so to do, or shall make any false or untrue entry or return, every such brewer shall forfeit and pay the sum of twenty pounds, to be recovered and applied in the same manner and under the same powers, provisions, and authorities as any other penalty or forfeiture may be recovered or applied under any act or acts of parliament granting the rates, impositions, and duties on beer and ale in the city, town, burgh, or place in which such refusal or neglect shall occur, or such false or untrue entry be made."

Penalty on brewers neglecting or refusing to make returns, or making false returns.

By 1 W. IV. c. 64, s. 1, (a) intituled An Act to permit the General Sale of Beer and Cyder by retail in England, "That from and after the 10th day of October, 1830, it shall and may be lawful for any and every person, who shall obtain a licence for that purpose under the provisions of this act, to sell beer, ale, and porter by retail in any part of England, in any house or premises specified in such licence; any thing in any act or acts heretofore made, or in force at the time of the passing of this act, to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

All persons licensed under this act may sell beer by retail.

Sect. 2. "That it shall be lawful for every and any person, being a householder (other than and except such persons as are hereinafter specially excepted), who shall be desirous of selling beer, ale, and porter by retail under the provisions of this act, to apply for and to obtain an Excise licence for that purpose; and in every application for such licence there shall be specified, set forth, and inserted the christian name and surname of the party applying for such licence, and a description of the house or premises in which beer, ale, and porter is intended to be sold by retail by such person, together with the christian names and surnames Parties desirous of retailing beer shall take out a licence.

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

In London, licences shall be granted by the commissioners of Excise, &c.; elsewhere in England, by the collectors and supervisors of Excise.

Licence duty.

No licence be granted to a sheriff's officer or non-householder.

Register of licences.

Licences shall be produced for the inspection of magistrates.

Licence duty shall be under the management of the commissioners of Excise, and carried to the consolidated fund.

and the occupation and residence of the person or persons who shall be proposed as surety or sureties for the party so to be licensed; and any and every such licence which shall be taken out within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London shall be granted under the hands and seals of two or more of the commissioners of Excise for the time being, or of such persons as they the said commissioners of Excise, or the major part of them, for the time being, shall from time to time authorize, employ, or direct for that purpose; and any and every such licence which shall be taken out in any part of England not within the said limits shall be granted under the respective hands and seals of the several collectors and supervisors of Excise within their respective collections and districts; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of Excise, or any two or more of them respectively, and for the person to be authorized, employed, or directed by the said commissioners or the major part of them, and also for all such collectors and supervisors, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required, within ten days after the application shall have been made for the same, and upon execution by the party and his surety or sureties of the bond hereinafter mentioned, and any time after upon the execution of such bond, to grant such licence to the persons who shall apply for the same, the person so applying first paying for such licence a duty of 2*l.* 2*s.*, to be applied and accounted for as hereinafter directed; and every such licence shall be dated on the day when the same shall be granted, and shall expire at the end of twelve calendar months after the day on which such licence shall be dated; and every such licence shall be according to the form in the schedule annexed to this act, and shall be duly registered in the proper department of the Excise. Provided always, that no such licence shall authorize or entitle the party licensed to receive any licence to sell or retail wine or spirits, any thing in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof notwithstanding; and that no such licence shall be granted to any person being a sheriff's officer, or officer executing the legal process of any court of justice, nor to any person not being a householder assessed to the poor-rates in the parish or place in which he shall be licensed to sell beer by retail, and that any licence granted to any such person shall be void to all intents and purposes; and a list or register of every licence so granted, specifying the name and place of abode of every person licensed, and of his sureties respectively, and the name and description of the house mentioned in such licence, shall be kept at the Excise office with respect to all licences granted by the commissioners of Excise, or any person authorized by them, and at the office or dwelling-house of every collector and supervisor of Excise in their and his respective collections and districts; and such list or register shall at all times be produced to and shall be open to the inspection and perusal of any magistrate of the county or place where such licence shall be granted, and where such house shall be situate; and a copy of such list or register shall once in every calendar month be transmitted by every such collector or supervisor to the clerk of the magistrates for the district in which such licence shall be granted; and any copy of or extract from such list or register, which shall or may be at any time required by the clerk to the magistrates, shall be given to him by such collector or supervisor whenever thereto required."

Sect. 3. "That the duty by this act imposed on licences to sell beer by retail shall be under the management of the commissioners of Excise for the time being, and shall and may be respectively raised, levied, collected, answered, paid, and recovered in such and the like manner, and in or by any or either of the general or special means, ways, or methods by which any other duties of Excise on licences are or may be raised, levied, collected, answered, paid, or recovered; and all the moneys arising by the duties by this act imposed and made payable as aforesaid, the necessary charges of raising and accounting for the same excepted, shall from time to time be paid into the receipt of His Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster, and the said money so paid into the receipt of the Exchequer as aforesaid shall be carried to and made part of the consolidated fund of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

Sect. 4. " Provided always, that it shall not be lawful for the commissioners of Excise or any person authorized by them, nor for any collector or supervisor of Excise, to grant or deliver any such licence to any person applying for the same, unless such person shall, before receiving such licence, or at the time of receiving the same, enter into a bond to the commissioners of Excise with one sufficient surety in the penalty of 20*l.* or with two sufficient sureties in the penalty of 10*l.* each, such surety or sureties being the person or persons named in the application of the party requiring the licence, or some other person or persons approved of by the said commissioners or by the person authorized to grant such licences; and such bond shall be executed by such person and his surety or sureties, conditioned for the payment by such person, or his surety or sureties, of any penalty or sum of money not exceeding the amount of such 20*l.* or 10*l.* respectively, which shall be incurred for any offence against this act by the party to whom such licence shall be granted, or for the payment of such sum of 20*l.* or 10*l.* respectively, in case any penalty incurred by such party licensed shall exceed such 20*l.* or 10*l.* respectively; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or the person so authorized by them, or for such collector or supervisor of Excise respectively, to judge of and determine upon the sufficiency of any such surety or sureties. Provided always, that such bond shall not be subject or liable to the payment of any stamp duty whatever; any thing in any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding."

Party requiring licence shall enter into a bond, with sureties, for payment of penalties.

Sect. 5. " Provided always, that no person licensed to sell beer by retail under the provisions of this act, and that no person not being a householder assessed to and paying the poor's rates within the parish in which the person licensed shall be resident, shall be deemed competent to be or shall be accepted as a surety in any such bond as aforesaid."

No person licensed to sell beer shall be competent to be a surety.

Sect. 6. " That every person who shall be licensed to sell beer, ale, and porter by retail under the provisions of this act shall cause to be painted, in letters three inches at least in length, in white upon a black ground, or in black upon a white ground, publicly visible and legible, upon a board to be placed over the door of the house or premises in which such person shall be licensed to sell beer by retail, the christian and surname of the persons mentioned in such licence, at full length, together with the words ' licensed to sell beer by retail ;' and every such person shall preserve and keep up such name and words so painted as aforesaid during all the time that such person shall continue so licensed, upon pain that every person in any respect making default herein shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of 10*l.*"

Persons licensed to retail beer shall put up descriptive boards.

Sect. 7. " That no person shall sell any beer by retail under the provisions of this act at any time after the expiration of any licence granted under this act, nor in any house or place not specified in such licence. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for any person so licensed to take out a fresh retail licence for the selling beer by retail before the expiration of any former retail licence, and so from year to year; and if any person, not being duly licensed to sell beer as the keeper of a common inn, ale-house, or victualling-house, shall sell any beer by retail without having an Excise retail licence in force authorizing such person so to do, or after the expiration of any such licence, or without renewing such licence in manner aforesaid, or in any house or place not specified in such licence, or if any such person so licensed shall deal in or retail any wine or spirits, every such person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l.*"

No person shall sell beer after expiration of his licence.

Licence may be renewed yearly.

Penalty on selling without licence, 20*l.*

Sect. 8. " That the said last-mentioned fine, penalty, or forfeiture of 20*l.* shall and may be sued for, recovered, levied, mitigated, and distributed by such ways, means, and methods as any fine, penalty, or forfeiture may be sued for, recovered, levied, mitigated, or distributed by any law or laws of Excise; and that one moiety of every such fine, penalty, or forfeiture shall be to His Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to him or them who shall inform, discover, or sue for the same."

Sect. 9. "That all the powers and authorities, directions, rules, regulations, methods, penalties, forfeitures, clauses, matters, and things, which in and by an act made in the eighth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled An act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to the Collection and Management of the Revenue of Excise throughout Great Britain and Ireland, or by any other law now in force relating to His Majesty's revenue of Excise, are provided and established for enforcing, regulating, managing, raising, levying, collecting, paying, mitigating, recovering, adjudging, or distributing the penalties thereby imposed, and all matters and things therein relating to Excise licences (except where otherwise provided by this act, or repugnant thereto), shall and may be exercised, practised, applied, used, and put in execution in and for the enforcing, regulating, managing, raising, levying, collecting, paying, mitigating, recovering, adjudging, or distributing the said penalty of twenty pounds, and all matters and things relating to the said licences hereby authorized and required to be granted as aforesaid, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if all and every the said powers, authorities, directions, rules, regulations, methods, penalties, forfeitures, clauses, matters, and things were particularly repeated and re-enacted in this present act; any thing hereinafter contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Proviso for partners.

Licence shall not extend to any other house.

Houses to be closed by order of justices in cases of riot, &c.

Sect. 10. "Provided always, that persons trading in partnership, and in one house or premises only, shall not be obliged to take out more than one licence in any one year, for selling any beer by retail under the provisions of this act: provided also, that no one licence which shall be granted by virtue of this act shall authorize or empower any person or persons to sell any beer, ale, or porter, under the provisions of this act, in any house or place other than the house or place mentioned in such licence for selling beer, ale, and porter by retail under the provisions of this act, and in respect whereof such licence shall be granted."

Sect. 11. "That it shall be lawful for any one justice acting for any county or place where any riot or tumult shall happen, or for any two or more justices where any riot or tumult may be expected to take place, to order or direct that every person licensed under this act, and keeping any house, situate within their respective jurisdictions, in or near the place where such riot or tumult shall happen or be expected to take place, shall close his house at any time which such justice or justices shall order or direct; and every such person who shall keep open his house at or after any hour at which such justices shall have so ordered or directed such house to be closed shall be taken and deemed to have not maintained good order and rule therein, and to be guilty of an offence against the tenor of the licence granted to such person."

Standard measures to be used.

Sect. 12. "That every person under this act licensed to sell beer by retail shall sell or otherwise dispose of all such beer by retail (except in quantities less than a half pint) by the gallon, quart, pint, or half pint measure sized according to the standard, and shall also retail the same in a vessel sized according to such standard; and in default thereof he shall for every such offence forfeit the illegal measure, and pay a sum not exceeding forty shillings, together with the costs of the conviction, to be recovered, within thirty days next after that on which such offence was committed, before two justices; and such penalty shall be over and above all penalties to which the offender may be liable under any other act."

Penalty on retailers permitting drunken-

Sect. 13. "That every seller of beer, ale, and porter by retail, having a licence under the provisions of this act, who shall permit any person or persons to be guilty of drunkenness or disorderly conduct in the house or premises mentioned in such licence, shall for every such offence forfeit the respective sums following; and every person who shall in any way transgress or neglect, or shall be a party in transgressing or neglecting, the conditions and provisions specified in such licence, or shall allow such conditions or provisions to be in any way transgressed or neglected, in the house or premises so licensed, shall be deemed guilty of disorderly conduct; and every person so licensed who shall permit any such disorderly conduct shall for the first offence forfeit any such sum not less than forty shillings nor more than five pounds, as the justices before whom such retailer shall be convicted of such offence shall adjudge; and for the second such offence, any sum not less than five pounds nor more than ten pounds; and for the third such offence, any sum not less than twenty pounds nor more than fifty pounds; and it shall be lawful for the justices before whom any such conviction for such third offence shall take place to adjudge, if they shall so think fit, that such offender shall be disqualified from selling beer by retail for the space of two years next ensuing such conviction, and also (if they shall so think fit) to adjudge that no beer shall be sold by retail by any person in the house or premises mentioned in the licence of such offender; and if any person so licensed as aforesaid shall knowingly sell any beer, ale, or porter made otherwise than from malt and hops, or shall mix or cause to be mixed any drugs or other pernicious ingredients with any beer sold in his house or premises, or shall fraudulently dilute or in any way adulterate any such beer, such offender shall for the first offence forfeit any sum not less than ten pounds nor more than twenty pounds, as the justices before whom such offender shall be convicted of such offence shall adjudge; and for the second such offence such offender shall be adjudged to be disqualified from selling beer, ale, or porter by retail for the term of two years, or to forfeit any sum of money not less than twenty pounds nor more than fifty pounds, at the discretion of the justices before whom such offender shall be adjudged guilty of such second offence; and if any offender convicted of such offence as last aforesaid shall during such term of two years sell any beer, ale, or porter by retail, either in the house and premises mentioned in the licence of such offender, or in any other place, he shall forfeit any sum not less than twenty-five pounds nor more than fifty pounds, and shall be subject to a like penalty at any and every house or place where he shall commit such offence; and if any person shall at any time, during any term in which it shall not be lawful for beer to be sold by retail on the premises of any offender, sell any beer by retail on such premises, knowing that it was not lawful to be sold, such offender shall forfeit any sum not less than ten pounds nor more than twenty pounds, as the convicting justices shall adjudge."

sum of forty shillings for every offence; and every separate sale shall be deemed a separate offence."

Sect. 15. "That all penalties under this act, save and except the penalty hereinbefore mentioned for selling beer by any person not duly licensed, shall and may be recovered upon the information of any person whomsoever before two justices acting in petty sessions; and that every such penalty shall be prosecuted and proceeded for within three calendar months next after the commission of the offence in respect of which such penalty shall be incurred; and every person licensed under this act who shall be convicted, before two justices so acting in and for the division or place in which shall be situate the house kept or theretofore kept by such person, of any offence against the tenor of the licence to him granted under this act, or of any offence for which any penalty is imposed by this act, shall, unless proof be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been theretofore convicted before two justices within the space of twelve calendar months next preceding of some offence against the tenor of his licence or against this act, be adjudged by such justices to be guilty of a first offence against the provisions of this act, and to forfeit and pay any penalty by this act imposed for such offence, or if no specific penalty be imposed for such offence, then any sum not exceeding 5*l.*, together with the costs of the conviction; and if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been previously convicted before two justices within the space of twelve calendar months next preceding of one such offence only, such person shall be adjudged by such justices to be guilty of a second offence against the provisions of this act, and to forfeit and pay any penalty by this act imposed for such offence, or if no specific penalty be so imposed, then any sum not exceeding 10*l.*, together with the costs of the conviction; and if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been previously convicted before two justices within the space of the eighteen calendar months next preceding of two such separate offences, and if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of the justices that such person so charged is guilty of the offence charged against him, such person shall be adjudged to be guilty of a third offence against the provisions of this act, and to forfeit and pay any penalty imposed by this act in respect of such offence; or if no such specific penalty shall be imposed, then to forfeit and pay the sum of 50*l.*, together with the costs of the conviction."

Appeal to the quarter sessions.

Sect. 16. "Provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for the party convicted of any such third offence to appeal to the general sessions or quarter sessions of the peace then next ensuing, unless such sessions shall be held within twelve days next after such conviction, and in that case to the then next subsequent sessions; and in such case the party so convicted shall before such justices so convicting forthwith enter into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, personally to appear at the said general session or quarter session, and to abide the judgment of the Court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the Court awarded; which recognizances such justices are hereby authorized to require and take; or, in failure of the party convicted entering into such recognizance, such conviction shall remain good and valid to all intents and purposes; and the said justices who shall take such recognizance from the party convicted are also hereby required to bind the person who shall make such charge in a recognizance to appear at such general or quarter sessions as aforesaid, then and there to give evidence against the person so charged, and in like manner to bind any other person who shall have any knowledge of the circumstances of such offence; and it shall be lawful for the said Court of general session or quarter session to adjudge such person to be guilty of any such third offence against the provisions of this act, as the case may be, and such adjudication shall be final to all intents and purposes; and it shall be lawful for such Court of general session or quarter session to punish such offender by fine not exceeding the sum of 100*l.*, together with the costs of such appeal, or to adjudge the licence granted to and held by or on behalf of such offender to be forfeited and void, or to adjudge that no beer shall be sold by retail in the house or premises mentioned in the licence of such offender for the term of two years from the date of such adjudication, or to punish such offender by such fine as aforesaid, and to adjudge such premises to be disqualified for the sale of beer as aforesaid, and such licence to be forfeited and void; and if such licence shall be adjudged to be forfeited and void, it shall thenceforth be void accordingly; and whenever in such case or in any other case the licence of such offender shall be adjudged to be void, such offender shall from and after such adjudication be deemed and taken to be incapable of selling beer, ale, or porter by retail, in any house kept by him, for the space of two years, to be computed from the time of such adjudication; and any licence granted to such person during such term shall be void to all intents and purposes."

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

Sect. 17. "That whenever it shall happen that any appeal respecting which any recognizance shall be entered into in pursuance of this act shall be dismissed, or that the conviction appealed against shall be affirmed, or that such appeal shall be abandoned, it shall be lawful for the Court to whom such appeal shall have been made or intended to be made, and such Court is hereby required, to adjudge and order that the party so having appealed or having entered into such recognizance shall pay to the justices before whom such recognizance shall have been entered into, or to whomsoever they shall appoint, such sum by way of costs as shall in the opinion of such Court be sufficient to indemnify such justices from all costs and charges whatsoever to which such justices may have been put in consequence of the intention or declared intention of such party to appeal; and if such party shall refuse or neglect to pay forthwith such sum, it shall be lawful for the said Court to adjudge and order that the party so refusing or neglecting shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to remain until such sum be paid, or for any time not exceeding six calendar months, unless such sum be sooner paid; and in every case in which the conviction so appealed against shall be reversed, it shall be lawful for such Court (if it shall think fit) to adjudge and order that the treasurer of the county or place in and for which such justices whose judgment shall have been so reversed shall have acted on the occasion when they shall have given such judgment, shall pay to such justices, or whomsoever they shall appoint, such sum as shall in the opinion of such Court be sufficient to indemnify such justices from all costs and charges whatsoever to which such justices may have been so put; and the said treasurer is hereby authorized to pay the same, which shall be allowed to him in his accounts."

Court to adjudge costs of appeal in certain cases.

Sect. 18. "That in every case in which any appeal shall be made, by any person convicted of any offence under the provisions of this act, to the general session or quarter session, it shall be lawful for the convicting justices, if no other fit and proper person shall appear to prosecute such charge and to carry on such proceedings as may be necessary to obtain at such session an adjudication thereon, to order that the constable or other peace officer of the parish or place in which shall be situate the house kept by the person charged shall carry on all proceedings necessary to obtain such adjudication as aforesaid, and to bind such constable or other peace officer in a sufficient recognizance so to do; and it shall be lawful for the justices before whom such offender shall have been convicted to order the treasurer of the county or place in and for which such justices shall then act to pay to such constable or other peace officer, and to the witness or witnesses on his behalf, such sum or sums of money as to the Court shall appear to be sufficient to reimburse such constable or other peace officer, and such witness or witnesses respectively, the expenses that he or they shall have been severally put to in and about such prosecution, which order the clerk of the peace is hereby directed and required forthwith to make out and to deliver to such constable or other peace officer, or to such witness or witnesses; and the said treasurer is hereby authorized and required, upon sight of such order, forthwith to pay to such constable or other peace officer, or other person authorized to receive the same, such money as aforesaid, and the said treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

Sect. 19. "That in case any person licensed under this act shall be convicted of any offence against this act, and shall not pay the penalty incurred by such conviction, it shall be lawful for the justices convicting such offender, after the expiration of one calendar month next after such conviction, to summon any surety or sureties named in the bond entered into and executed by such person and his surety or sureties at the time of obtaining his licence, to appear before the said justices, and show cause why the penalty mentioned in such bond should not be paid by such surety or sureties, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to pay any penalty incurred by the party licensed, or to satisfy so much of such penalty so incurred as shall remain unpaid; and in case any such surety shall not show any sufficient cause to the contrary, it shall be lawful for such justices to adjudge that such penalty, if not paid, or so much thereof as aforesaid, shall be paid by such surety within fourteen days; and in case such penalty, or so much thereof as aforesaid, shall not be paid within fourteen days, it shall be lawful for such justices, if they shall think fit, to issue their warrant, and to levy the amount of such penalty, or so much thereof as aforesaid, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such surety, together with the costs of such distress and sale; and the certificate of the commissioners of Excise, or their officer, or other persons by this act authorized to grant any licence, of the date of such bond, and the names and descriptions of the surety or sureties in such bond, shall be sufficient evidence of such bond, and of the contents and execution thereof, against any surety or sureties, in any proceedings under this act."

Sect. 20. "That any person summoned as a witness to give evidence before any justices or sessions touching any of the matters aforesaid, either on the part of the complainant or of the person accused, who shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place for that purpose appointed, and who shall not make such reasonable excuse for such neglect or refusal as shall be admitted and allowed by such justices or sessions, or who appearing shall refuse to be examined on oath or affirmation and give evidence, shall on conviction before such justices forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding 10*l*."

Sect. 21. "That in every case in which under the authority of this act any justices shall adjudge that any offender shall pay or cause to be paid any penalty, and such offender shall refuse or neglect, within seven days after his conviction, to pay such penalty, and any costs which shall have been duly assessed and ascertained by such justices, it shall be lawful for such justices, if they shall think fit, to issue their warrant, and to levy the amount of such penalty and costs by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such offender, together with the costs of such distress and sale; and in every such case such offender, if in custody at the time that such warrant shall be so issued, shall be forthwith discharged; but if it shall appear to such justices that the goods and chattels of such offender are not sufficient whereon to levy such distress, together with the costs of such distress and sale, it shall be lawful for such justices to commit the offender to the common gaol or to the house of correction of the county or place for which such justices shall be then acting, for any term not exceeding one calendar month if the penalty shall not be above 5*l*., for any term not exceeding three calendar months if the penalty shall be above 5*l*. and shall not be more than 10*l*., and for any term not exceeding six calendar months if the penalty shall be above 10*l*. Provided nevertheless, that whenever such offender shall have been committed to the common gaol or house of correction in consequence of his not having duly paid such penalty and costs, if such offender shall pay or cause to be paid to the gaoler or keeper of the house of correction, or to whomsoever such justices shall have appointed, the penalty imposed, and costs, together with all the costs of the apprehension of him and of the conveyance of him to the said gaol or house of correction, at any time previous to the expiration of the time for which such offender shall so have been committed, such offender shall be forthwith discharged."

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

Sect. 22. "That any justices before whom any penalty shall be recovered under the provisions of this act shall award, if they shall think fit, any portion of the same, not in any case exceeding one moiety thereof, to the use of the prosecutor; and the remainder, or in case no part of such penalty shall be awarded to the prosecutor, then the whole of such penalty, shall be awarded to be paid and shall be paid to the treasurer of the county within which such offence shall be committed, to be applied by the said treasurer towards defraying the expenses of such county, and in aid of the county rates of such county."

Application of penalties.

Sect. 23. "That whenever at any session for any liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate, there shall not be present at least two justices acting in and for any such liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate, it shall be lawful for the justices acting in and for the county or counties adjoining to such liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate, to act within such liberty or place, and with the justice or justices thereof who shall be present at any such sessions as aforesaid, for the purpose of hearing complaints as to offences against this act; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

If justices of liberties, &c. do not attend at sessions, the county justices may act.

Sect. 24. "Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to give the justices of the county or any division thereof any power or authority for the putting of the provisions of this act in execution within any of the cinque ports or either of the two ancient towns, or any of the corporate or other members or liberties of the cinque ports or two ancient towns; but that it shall be lawful for the justices of and for each of the principal cinque ports and two ancient towns, and the liberties thereof, and for the justices of and for the liberties thereof, and the corporate members, to act within the same respectively as they have been accustomed, and for them or any of them to act within each of the corporate members immediately belonging or subordinate to such principal cinque port or ancient town, with the justice or justices of each such corporate member, for the purpose of hearing complaints as to offences against this act in all such cases in which the justices of the county are hereinbefore empowered or authorized to act with the justice or justices of any liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate."

Powers hereby given to justices of counties not to extend to the cinque ports.

Sect. 25. "And in order to prevent frivolous and vexatious appeals, be it further enacted, that a conviction in the form or to the effect following, mutatis mutandis, as the case may be, shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, without stating the case or the facts or evidence in any more particular manner; (that is to say,)

Form of conviction.

Be it remembered, that on this                      day of                      , in the year                      , A. B. of                      was duly convicted before us, C. D. and E. F., two of His Majesty's justices of the peace in petty sessions for the                      of                      , for that [here state the offence, and the time and place when committed], whereby the said A. B. has forfeited the sum of                      , this being adjudged to be the first [or second, or third] offence [as the case shall happen to be] against the provisions of an act to permit the general sale of beer and cyder by retail in England, besides the costs of this conviction, which we the said justices do hereby assess at the sum of                      , pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided. Given under our hands and seals, the day and year above written."

Sect. 27. "That no conviction under this act, nor any adjudication made upon appeal therefrom, shall be quashed for want of form, nor shall be removed by writ of certiorari or otherwise into any of His Majesty's superior Courts of Record; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and that there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same."

Sect. 28. "That every action against any justice, constable, or other person, for or on account of any matter or thing whatsoever done or commanded by him in the execution of his duty or office under this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months after the cause of action or complaint shall have arisen, and not afterwards; and if any person shall be sued for any matter or thing which he shall have done in the execution of this act, he may plead the general issue and give the special matter in evidence."

Sect. 29. "Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to alter or in any manner to affect any of the rights or privileges of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or any of the powers and authorities vested by charter or otherwise in the chancellors, masters, and scholars of the said universities, and their successors, or in the master, wardens, freemen, and commonalty of the vintners of the city of London, but not to extend to those freemen of the said company of vintners who have obtained the same by redemption only; nor in any way to affect any licence to the keeper of any inn, alehouse, or victualling house, unless in so far as relates to the sale of beer by retail; nor to prohibit any person from selling beer in booths or other places at the time and within the limits of the ground or place in or upon which is holden any lawful fair, in like manner as such person was authorized to do before the passing of this act."

Sect. 30. "And whereas it is expedient that the sale of cyder and perry by retail should be licensed in like manner, and should be subject to the like regulations as the sale of beer; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the 10th day of October, 1830, it shall be lawful for any person desirous of selling cyder and perry by retail to apply for and to obtain an Excise licence for that purpose, under the same regulations in all respects (except as hereinafter is otherwise provided) as are in this act prescribed and contained with respect to persons desirous of selling beer, ale, and porter by retail, and of being licensed for that purpose; and that all the clauses, regulations, and provisions in this act contained relating to the sale of beer by retail, and to the licences for selling the same, and to the sureties for the parties licensed, and to the conduct of the parties licensed, and to all other matters whatever respecting the selling of beer by retail, and the retailers thereof, and the licences for the same, and the houses where the same are sold, and the penalties against the parties licensed, shall be taken and deemed to be applicable to the sale of cyder and perry by retail, and to licences for the same, and to the sellers of cyder and perry by retail, as if cyder and perry, and the retailers thereof, were expressly mentioned and specified in and throughout this act. Provided always, that the person receiving a licence for selling cyder or perry by retail shall pay for such licence a duty of 1*l.* 1*s.* and no more, instead of the duty of 2*l.* 2*s.* hereinbefore mentioned, and which said duty of 1*l.* 1*s.* shall be applied in like manner as the said duty of 2*l.* 2*s.* is hereinbefore directed to be applied; and every such licence shall be according to the form in the schedule annexed to this act. Provided also, that any person licensed under this act to sell beer by retail may sell also cyder and perry by retail without receiving a separate licence for that purpose; but that no person licensed to sell cyder and perry by retail, and paying for such licence, as herein provided, the sum of 1*l.* 1*s.*, shall be at liberty to sell beer by retail."

1. Ale, Beer, and Brewers.

Persons licensed to retail beer may also retail cyder.

Sect. 31. "Provided always, that any and every covenant or clause of restriction contained in any lease or contract between any landlord and tenant, whereby the trade or business of a victualler or publican is prohibited from being carried on in any house, building, or place mentioned or comprised in such lease or contract, or whereby any such house, building, or place is prohibited from being used as a public house or ale-house, shall apply and extend, and shall be construed to apply and extend, to every person who shall be licensed to sell beer, ale, or porter, or cyder or perry, under the provisions of this act, and to any and every house specified and mentioned in the licence granted to such person."

Covenants against houses, &c. being used as public houses, to extend to persons licensed under this act.

Sect. 32. "And in order to remove doubts as to the meaning of certain words in this act, be it enacted, that the word 'justice' shall be deemed to mean justice of the peace; and that the word 'person,' and the word 'party,' shall be deemed to include any number of persons and parties; and that the word 'licence,' and the word 'day,' and the word 'time,' and the word 'house,' and the word 'place,' shall each be deemed to include any number of licences, days, times, houses, or places; and that the word 'beer' shall in all cases be deemed to include beer, ale, and porter; and that the word 'cyder,' shall in all cases be deemed to include cyder and perry; and that the word 'county,' and the words 'county or place,' shall be deemed severally to include any county, riding, division of the county of Lincoln, hundred, division of a county, liberty, division of a liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, cinque port, or town corporate; and the words 'division or place,' shall be deemed to include any division of a county or riding, liberty, division of a liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, cinque port, or town corporate; and that the words 'parish or place' shall be deemed to include any township, hamlet, tithing, vill, extra-parochial place, or any place maintaining its own poor; and that the word 'penalty' shall be deemed to include any fine, penalty, or forfeiture of a pecuniary nature; and that the meaning of the several words in this act shall not be restricted, although the same may be subsequently referred to in the singular number or masculine gender only."

Rules for the interpretation of this act.

"FORM OF LICENCE.

"We the undersigned, being _____ of the commissioners of the Excise [or I the undersigned, being a person authorized and employed by the commissioners of Excise to grant licences for selling beer [or cyder and perry, as the case may require,] by retail, or being a collector or supervisor of Excise for the collection or district of _____], do hereby authorize and empower A. L., now being a householder, and dwelling at _____, in the parish of _____, within the limits of the chief office of Excise [or within the limits of the said collection or district], to sell beer, ale, and porter [or cyder and perry] by retail in the dwelling-house of the said A. L. and in the premises thereunto belonging, the said A. L. having duly entered into a bond, with D. S. of _____ and E. S. of _____ as his surety [or sureties], pursuant to the act in such case made: provided, and upon condition, that he or she [does not sell any beer, ale, or porter made otherwise than from malt and hops] [omit these words in licences to retail cyder and perry]; nor mix or cause to be mixed any drugs or other pernicious ingredients in any beer, ale, or porter [or in any cyder or perry]; nor fraudulently dilute, deteriorate, or adulterate any beer, ale, or porter [or any cyder or perry]; nor sell any beer, ale, or porter [or any cyder or perry], knowing the same to have been fraudulently diluted, deteriorated, or adulterated; nor use, in selling any beer, ale, or porter [or any cyder or perry], any measures which are not of the legal standard; nor wilfully or knowingly per-

By 42 Geo. III., c. 93, s. 14, and 43 Geo. III., c. 130, s. 1. "Every person who shall exercise the trade of an auctioneer or seller by commission within the limits of the chief office in London, shall, when he receives his licence, give bond to the king, with two sureties, himself in 1000*l.* and his sureties in 200*l.* each (out of the bills the bond to be in 50*l.* penalty), that he will account for sales and pay the duty as hereinafter directed."

"And every person exercising the said trade in any part of Great Britain without the said limits shall give security by bond as aforesaid; himself in 500*l.*, and two securities in 50*l.* each." 19 Geo. III., c. 56, s. 8. 42 Geo. III., c. 93, s. 15.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 9. (Ante, 251.) "Auctioneers continue liable to give this security, although other persons need not."

Duties payable on sales by auction. (b)

55 Geo. III., c. 142. "For every 20*s.* of the purchase-money £. s. d. arising or payable by virtue of any sale at auction in Great Britain, for the benefit of the growers or first purchasers respectively, of any sheep's wool, the growth or produce of any part of the united kingdom . . . . . 0 0 2"

43 Geo. III., c. 69. 6*d.*—45 Geo. III., c. 30. 1*d.*—"For every 20*s.* of the purchase-money arising or payable by virtue of any sale at auction in Great Britain, of any interest, in pos-

(a) If the bond be forfeited under 19 Geo. III., c. 57, s. 7, the penalty is a debt, and not merely a security to compel an account, R. v. Christy, 2 Anstr. 586; and the Court of Exchequer refused to release on terms, id. ibid.; and the king is not affected by 4 Anne, c. 16, as to admit of a plea of payment after the day, R. v. Ellis, 1 Price, 23.

(b) What is a sale or not. Although the words in 43 Geo. III., c. 69, and 45 Geo. III., c. 30, impose the duty on every 20*s.* of the purchase-money, "arising or payable by virtue of any sale, &c.," yet as the 19 Geo. III., c. 56, s. 6, declares that the duties shall be a charge upon the auctioneer "immediately upon knocking down the hammer, or other closing of the bidding." There are many cases in which the duty may attach, although the sale cannot, or may not, be afterwards enforced. Thus, where a drunken man or an insolvent was declared the bidder, or a person refused to sign a contract sufficient to take the case out of the statute against frauds, the auctioneer is nevertheless liable to pay the duty. This was to prevent fraud and connivance. For as to any question between seller and buyer, it was determined, Payne v. Cave, 3 Term. R. 148, that a bidder at an auction under the usual conditions, that the highest bidder shall be the purchaser, may retract his bidding any time before the hammer is down; and see 1 Bla. R. 601; Cook v. Orley, 3 T. R. 653; 4 Bing. 658; 16 East, 45.

Where an auctioneer knocked down a lot to a bidder, but did not write down his name as the purchaser, and such person afterwards refused to complete the purchase, and it could not be enforced against him, it was held, that the auctioneer could not recover the duty which he had paid to government on the sale from such bidder, which, by the conditions, was to be paid by the purchaser, 1 M'Clel. Rep. 25; and semble he could not recover the duty from the vendor, ib. The acts apply to every mode of sale whereby the highest bidder is to be deemed the purchaser. See several instances, Sugden. V. & P., 8th ed., 16, 17, 18.

"No duty shall be paid for piece goods sold by auction wove or fabricated in this kingdom, which shall be sold entire in the piece or quantity as taken from the loom, and in lots of the price of 20*l.* or upwards; and so as the same be sold in no other than entered places, and openly shown and exposed at such sale."

Sect. 3. "And the auctioneer shall, besides the bond given on receiving his licence, give a further bond in 5000*l.*, with two sureties, that he will, within 14 days after every such sale, deliver an account thereof at the next Excise-office, and will not sell by auction any goods woven out of this kingdom, or woven in this kingdom, which shall not be sold in the entire piece, without payment of the proper duty."

By 41 Geo. III., U. K., c. 91, s. 8. "All corn and grain of every sort, flour and meal, and all beef, pork, hams, bacon, cheese, and butter imported into Great Britain shall be free of the duty on the first sale thereof by auction on account of the importer; so as the same be entered at some

(a) See Sugden. V. & P. 8th ed., 13. The sale by auction of assignments of dock rates, being a charge upon the docks, is the sale of an interest in land, and liable only to the duty of 7*d.* in the pound. Trustees under an act of parliament are liable to the duty, R. v. Warmesley, 8 Price, R. 180. The same point ruled as to sale by auctions of bonds, for securing money borrowed on parish rates, The King v. Boot, 3 Price, 341.

Where an agent of the owner at an auction for the sale of an estate put it up in so many lots at certain prices, and no person bidding for the same, he put it up again in fewer lots at other certain prices; and still no person bidding, he put it up altogether in one lot at a certain price, and on no person's bidding the estate was withdrawn from sale; it was held that this was not a bidding of the owner by an agent, so as to subject the party to the auction duty for want of a notice in writing to the auctioneer (previous to the auction) of such agency as required by the above statutes, in order to excuse the owner from the payment of the auction duty. Cruao v. Crisp, 3 East, 337. Note.—This decision was on 19 Geo. III., c. 56, s. 12; and the 42 Geo. III., c. 93, was not adverted to.

But notwithstanding this case, it has been doubted whether, under such circumstances, the mention of an upset price, as it is termed, and then withdrawing the property from sale, does not make the vender a buyer in of the property, although there is not another bidder. Walker's case, 1 Dow. Rep. 114. Where property was put up at a certain price, and the agent who attended at the sale, finding that no bidder presented himself, stated to the persons assembled, that he was ready to treat for the disposal of the estate by private contract, and went into a private room with several of the company, and several offers being made, he engaged that the highest should be accepted, which was accepted accordingly; it was determined that a sale by auction had taken place within the meaning of the statute. Id. ibid. And where a female auctioneer sold an estate, and was silent all the time, but rewarded each bidder with a glass of brandy, and the person who had the last glass had the property, this was held a sale by auction. Id. ibid. See *Sugden. sale not having been completed within twelve calendar months after the sale, if rendered void within that time, or otherwise within three months after the discovery of the vender having no title, (28 Geo. III. c. 37, s. 19, post, 363), and upon such proof being shown to the collector, the duty will be returned. But this only applies where vender had no title and no power to sell, and when the vender might produce a title, but refuses, then no return of duty can be obtained, ex relatione Mr. Carr, solicitor to the Excise, A. D. 1828. See also Sugd. V. & P. 8th edit. 20. where it is stated that the Commissioners of Excise will not allow the duty unless they think that the vender has used his utmost exertions to make a good title. An appeal however lies from the judgment of the Commissioners, but as the king never pays costs they fall on the vender, and in many cases would amount to more than the duty itself. Id. ibid.

Consequences of employing puffers.

These exceptions are merely revenue regulations, and do not, as between vender and purchaser, necessarily legalize the secret employment of puffers at a sale; and secret puffing will in some cases vitiate a sale.

The following valuable observations on this subject are from Sugden's Law of Vender and Purchaser, 8th ed. pp. 20-27.

"In Beawell v. Christie, (11. 16 Geo. III.; Cowp. 395), Lord Mansfield and the other judges of B. R. followed the rule of the civil law, and treated a private bidding, by or on the behalf of the vender, as a fraud; but the legislature, by the subsequent statutes, imposing a duty on sales of estates by auction, seems to have been of a different opinion, and even to have sanctioned it. Lord Rosslyn, who was present at the making of the act, remarked, in the case of Conolly v. Parsons, that (see 3 Ves. jun. 628) the acts of parliament go upon its being an usual thing and a fair thing for the owner to bid. The pressure, when the tax was imposed, was by embarrassing people who chose to dispose of their goods by auction, if they chose to be purchasers, by the tax falling upon them. His lordship added, that he thought it would have occurred either to Lord Thurlow or to him, when the exception in favour of the owner was proposed, that the case would not exist, as the owner could not be a bidder; or that, for his attempting to do what he could not by law, it would be just that he should pay the duty. It was very wrong to the public to let that clause stand, if at the time it was understood that the owner bidding was doing an illegal thing. The acts do not require an open notice, but only a private notice to the auctioneer, and an oath to prevent the setting up a bidding for the owner that the bidder might evade paying the duty.

"Lord Kenyon, however, in the case of Howard v. Castle, where the purchaser was the only real bidder, and there were several puffers (36 Geo. III.; 6 Term Rep. 642. See Twining v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 326; and see 3 Term Rep. 93, 95.), clearly coincided with Lord Mansfield's opinion, and held, that unless it was publicly known that the owner intended to bid, it was a fraud upon the purchaser, and consequently no action would lie against him for non-performance of his agreement. The acts of parliament, he thought, did not intend to interfere with this point, but to leave the civil rights of mankind to be judged of as they were before. And Grose, J., also expressed his opinion, that the doctrine was not in the least impeached by the acts of parliament.

"But in the case of Conolly v. Parsons (3 Ves. jun. 626, n.), Lord Rosslyn said, he fancied the foregoing case turned on the circumstance that there was no real bidder; and the person refused instantly. It was one of those trap auctions which are so frequent in the city. The reasoning went large, certainly, and did not at all convince him. He said, he should wish it to undergo a re-consideration; for if it was law, it would reduce every thing to a Dutch auction, by bidding downwards. He felt vast difficulty to compass the reasoning, that a person does not follow his own judgment because other persons bid; that the judgment of one person is deluded and influenced by the biddings of others. The facts of the case of Conolly v. Parsons do not appear in the report; but I learn, that there was a contest between real bidders, after the person employed to bid on the part of the venders had desisted from bidding. The suit was compromised by the purchaser paying a considerable sum of money to the vender to release him from the contract; and consequently Lord Rosslyn did not give judgment; but it seems he was clearly of opinion that the sale was valid.

"And in the later case of Bramley v. Alt, (3 Ves. jun. 620.), where an estate was put up to sale by public auction, and an agent for the vender bid to 75*l.* an acre, without public notice of his intention to do so; and after a contest with real bidders the estate was bought at 101*l.* 17*s.* an acre; Lord Alvanley, then master of the rolls, decreed a specific performance with costs. And he concurred with Lord Rosslyn in considering the case of Howard v. Castle only as a decision, that where all the bidders except the purchaser are puffers, the sale shall be void.

"In the last case on this subject, (Smith v. Clarke, 12 Ves. jun. 477.), it appeared, that assignees of a bankrupt had put up the estate to sale by auction. It was proved that a bidder was employed on their parts to bid up to, but not to exceed, 750*l.*, the sum for which the estate was actually sold. The master of the rolls held, that the assignees had not committed any fraud; they did not employ the bidder for the purpose, generally, of enhancing the price, but merely to prevent a sale at an undervalue, and they stated, previously, what they conceived to be the true value, below which the lot ought not to be sold. His honour treated the case of Howard v. Castle as having proceeded on the ground of plain and direct fraud; and said, that in a similar case he should come to a similar conclusion.

"Upon the whole, then, it is clearly settled, that one bidder may be privately appointed by the owner in order to prevent the estate from being sold at an undervalue. And it has been decided, that if there were real bidders at a sale, it must be supported, although the bidding immediately preceding that of the purchaser was fictitious; (Smith v. Clarke, 12 Ves. jun. 477.), and where public notice has been given, the contract will be binding on the purchaser, although there was no contest between real bidders; but only the purchaser and the person employed to bid, bid against each other. (Oldfield v. Round, 5 Ves. jun. 508.) It should seem that the rule would be the same, even where public notice had not been given, provided the bidder was appointed only to protect the vender's interest.

"But it seems, that where the person is employed, not for the defensive precaution, with a view to prevent a sale at an undervalue, but to take advantage of the eagerness of the bidders to screw up the price, that will be deemed a fraud. (See 12 Ves. jun. 483. In Fitzgerald v. Forster, 31st July, 1813, the vice-chancellor seemed rather to be of opinion that the appointment of one puffer was, in no case, bad; but see Crowder v. Austin, 3 Bing. 368, contra.)

"Neither do the cases authorize the vender to appoint more than one person on his behalf. It seems highly proper that a vender should be permitted to appoint a person to guard his interests against the intrigues of bidders; but it does not follow that he may appoint more than one. The only possible object of such a proceeding is fraud. It is simply a mock auction; and, notwithstanding Lord Rosslyn's impression, it is universally felt and acknowledged, that the judgments of most men are deluded and influenced by the biddings of others. As far as any aid is sought from the auction-duty acts, in support of private biddings on behalf of the owner, it is clear that they do not authorize or sanction the appointment of more than one person. In the report of Conolly v. Parsons it is stated, that persons were employed to bid, and did bid, for the venders; but the fact is, that one person only was employed by them, and actually bid on their behalf. The master of the rolls observed, in the late case of Smith v. Clarke, that he did not see, that if several bidders were employed by the vender, in that case, a Court of equity would compel the purchaser to carry the agreement into execution; for that must be done merely to enhance the price. It was not necessary for the defensive purpose of protection against a sale at an undervalue. (See 12 Ves. jun. 483; and see 8 Term. Rep. 93. 95.)

19 Geo. III., c. 56, s. 11.], and by whom the same shall have been so determined, and such relief given, shall grant their warrant, (a) directed to the proper collector of Excise, authorizing and requiring him to allow and pay to the party so complaining and relieved, out of the duties on sales at auction which shall next come to the hands of such collector, the full amount of such payment as shall be so made out before them to have been overpaid."

"In the last case upon this subject, Lord Tenterden held clearly that the sale was void in point of law, as two persons had been employed to bid, although they were both limited not to go beyond the same fixed sum. The current of authority, therefore, is clearly against the validity of such a sale. (Wheeler v. Collier, 1 Mood. & Malk. 123.)

"In the same case, the learned judge also expressed his opinion, that if only one person be appointed to bid, with a view to save the auction-duty, the sale is void, unless it be announced that there is a person bidding for the owner. The act itself is fraudulent; the statute was made for a different purpose, with a view to the duty only, and cannot be made to sanction what is in itself fraudulent.

"But the authorities, as we have seen, appear to have conclusively settled, that one person may, without public notice, be appointed to bid, in order to prevent a sale at an undervalue.

"But although an original purchaser will not be bound where a fraud has been practised in the biddings, yet if he transfer his contract, a strong case of fraud must be made out against the original purchaser, to enable the Court to give the benefit of it to his assignee, who was not induced through competition to give the price. (See 12 Ves. jun. 484.)

"If the particulars or advertisements state (as they frequently do), that the estate is to be sold without reserve, it seems clear that the sale would be void against a purchaser, if any person were employed as a puffer, and actually bid at the sale. This was actually decided in the late case of Meadows v. Tanner. (5 Madd. 34.) The vice-chancellor said, that the plain meaning of the words without reserve, in a particular of sale, is, that no person will be employed to bid on behalf of the vender for the purpose of keeping up the price; and that the vender could have no claim to the aid of a Court of equity to enforce a contract against the purchaser, into which he might have been drawn by the vender's want of faith.

"It is generally understood, that some person will bid on the part of the owner; and it therefore seems to deserve consideration, whether it would not, in most cases, be advisable to give public notice of the owner's intention previously to the sale. Where public notice is given, the mode least liable to objection seems to be that of reserving a bidding, or stipulating in the conditions of sale, that the owner may bid once in the course of the sale. (See Cowp. 397.) It may here, however, be proper to observe, that buying-in an estate, especially where it is done without public notice, mostly prejudices a future sale. This was exemplified in the sale of an estate before one of the masters in Chancery, where 23,000*l.* was bond fide bid, and the estate was bought in by the agent of the vender; afterwards there were three other sales in the master's office; and the consequence of the estate having been bought-in deterring others from bidding, was, that on the two first occasions no more was offered than 12,000*l.* and 6,000*l.*; and the estate was finally sold for 15,000*l.* (See 6 Ves. jun. 629; Wren v. Kirtton, 8 Ves. jun. 502; and see Twining v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 326.)

"On the other hand, if a purchaser by his conduct deter other persons from bidding, the sale will not be binding. Thus, where upon a sale by auction of a barge, a bidder addressed the company present, saying he had a claim against the late owner, by whom he said he had been ill-used, whereupon no one offered to bid against him; but the auctioneer refusing to knock down the property to a single bidding, a friend of the bidder's bade a guinea more, and the first bidder then made a second and higher bidding, amounting, however, to only one-fourth of the prime cost of the barge; it was held that there was no legal sale. (Fuller v. Abrahams, 3 Brod. & Bing. 116.)"

All bricks made for sale to be 8½ inches long, 2½ thick, and 4 wide; and all pantiles 13½ inches long, 9½ wide, and half an inch thick.

Penalty on making bricks or tiles of less dimensions.

Exemptions. Tiles for draining lands.

Bricks made for sale were required, by 17 Geo. III., c. 42, (partly for the security of the revenue, and partly for the protection of the buyer), to be made of at least certain dimensions. (a) It was enacted, “that, from and after the 1st day of July, 1777, all bricks which shall be made or burnt for sale in any part of England shall, when burnt, be not less than eight inches and a half long, and not less than two inches and a half thick, and not less than four inches wide; and that all pantiles which shall, from and after the said 1st day of July, 1777, be made for sale in any part of England, shall, when burnt, be not less than thirteen inches and a half long, and not less than nine inches and a half wide, and not less than half an inch thick.”

Sect. 2. “That all and every person and persons, who, at any time or times from and after the said 1st day of July, 1777, shall make any bricks or pantiles for sale, which, when burnt, shall be of less dimensions in length, breadth, or thickness, than the same are hereinbefore prescribed to be, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 20s. for every thousand of bricks, and the sum of 10s. for every thousand of pantiles, and so proportionably for a greater or lesser number of bricks or pantiles that shall be so made for sale, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act.”

34 Geo. III., c. 15, s. 2. provides, “that tiles made for the sole purpose of draining land, 19½ inches long by 13½ inches broad, and bent into a semi-elliptical form, the inside of the crown of the arch thereof being not less than seven inches perpendicular, from a straight line drawn from the one to the other side thereof, after the same is so bent, and such sides not being at any part thereof more than five inches distant from each other on the inside, and as nearly of the dimensions, and bent as nearly into the form aforesaid as may be, to be used for the purposes aforesaid, shall not be subject to any of the said duties.”

And by 42 Geo. III., c. 93, s. 22. “The exemption is extended to tiles made for such purpose not less than nine inches long, such being in every other respect of the same description and dimension as before prescribed.”

And by 46 Geo. III., c. 138, s. 3, it is further enacted, “that semi-elliptical tiles not exceeding in inside width six inches, and the height of which from the outside of the crown of the arch in a perpendicular line to the extreme edge shall in all cases exceed the width, but with a foot from the bottom of the arch where necessary, not exceeding two inches in breadth, for the purpose of keeping up the tiles in loose soils, made for draining wet or marshy lands, shall be exempted from the Excise duty.”

(a) Therefore where a vender sold and delivered bricks under the statuteable size, it was holden that he could not recover the price, although the buyer had received and used them. Law v. Hodgson, 11 East, 300; Langton v. Hughes, 1 M. & S. 596.

And by s. 4. "Any person using any such tile for any other purpose than above mentioned, incurs the penalty of 6*d.* for each tile so used."

4. Bricks and Tiles.

By 55 Geo. III., c. 176, it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful to and for any person or persons whatever to make, for the sole purpose of serving for the foundations or support of tiles bent into the semi-elliptical form prescribed by stat. 34 Geo. III., c. 15, or as nearly into the said form as may be, and of the dimensions and lengths allowed by the said act and stat. 42 Geo. III., c. 93, to be used for the purpose of draining wet or marshy lands, flat tiles not exceeding one inch in thickness, each thereof having at one end a semicircular projection, and at the other a semicircular arch or indent, such projection and arch being portions of circles of equal diameters, and each such tile being also not less than nine inches in length and not exceeding seven inches in breadth, such flat tiles being also perforated with circular holes, each thereof being not less than two inches in diameter, and the sum of the areas of such holes in each such flat tile amounting to not less than a quarter part of the surface or superficial content of such flat tile, and no such flat tile being fit or proper for the purpose of being used in building, or in the roof or covering of any house, shed, or other building whatever, without being charged or chargeable with any duty for or in respect of such flat tiles."

Penalty.

Tiles may be made for draining duty-free.

By 1 & 2 Geo. IV., c. 102, s. 2, after reciting stat. 55 Geo. III., c. 176, it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful for any person to make flat tiles for the sole purpose of serving for the foundations or support of such semi-elliptical tiles as shall be made and applicable and fit for the sole purpose of draining wet or marshy lands, and no such flat tile being fit or proper for the purpose of being used in building, or in the roof or covering of any house, shed, or other building whatever, or otherwise than as aforesaid, without being charged or chargeable with any duty for such flat tiles."

Flat tiles for the foundation of semi-elliptical tiles used for draining lands exempted from duty.

5 Geo. IV., c. 75, s. 9, for the giving further encouragement to the draining wet and marshy lands, enacts, "that from the 17th June, 1824, it shall be lawful for any person or persons to make tiles or bricks for the sole purpose of draining wet or marshy land, without being charged or chargeable with any duty for or in respect thereof: Provided always, that all such tiles and bricks shall be made upon the land for the draining of which they shall be used, or within a quarter of a mile of such land; and that if any such tiles or bricks shall be used in the erecting, or in the roofing or covering of any house, shed, or other building, or otherwise than for such purpose of draining as aforesaid, the same shall be charged and chargeable with the duty, in like manner as other tiles or bricks are chargeable under any act or acts in force immediately before the passing of this act."

Tiles or bricks may be made for draining land duty-free, provided they are made on such land or within a quarter of a mile of it.

By 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 24, s. 4. "Every maker of bricks or tiles, before he begins to make, shall give or leave notice in writing at the next Excise office of his name and place of abode, and of the sheds, work-houses, or other places where he intends to make such bricks or tiles, on pain of 100*l.*"

Notice to be given.

Sect. 5, 11, 14. "All bricks or tiles chargeable with the said duties shall be taken account of, and charged by the officer whilst they are drying, after of being turned out of the moulds, and before removed to the kiln or clamp for burning, for which purpose any officer may enter into the fields, sheds, or other places where making, and take an account thereof in writing, and leave a copy (if demanded) with such maker, on pain of 40*s.*; and if any person shall obstruct such officer, he shall forfeit 50*l.*"

When the duty shall be charged.

Obstructing the officer.

Sect. 6. "The officer in charging the duty shall allow ten for every 100 when charged in the field before burnt, in compensation for all waste, loss, or damages."

Allowance for waste.

And by 25 Geo. III., c. 66, s. 2. "If the maker shall remove any bricks or tiles to the kiln, clamp, or other place for burning, from or out of the field or place where they shall be put to dry, before the officer shall have taken an account thereof, he shall forfeit 50*l.* And all so carried away, and found in the possession of any maker or trader therein, or person for his use, shall be forfeited, and may be seized, or the value thereof, and shall be recovered, one moiety to the king, the other to the informer."

24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 24, s. 8, provides, "that no such maker shall be subject to the said penalty, if the officer shall fail to take an account on due notice given him three days before such removal."

By 25 Geo. III., c. 66, s. 3. "The maker shall keep the bricks and tiles unsurveyed separate from those that have been surveyed; on pain of forfeiting 50*l.*"

Sect. 4. "And such maker shall, while the same are drying, place them in such manner as the officer may easily and securely take an account thereof; and if he shall place them in any irregular or unusual manner, with intent to make it difficult or unsafe for the officer to take such account, he shall forfeit 50*l.*"

By 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 24, s. 10. "If any maker shall fraudulently conceal or hide any bricks or tiles in any part of the operation of making, with intent to defraud the duties, he shall forfeit the same, and also 20*l.*"

Sect. 12, 13. "Every such maker shall once in every six weeks make entry in writing upon his oath, or on the oath of his chief workman, at the next Excise office, of all bricks and tiles by him made within that time, distinguishing the kinds, and specifying the names and abodes of the owner, if such maker be not the owner, on pain of 50*l.*, and shall, within six weeks after such entry, clear off all the duties then due thereon, on pain of double duty. And if any person shall carry away such bricks or tiles before the duty be cleared off, he shall forfeit double the value thereof. But such maker shall not, for making such entry, be obliged to go further than the next market-town."

Sect. 15. "And all tools, implements, and utensils used in making such bricks or tiles, in custody of such maker, shall be liable to be seized for any debts or penalties (arising or incurred under this act), whether the debtor or offender be the lawful owner thereof or not." See stat. 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 21.

Sect. 16, 17, 18. "Bricks or tiles for which the duties have been paid may be exported, and on security given before the shipping thereof that the same shall not be re-landed, the person exporting the same shall be allowed a drawback on such duties; and in case such bricks or tiles shall be re-landed, the same shall be forfeited to the use of His Majesty over and above the penalty of such bond." See 27 Geo. III., c. 13, sched. (F.)

By s. 21. "All penalties and forfeitures are to be sued for, levied, and mitigated as by the laws of Excise or in the Courts at Westminster, and to be distributed half to the king, and half to him that shall sue."

[See the general provision of 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, ante, p. 227 to 310.]

Bricks, &c. not surveyed to be kept separate.

To be properly placed whilst drying.

Concealing to evade the duty.

Makers to give an account every six weeks, and to clear off the duty.

Utensils liable.

Bricks, &c. may be exported, duty free.

Penalties, how to be recovered.

"No officer shall enter such work-house or place between the hours of eleven at night and five in the morning without the presence of a constable or peace-officer, unless such maker shall have any course or making of candles unfinished or in operation; or shall have any legal notice depending of his intention to make between those hours; or shall have made any preparation for making any course or making of candles."

Exception.

Sect. 18. "No entry shall be deemed to be withdrawn whilst any duty shall be depending and unpaid, or any copper, furnace, or other utensil shall be standing in any such melting-house, workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, or other place."

Whilst any duty unpaid, no entry deemed withdrawn.

By 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 25. "If the officer, on searching any unentered house or place, shall find candles either made or making, or tallow or other materials, melting or melted, or cottons or rushes spread, or any copper, mould, or other utensil warm with tallow or other materials, this shall be sufficient evidence to convict the offender in the penalty of 100*l.* for having used the same not being entered."

Finding candles, &c. in unentered places.

Sect. 26. "And leaving a summons at the place where the discovery was made, directed to the person prosecuted by his right or assumed name, shall be deemed as effectual as if personally delivered to him, and by his proper name." Vide ante, 287.

Summoning offenders.

By 10 Ann. c. 26, s. 106, 107; 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 27; 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 11, s. 9. "Every maker of candles for sale shall, before he begins to work upon, make, or dip any course or making of candles, not being mould candles [but by 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 11, s. 9, the exception of mould candles is taken away], or make preparation for the same, give notice in writing to the officer of such his intention, and declare the time of the day or night when he intends to begin, and the number of sticks of which such making is intended to consist, and the size and number of candles on each stick, and the number and size of the moulds he intends to fill and draw, and how often they are intended to be filled and drawn in each making; and in default thereof, or if he have at such making more sticks or more candles, or of a larger size, or more or larger moulds, or shall draw the said moulds a greater number of times than mentioned in such notice or declaration, he shall forfeit 50*l.* (or after the weighing by the officer increase the weight of such candles, by re-dipping or otherwise, he shall forfeit 10*l.*) And if after such notice he shall not begin at the time mentioned therein, or within three hours of it, such notice shall be void."

Notice to be given of the time of making.

By 25 Geo. III., c. 74, s. 29. "Every such maker shall give to such officer notice in writing of the hour when he intends to begin to spread cottons, wicks, or rushes for any course or making of candles, and the hour and time when he intends to begin to run in or dip such wicks, which notice shall be given (if within the limits of the head office, six hours; if in any city or market town, twelve hours; elsewhere, twenty-four hours) before he shall begin, on pain of forfeiting 50*l.* for every time he shall so begin."

Times for giving such notice limited.

Sect. 30. "And if such maker shall not begin and proceed at the time mentioned in such notice, or within three hours next after, such notice shall be void."

By 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 6. "Every maker of candles having begun to spread cottons, wicks, or rushes, for any course or making of candles (other than mould candles), shall proceed and continue, without delay or interruption, until the whole intended to be used in such course or making is finished; and the time for beginning to run in or dip such cottons, wicks, or rushes respectively shall not be more than five hours after the beginning to spread the same as aforesaid; and shall continue to run in or dip such

Sect. 7. "If in any such notice the hour or time specified for beginning to run in or dip such cottons, &c. shall be more than five hour after the time specified in the notice for beginning to spread such cottons, &c., such notice shall be void, and such chandler giving the same shall be liable to all such fines, penalties, and forfeitures as he would have been if no notice had been given."

And by 11 Geo. I, c. 30, s. 28. "Lighting a fire under a vessel, for melting the materials, or finding in such vessel, or in any mould or other utensil, the materials melted or melting, or cottons or rushes spread or spreading, shall be deemed to be such a beginning to work as shall make him liable to the said forfeiture of 50*l.*"

By 27 Geo. III., c. 31, s. 21. "Every candlemaker shall, at his own expense, find and affix sufficient fastenings, to be approved of in writing by the surveyor or supervisor, to every furnace, copper, pan, or other utensil used for melting materials to be made into candles; and also covers with proper fastenings, to be approved as aforesaid, to every dipping-mould which such maker shall have in his custody; and every such utensil shall be securely locked, fastened, or sealed by the officer, as soon as any melting shall be finished; and every such dipping mould, with the cover, shall be locked, fastened, or sealed in like manner, as soon as the dipping shall be finished. And such maker shall provide a secure room, place, or chest with fastenings, to be approved as aforesaid, for locking up all moulds for making mould candles, which shall be there locked up and secured by such officer when the same shall cease to be used. And when such maker shall be desirous to light a fire, and to have the furnace door, copper, pan, or utensil or dipping-mould opened, or to use such moulds, he shall give to such officer six hours' notice in writing if within the limits of the chief office; twelve hours if he shall reside in any market-town; and twenty-four hours if he reside out of a market-town; and such officer shall attend at the time mentioned in such notice, and open such doors and places, as the case may require; and if such maker shall not light a fire, or shall not proceed to use such utensils, within one hour after the doors are opened, such notice shall be void, and such officer shall proceed to lock up and secure the same again in manner as aforesaid, and such maker shall be obliged to give a fresh notice. And if such maker shall neglect or refuse to do and perform any of the matters aforesaid, or to pay for any locks, keys, or other necessary fastenings which shall have been provided by such officer, or if any person shall hinder any officer in fixing such locks or fastenings, or in locking, sealing, or securing the same in such manner as he shall think most effectual to answer the purposes of this act, or shall open any such furnace, copper, pan, utensil, dipping-mould, or door, before the same shall have been opened by the officer, or shall wilfully break or damage any lock, seal, or fastening, he shall for every such offence forfeit 100*l.*" not locked up.

Sect. 22. "If there shall be on the premises in the custody of any candlemaker any mould proper to be made use of for making mould candles not locked up and secured as aforesaid, unless after notice given as aforesaid, every such maker shall forfeit 100*l.*"

The officer shall
terials missing.

By 8 Ann. c. 29, s. 12, 13. "The officer shall be permitted to take an account of the quantities of wax, tallow, and other materials; and if he shall miss any that he had taken account of at the last time he was at the maker's, and shall not on demand receive satisfaction what is become thereof, the officer may charge such quantity of candles as the materials so missing in his judgment would have made, not exceeding 108*lb.* of candles for every 112*lb.* of materials missing, and so proportionably. And if any such maker shall obstruct the officer, he shall forfeit 20*l.*"

Candles spoiled
in making.

Sect. 29. "Candles cracked or spoiled in making may be defaced by the officer, who shall make allowance for the duty."

Sect. 14. "No maker of candles (on pain of 20*l.*) shall remove any candles before the officer hath taken account of the same, without giving to the officer, within the bills, twenty-four hours' notice, and elsewhere two days' notice, of his intention to remove the same."

Sect. 15. "The maker shall keep his candles which have not been surveyed separate from all other candles which have been surveyed for twenty-four hours after making within the bills, and for two days elsewhere, unless they shall have been sooner surveyed by the officer, on pain of 5*l.*"

By 5 Geo. III., c. 43, s. 20. "If the officer shall have cause to suspect that candles are privately making in any place, or that any candles are concealed with intent to avoid the duty; in such case, on oath made by such officer before a commissioner [two commissioners, 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 34.] or one justice residing near to the place, setting forth the ground of his suspicion, such commissioner or justice may, if he shall judge it reasonable, by special warrant authorize such officer, by day or night (but if in the night in presence of a constable), to enter into every such place so suspected, and to seize and carry away as forfeited all such candles as he shall there find so privately making, together with all materials then ready or preparing for making the same, and also all such candles as he shall find so concealed, together with the boxes or other package containing the same. And the person that shall be found privately making such candles, or in whose possession any such shall be found, shall forfeit 100*l.* unless he shall prove payment of the duty."

By 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 34. "If any person shall obstruct any such officer in searching any such suspected places, or in seizing such candles, he shall forfeit 100*l.*"

By 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 30. "If any maker of candles for sale shall mingle candles which have not been weighed by the officer with those which have, or shall fraudulently remove any before weighing, or conceal any candles or materials, he shall forfeit 100*l.*"

(5.) Candles.

Removing candles before charged with the duty.

(a) Candles one-eighth made are within the meaning of this statute. But an information upon it against a candle-maker for mixing unweighed with weighed candles must charge the act to have been done with intent to deceive His Majesty of his duties. The Attorney-general v. Barrett, 1 Young & J. 495.

The maker of the candles is liable to the forfeiture of treble value, which attaches under the stat. 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 10, upon all persons who knowingly receive, buy, or have in possession, candles after they have been removed from the place where they were made, and where they ought to have been charged with duty, before the duty is charged, or before the candles have been condemned, whether they do or do not claim any property in them. (26 Geo. III. c. 77, s. 10, 11, spirits, soap, and candles. Attorney-General v. Forge, Forrest, 106.) And, therefore, where a maker of candles removed them from his manufactory at Edmonton to a shop in London, before the duty had been paid, he was holden liable to penalties under the act. (Id. ibid.; and see 2 Highmore, 66 to 97; Huie, 80 to 94. And as to coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, and chocolate, Huie, 94 to 128.) The meaning of the clause is, that the candles shall be impounded until the duty is charged; and any person who removes them is liable to forfeit treble value. A change of place is prohibited, and not change of property. On a prosecution by indictment in the Court of King's Bench, against several defendants, for conspiring to dissuade a witness from attending before the commissioners of Excise, to give evidence in support of an information for removing candles in respect of which no duty had been paid, and no condemnation had taken place, several points were determined with regard to the information, which it is material to notice. First, the Court determined that the clause of the statute 26 Geo. III. c. 77, which enacts that no prosecution shall be carried on in the king's Courts for the recovery of an Excise penalty, unless prosecuted by the attorney-general or some revenue officer, was confined to the superior Courts of Record; and therefore an information for a penalty for removing wax candles from the place of

(5.) Candles.

Entry of candles made. (a)

By 25 Geo. III., c. 74, s. 31. "If any officer shall discover that any making of candles is carried on in any private workhouse, room, or place, whereof no notice has been given as aforesaid, and shall at the same time discover therein any person knowingly assisting or any ways concerned in carrying on the same, he shall forfeit 20*l.* over and above all penalties which such maker shall be liable to; and such officer may detain such person, and carry him before a justice, who, on confession or oath of one witness, may convict such offender, who, immediately on conviction, shall pay 20*l.* into the hands of such officer; and on his refusing or neglecting, such justice shall, by warrant under hand and seal, commit him to the house of correction to hard labour for two months, unless the penalty be sooner paid: and if such person shall be convicted of a second offence, he shall in like manner pay 40*l.* or be committed for four months."

Sect. 27. "Every person who shall make any candles shall once in every week make a true entry in writing, at the next Excise office, of all candles by him made within such week; which entry shall contain the weight, number, and size of the candles, and what quantity thereof was made at each course in the said week; on pain for every neglect of entry to forfeit 20*l.*: which entry shall be upon the oath of the maker or his chief workman or servant employed in the making, according to the best of their knowledge and belief; and said entries and oaths, within the bills, to be made with and administered by such officer as the commissioners shall appoint at the general Excise office, and elsewhere by the collectors or supervisors."

manufactory before the duty paid might be prosecuted before the commissioners of Excise by a person not stated to be an officer. (The King v. Steventon and others, 2 East, 362. See now 56 Geo. III., c. 104, s. 15, ante, 801.) And it seemed also to be the opinion of the Court, that an information, stating in effect that the candles were home-made, would be sufficient, without expressly describing them as British candles; the words of the act being "British spirits, soap, and candles;" although an informality of this nature, however available, it might have been as a ground of error or of appeal in the original information, would not constitute a sufficient ground of objection in a collateral prosecution for conspiring to prevent the examination of a witness before the commissioners of Excise. (The King v. Steventon and others, 2 East, 362. The word British does not apply to candles, but to spirits, though the act seems to assume that they should be home-made, 2 East, 371, 372.) The information for removing the candles is correct in stating that no condemnation had taken place, and that the duty had not been paid before the removal of the goods. (The King v. Steventon, 2 East, 362.) And it is not material on the collateral prosecution for a conspiracy to state the issuing of process, or the joinder of issue on the information, before the commissioners. [The King v. Steventon and others, 2 East, 362.] Nor is it necessary to recite, that the original information was prosecuted before the commissioners by name, although it is not averred to have taken place before three or more of them, according to the stat. 1 Geo. II., stat. 2, c. 16. (The King v. Steventon and others, 2 East, 362.) And in stating the information, it is sufficient to allege, that it was preferred within three months after the commission of the offence, according to the stat. 1 W. & M. c. 54, s. 13, without also stating that notice was given to the defendant within a week, as directed by the same statute. (The King v. Steventon and others, 2 East, 362.) The statute 7 & 8 W. III., c. 30, enabling the commissioners of Excise to summon witnesses before them, on a charge being exhibited for an offence of which they take cognizance, it was held sufficient to prove a printed summons distributed and issued in blank by the order of the commissioners to their agents, and afterwards filled up without any special directions from the board, although not signed by any of the commissioners, nor issued in their individual names. (It appeared that this was the constant practice at the Excise office. The King v. Steventon and others, 2 East, 362.)

(a) See form of entry, ante, 266.

But by 8 Ann. c. 9, s. 8. "He shall not be obliged to go further than the next market-town for making such entry." (5.) Candles.

By 25 Geo. III., c. 74, s. 28. "The maker shall, in one week after such entry, clear off the duties, on pain of double duty; and no maker after such default in payment shall sell, deliver, or carry out any candles till he hath cleared off the duty, on pain of double value." Duty to be cleared off.

And by 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 29. "If there shall be found in the possession of any maker of candles for sale any candles not mentioned in the entry made by him, and of which the officer hath not had an account, and the duties have not been charged and paid, he shall be chargeable with the duties; and if he do not pay the same, he shall be liable to double duty, unless he shall prove that the duty hath been paid, or that he bought the same of some other chandler who had paid the duty, and that he gave six hours' notice in writing to the surveying officer, or at the next Excise office, of his intention to buy the same, and of whom." Candles not entered, nor duty paid.

And by 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 10, 11. "If any person shall knowingly receive, buy, or have in his possession any candles after the same shall be removed from the place where they were made, and ought to have been charged with the duty, before the said duty hath been charged (except such as have been condemned as forfeited), whether he claim any property or interest therein or not, he shall forfeit the same, and treble the value thereof, to be estimated at the best price the like sorts shall then bear in London." Persons having candles in their possession not charged with the duty. (a)

By 8 Ann. c. 9, s. 18. "No person shall expose to sale any candles, unless in his public shop or warehouse, public fair or market, on pain of 5*l*." Candles, where to be sold.

By 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 29. (a) "Cocquets granted for shipping candles to be landed in any other part of the kingdom shall express the quality, quantity, and weight, the mark of the package, and by whom made and sold, and where consigned; and if they shall be shipped without such cocquet, they shall be forfeited and seized, together with the package." Candles carried coastwise.

Sect. 27. "No candles shall be imported, otherwise than in some package containing at least 224lbs. neat of candles, and stowed openly in the hold, on pain of being seized and forfeited, together with the package; and the master of the vessel shall forfeit 50*l*." See 42 Geo. III., c. 93, s. 19. Exportation and importation.

But by 26 Geo. II., c. 32, s. 8. "On information brought against such master, he may detain the wages of the mariners till it be determined; and if it shall appear that the candles were put on board by any mariner without the master's knowledge, the master may apply such mariner's wages in payment of the forfeiture."

By 42 Geo. III., c. 9, s. 19. "No candles imported otherwise than according to 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 27, shall be entered for exportation, on pain of forfeiture of the same."

"Candles for which the duty hath been paid may be exported, and the duty drawn back." 8 Ann. c. 9, s. 24, 25, 26; 43 Geo. III., c. 69, sched. (C).

By 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 28. "The officers of Excise (in like manner as the officers of the Customs) may go on board any vessel, and search for and seize all candles forfeited, together with the package; and they may likewise seize such as, before entry and payment of duties, shall be found unshipping or unshipped." Seizures.

And by 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 36, s. 7. "All wax candles seized on importation or otherwise, and condemned for nonpayment of the duties, shall be broken or otherwise rendered unfit for use."

(a) The provisions of 23 Geo. II., c. 21, respecting CANDLES, are similar to those respecting SOAP and STARCH.

(5) Candles.

By 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 30. "The officers of Customs or Excise may seize any candles, with the package, that shall be found in any vessel, cart, or other carriage, where they shall have good reason to believe that the same were made in some private workhouse, or clandestinely imported without payment of duty, or that the same have been exported and re-landed after re-payment of the duty; and if the party in whose possession the same shall be found shall not at the hearing of the information make it appear that the duty hath been paid or secured, he shall forfeit 5*l.* for every 100*lb.* weight, and also the candles and package shall be forfeited."

Sect. 31. "If any foreign candles shall be unshipped, with intention to be laid on land, before entry and payment of the duties, or shall be landed again after shipping for exportation upon debenture, the same, together with the package, vessels, boats, horses, and other carriages used in landing or conveying the same, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of the Customs or Excise; and the persons from whom the same shall be seized shall forfeit 5*l.* for every hundred-weight."

Sect. 32. "If any person shall knowingly harbour or conceal any candles unlawfully imported, or re-landed after shipping for exportation upon debenture, or suffer the same, he shall, whether he claim any property therein or not, forfeit 50*l.* for every 100*lbs.* weight, together with the candles and package."

Sect. 33. "And where any such candles shall be seized as forfeited, and no person shall claim the same in twenty days, if it be within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London, the officer who made the seizure may cause notice, signed by the solicitor of Excise, to be affixed at the Royal Exchange, of the day and time of day for proceeding to trial and condemnation of the same by the commissioners of Excise; and if it be out of the said limits, then public notice shall be given by proclamation at the next market-town on the market-day next after the said twenty days, of the day and place when and where the justices will proceed to trial and condemnation thereof: and the judgment thereon shall not be liable to any appeal, or to be removed by certiorari."

Sect. 37. "But where any person shall claim the same, then all informations for the condemnation of such seizures, or recovering such penalties (if within the limits of the chief office in London), shall be heard by the commissioners of Excise or appeals, elsewhere by two neighbouring justices where the seizure was made or penalty incurred; who, on complaint within three months, may summon the party accused, and the witnesses on either side, and on appearance of the offender, or on proof of notice given to him, may proceed to examine the facts and witnesses upon oath, and to give judgment as well for the penalty as for the condemnation of such candles, and the packages, boats, cattle, and carriages so seized, and to issue their warrant for the sale thereof, and for levying any pecuniary penalty upon the goods of such offender, which may be sold if not redeemed within fourteen days; and for want of sufficient distress, such offender may be imprisoned till satisfaction be made."

Sect. 37, 40. "If either party be not satisfied with the judgment of such justices, he may appeal to the next sessions, whose judgment therein shall be final, and shall not be removable by certiorari."

Sect. 34. "And all such penalties and forfeitures shall be applied, half to the king, and half to the seizer or prosecutor."

Sect. 38. "Provided that any such penalties and forfeitures may be mitigated, so as not to reduce the same to less than one-fourth over and above the costs."

Sect. 35. "Where candles shall be seized for nonpayment of duties, or nonentry, and it shall be disputed whether such payment or entry was made or not, the proof shall lie on the claimer, and not on the officer."

By 10 Geo. III., c. 44. "If he shall make use of insufficient scales or weights, he shall forfeit 100*l.* But not to be prosecuted both on this and the former act." [And by stat. 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 15, "the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."]

By 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 8. "If he shall, in weighing his stock, put any other substance therein, whereby such officer may be hindered from taking a just account of such stock, or shall forcibly obstruct or by any contrivance prevent or impede such officer, he shall forfeit 100*l.*" Cheating or obstructing the officer in weighing.

By 8 Ann. c. 9, s. 28; 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 29; 24 Geo. II., c. 40, s. 39; 25 Geo. III., c. 74, s. 32, 33. "All the fines, forfeitures, and penalties may be recovered and mitigated as by the laws of Excise, or in the Courts at Westminster; and distributed, half to the king and half to him that shall inform or sue." Power of the justices.

By 8 Ann. c. 9, s. 19, and 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 21, "all candles, materials, and utensils for making candles, in custody of any maker of candles, or person in trust for him, shall be chargeable with all duties in arrear, and subject to all penalties and forfeitures, in the same manner as if the debtor or offender were the lawful owner." Utensils liable to the duties and penalties.

"The Excise officers may go on board any ships, and search as the officers of the Customs may do, for coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, chocolate, and cocoa paste, and seize all such as shall be forfeited, or shall be unshipping, or unshipped, to be laid on land, without entry and payment of duties, with the boxes, bags, or other package."

By 9 Geo. II. c. 35, s. 22. "Where any vessel coming from foreign parts, and having six pounds or more of tea on board, shall be found at anchor, or hovering within the limits of any port, or within two leagues of the shore, or shall be discovered to have been within the limits of any port, and not proceeding on her voyage, wind and weather permitting, unless in case of unavoidable necessity and distress of weather, of which the person in charge of such vessel shall give notice, and make proof before the chief officer of Customs, immediately after arrival in the said port, with coffee on board; all such tea, with the chests and other packages, or the value thereof, shall be forfeited (whether bulk shall have been broken or not), and the same may be seized and prosecuted, or the value thereof sued for by the officers."

And by 5 Geo. III. c. 43, s. 38. "Where any vessel coming from foreign parts, and having on board 20lbs. of coffee, shall be found at anchor, or hovering within two leagues of the shore; or shall be discovered to have been within the limits of any port, and not proceeding on her voyage, wind and weather permitting (notice, as in the 9 Geo. II. c. 35, s. 22, ante); all such coffee, together with the package, or the value thereof, shall be forfeited, whether bulk shall have been broken or not; and the vessel also with her tackle and furniture shall be forfeited, provided such vessel doth not exceed the burden of 50 tons; to be disposed of according to 5 Geo. III. c. 43."

By 10 Geo. I. c. 10, s. 27. "If any person shall import any coffee, tea, or cocoa-nuts, which ought to be secured in warehouses, and shall not make due entries thereof, and bring the same into such warehouse, the same shall be adjudged to be clandestinely run and unlawfully imported, and may be seized by any officer of Customs or inland duties, and shall be forfeited, with the packages thereof, and the horses, carts, and other carriages made use of in carrying the same."

By 58 Geo. III. c. 76, s. 3. "If any person shall import, unship, or land in Great Britain, or within the limits of any of the ports thereof, any tea, and shall not make due entries thereof, so that the duties of Custom and Excise be secured and paid, all such tea so imported shall be deemed and is hereby adjudged to be clandestinely run, and shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Customs or Excise; and the person so offending, or aiding or assisting therein, or removing, receiving, harbouring, or concealing any run tea, shall, for each and every such offence, severally forfeit and lose the sum of 10l. for every pound weight thereof, or the sum of 100l., at the election of the attorney-general, or the person who shall sue or prosecute for the same; and no such penalty shall be mitigated by any justice or justices below one-fourth part thereof."

By 11 Geo. I. c. 30, s. 4. "Every person who shall keep a public-house, shop, cellar, or other warehouse for selling brandy or other spirituous liquors, and shall have in his custody for his use any coffee, tea, chocolate, or cocoa-nuts, above six pounds' weight, of any kind, shall be deemed a dealer in the said commodities."

By 21 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 29. "If the officer of Excise shall find any increase of the stock of any dealer over and above what the officer found in his last survey, such increase shall be deemed to be made by a commodity for which no duty has been paid; and so much of the said stock as shall be found increased shall be forfeited, and taken by the officer of

By 12 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 5. "No tea above the quantity of six pounds' weight shall be removed from any part of this kingdom, by land or water, without such a permit, expressing also the quality, whether black or green, on pain of forfeiting the tea, together with the package in which contained."

moved without a permit.
Tea to be only removed at certain hours.

By 21 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 26. "If any tea, exceeding six pounds' weight, shall be found removing from one part of this kingdom to another, unless at such times as hereinafter mentioned, viz. from 29th September to 25th March between seven in the morning and five in the evening, and from 25th March to 29th September between five in the morning and seven in the evening (except the same is removing by a known common stage-coach, waggon, or other carriage, which usually travel out of those hours), the said tea, and the package containing the same, whether accompanied with or without a permit, and all cattle and carriages made use of in removing the same, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer for the inland duties upon tea."

By 21 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 24. "If any dealer, having received any tea into his stock, shall, within twenty-four hours after such receipt, see cause to return the same, he shall give twelve hours' notice to the officer of Excise, expressing the cause of return; and the officer shall attend; and after he shall have examined the tea, and taken an account thereof, the dealer shall immediately, in his presence, repack it, and in half an hour after his arrival the officer shall grant a permit for returning the same; and if the dealer shall return the same without a permit, or be guilty of any fraud relating thereto, he shall forfeit 100*l*."

Dealer returning tea.

Sect. 25. "When any dealer in tea shall have taken out a permit for removing tea from his own stock to the stock of any other like dealer, the officer may take a sample (not exceeding two ounces, nor less than one, to be sealed by the trader in the presence of the officer,) out of each parcel so intended to be removed, paying for the same according to the price that such tea is then commonly sold for; and if such dealer shall refuse to permit the officer to take such sample, or shall deliver a sample not being the very tea so to be sent away, he shall forfeit 20*l*."

Officers may take samples.

By 22 Geo. III., c. 63, s. 21. 24. "No tea whatever shall be removed from any part of this kingdom, not being within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, or of the chief office of Excise in London, to any place within the said limits, on pain of forfeiting the tea, together with the packages containing the same, and the vessels and boats, horses and other cattle, and carriages employed in removing the same, which may be seized by any officer of Excise. But nothing herein shall prevent dealers in tea, who shall have received any tea accompanied with an authentic permit, from returning the same, for the cause and in the manner directed by 21 Geo. III., c. 55, s. 24."

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 1, ante, 247, "all former duties on Excise licences are repealed. And by sect. 2 new duties are imposed, viz. (int. al.) on every person trading in or selling coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, chocolate, or pepper, the annual sum of 1*l*s."

Licences.

See the several regulations respecting the licences, duties, fines, &c. contained in that act, stated at length, ante, 249 to 262.

By 10 Geo. I. c. 10, s. 10. "Every druggist, grocer, chandler, coffee-house keeper, chocolate-house keeper, and other person dealing in coffee, tea, or cocoa-nuts, or making or selling chocolate, either by wholesale or retail, shall, before he take any of the said goods into his possession, make entry in writing of all storehouses and other places intended to be used by him for the keeping the same at the office for the division, on pain of forfeiting 200*l*., and the said goods found therein, with the canisters, bags, vessels, and other package."

Houses of ma-

utensil for carrying on any trades aforesaid shall be deemed a legal entry, unless made in the name of the real owner of and trader in such shop; and the person who acts as visible owner of such place, or principal manager in such trade, shall be deemed the real owner and trader, and consequently liable for any stock found there, or for not making entries, or other offences."

And by 10 Geo. I. c. 10, s. 14, and 12 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 6. "None of the said goods shall be offered to sale but in places entered, or in a warehouse to be approved of by the commissioners, on pain of forfeiting the same, and also 10l."

By 11 Geo. I. c. 30, s. 9. "No person in roasting, or soon after roasting, or before selling, shall mix with coffee, to increase the weight, any butter, lard, grease, water, or other materials, on pain of 100l.; and if any dealer shall knowingly buy or sell any so mixed, he shall forfeit 100l."

By 10 Geo. I. c. 10, s. 31. "The commissioners for inland duties may appoint houses for roasting coffee-berries, and officers to attend them, and one or more persons at each house well skilled in roasting coffee; to which all persons may resort to have their coffee-berries roasted, bringing a certificate from an officer that the duties have been paid, or that it hath been condemned as forfeited; for the roasting of which coffee shall be paid 8s. per cwt."

Sect. 32. "But the sellers and dealers may send their own roasters, who shall be permitted to roast the same therein, paying 3s. per cwt."

Sect. 33. "And during the continuance of such roasting-houses, no coffee-berries shall be roasted, burned, or dried, but in some one such house, on pain of forfeiting the same, and 5s. a pound."

Sect. 34. "If any officer or roaster duly appointed shall neglect or refuse to attend such house, he shall forfeit 10l. for the first offence, and 20l. for the second, and be incapable to hold any office in the revenue."

But by 49 Geo. III. c. 80. (reciting 10 Geo. I. c. 10.) "It is enacted, that after the passing of this act all sellers of and dealers in coffee shall be at liberty to roast their own coffee, according to the following regulations; viz. every such seller, being desirous to roast coffee, shall, before he shall roast any coffee, make true entry in writing, at the next office of Excise, of one or more rooms for that purpose, which rooms respectively shall either be adjoining or as near as possible to the places by him entered and made use of for keeping raw coffee; and if any seller, &c. shall roast in any place whereof he shall not have made such entry, he shall, for every such offence, forfeit 50l., together with all the coffee which shall at any time be found in any such place whereof no such entry shall be made. Provided, that no seller, &c. who shall at any time receive into his custody or possession any unroasted coffee, less in quantity than 56lbs., except coffee returned to him by any customer for being disliked, shall be at liberty to roast, or put in operation of roasting, any coffee; and if any seller, &c. shall, contrary to this act, roast, or put in operation of roasting, any coffee, he shall, for each offence, forfeit 50l., together with all such coffee by him so roasted, &c."

And by 43 Geo. III., c. 129, s. 5. (repealing s. 3 of 41 Geo. III., united kingdom, c. 91, which respected imitations of coffee) "If any burnt, scorched, or roasted peas, beans, or other grain or vegetable substance, prepared for the purpose of being an imitation of or in any respect to resemble coffee or cocoa, or to serve as a substitute for the same, or pretended by the possessor or vender thereof so to be, shall be made or kept for sale, or offered or exposed to sale, or found in the possession of any dealer in or seller of coffee or cocoa, or of [query, if?] any burnt, scorched, or roasted peas, beans, or other grain or vegetable substance, not being coffee or cocoa, shall be called by the preparer, possessor, or vender thereof by the name of English or British coffee, or any other name of coffee, or by the name of American cocoa, or English or British cocoa, or any other name of cocoa, the same shall be forfeited, together with the packages, and shall be seized by any Excise officer; and the person preparing or selling the same, or having the same in his possession, or the dealer in or seller of coffee or cocoa in whose custody the same shall be found, shall forfeit 100l."

By 3 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 1, after reciting 43 Geo. III., c. 129, s. 5, it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful for any person, not being a dealer in or seller of coffee or cocoa, to manufacture, deal in, and sell scorched or roasted corn, peas, beans, or parsnips, whole and not ground, crushed, or powdered, under the licence and subject to the regulations and restrictions thereinbefore mentioned."

Sect. 6. "Before any person shall begin to manufacture for sale, or deal in, or sell any such scorched or roasted corn, peas, beans, or parsnips, he shall make a true and particular entry in writing, according to the laws in respect to Excise entries of places, of every house, room, and place, and of every utensil by him made use of, or intended to be made use of, in or for the scorching or roasting or keeping of scorched or roasted corn, peas, beans, or parsnips for sale, at the office of Excise within the limits whereof such house, room, or place shall be situate, and shall be subject to the survey of the officers of Excise, in like manner as coffee-dealers; and every such person shall, as soon as any such corn, peas, beans, or parsnips has or have been scorched or roasted, put and make up the same whole, and not ground, crushed, or powdered, and unmixed with any other article or ingredient whatsoever, in packages, and stamp or mark the cover of every such package with the words 'roasted corn, peas, beans, or parsnips,' as the case may be, and with his name and place of residence; and shall not have or keep, or sell or offer to sell or deliver, any scorched or roasted corn, peas, beans, or parsnips under any other name or description whatever than scorched or roasted corn, peas, beans, or parsnips, as the case may be, or in any other state or condition than whole, and not ground, crushed, or powdered, or mixed with any other article or ingredient, or otherwise than so made up into such packages so marked, on pain of forfeiting for each offence the sum of 50l., together with all the corn, peas, beans, or parsnips, and other articles or ingredients mixed or of the like kind as are mixed therewith, and also the utensils for the scorching or roasting corn, peas, beans, or parsnips, which shall at any time be found in any house, room, or place so made use of or intended to be made use of as aforesaid, and whereof no such entry shall be made, or which shall be in the possession of any such person not licensed, or had or kept by him, or sold or delivered, otherwise than as aforesaid; and the same shall be seized by any officer of Excise. Nothing herein contained shall repeal or alter the act or provisions hereinbefore recited, in any other respect, manner, or degree, than is and are expressly provided by this act."

Sect. 7. "It shall be lawful for any person licensed to deal in cocoa, who shall first make entry of his premises, for the purpose hereinafter mentioned, at the nearest office of Excise, and who shall not be a scorcher or roaster of corn, peas, beans, or parsnips, or a dealer in or seller of scorched or roasted corn, peas, beans, or parsnips, or have in his possession any such corn, &c., to make and manufacture in such premises, and with the knowledge of the proper officer, cocoa-paste, broma, and other mixtures and preparations of cocoa, with sugar and arrow-root flour or other farinaceous powder, such arrow-root flour or other farinaceous powder not being baked, scorched, roasted, or altered from its natural state, except by being mixed with cocoa as aforesaid, and to sell such cocoa-paste, broma, or other mixture: provided (a) that every such person shall enclose all such cocoa-paste, broma, and other such mixtures and preparations of cocoa, as soon as the same is made, and before the same is sold, offered, or exposed for sale, or delivered, in paper sealed and stamped,

By 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 5. "No dealer in tea, or manufacturer or dyer thereof, or pretending so to be, shall counterfeit or adulterate it, or alter or manufacture it with any drug, or mix it with any leaf or other ingredient, on pain of forfeiting the same and 100l."

By 41 Geo. III., c. 91, s. 4. "If any commodity shall be seized as manufactured in imitation of or to resemble coffee, or to serve as a substitute for coffee, or if any action shall be brought by the owner or claimer against any officer of Excise, or any person acting in his assistance, for such seizure, the proof that the commodity so seized is not manufactured in imitation of or to resemble coffee shall lie upon the owner or claimer, by the oaths of two credible witnesses."

By 4 Geo. II., c. 14, s. 11. "If any dealer in or seller of tea shall dye or manufacture any sloe-leaves, liquorice-leaves, or the leaves of tea that have been used, or the leaves of any other tree, shrub, or plant, in imitation of tea, or shall mix, colour, or stain, with terra japonica, sugar, molasses, clay, logwood, or any other ingredients, or shall sell or offer to sale, or have in his custody, any such leaves in imitation of tea, or any such stained leaves, or tea mixed with any other ingredient, he shall forfeit for every pound weight thereof 10l."

By 17 Geo. III., c. 29, s. 1. "If any person, whether he be a dealer in or seller of tea or not, shall dye or manufacture any sloe-leaves, liquorice-leaves, or the leaves of tea that have been used, or the leaves of any ash, elder, or other tree, shrub, or plant, in imitation of tea, or shall mix or colour any such leaves with terra japonica, copperas, sugar, molasses, clay, logwood, or any other ingredients, or shall sell or offer to sale, or have in his custody, any such leaves dyed or manufactured or dyeing or manufacturing in imitation of tea, and shall be thereof convicted upon the oath of one witness before one justice, he shall, for every pound of such leaves so dyed or manufactured, or dyeing or manufacturing, in imitation of tea, and for every pound of such mixed, stained, or dyed leaves of tea, forfeit 5l.; and on nonpayment thereof such justice shall commit him to the common gaol, for any time not exceeding twelve months, nor less than six, or until the penalty and charges shall be paid."

Sect. 2. "That from and after the said 1st day of June, 1777, if any person or persons shall have in his, her, or their custody or possession, any quantity (exceeding six pounds' weight) of sloe-leaves, or the leaves of ash, elder, or any other tree, shrub, or plant, green or manufactured, and shall not prove, to the satisfaction of the justice or justices before whom the matter shall be heard, that such leaves were gathered with the consent of the owners of the trees, shrubs, or plants from which the said leaves were taken, and that such leaves were gathered for some other use or uses, and not for the purpose of fabricating and manufacturing the same in imitation of tea, and shall be thereof convicted, by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before any one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, riding, division, district, or place where such leaves shall be so found, such person or persons shall respectively, for every pound of such green or manufactured leaves so found in his, her, or their custody or possession, as aforesaid, forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.*; and upon nonpayment thereof such justice or justices shall commit the offender to the common gaol of the county or place where the offence shall be committed, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any time not exceeding twelve months, nor less than six months, or until the penalty and charges shall be paid."

seizing, carrying away, burning, or otherwise destroying the same, or in seizing, carrying away, or selling, the said carts, waggons, boxes, bags, tubs, or other vessels or package, containing the same as aforesaid, the person or persons offending therein shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.* each, on conviction thereof, by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, riding, division, district, or place where such offence shall be committed; and upon nonpayment of the said forfeiture, such justice or justices shall commit the offender or offenders to the common gaol of the county or place where the offence shall be committed, there to remain without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding twelve months, nor less than six months, or until the penalty and charges shall be paid."

Sect. 4. "Provided always, that no such green and unmanufactured leaves, so found hid, concealed, or lodged, as aforesaid, shall be burnt or otherwise destroyed, if the owner or owners thereof shall, within twenty-four hours after such seizure, prove, to the satisfaction of the justice or justices granting the said warrant for seizing such leaves, or any other justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, riding, division, district, or place where the same shall be so seized, that the said green or unmanufactured leaves were gathered with the consent of the owner or owners of the trees, shrubs, or plants from which the said leaves were taken, and that the same were so gathered for some other use or uses, and not for the purpose of dyeing, fabricating, or manufacturing, in imitation of tea, as aforesaid; and if such proof shall, within the time aforesaid, be made to the satisfaction of the said justice or justices, then the said green or unmanufactured leaves, together with the carriages, vessels, and package in which the same shall have been so seized, shall be forthwith restored to the owner or owners thereof, by order of such justice or justices."

Sect. 5. "That all such dyed, coloured, stained, fabricated, and manufactured and other leaves aforesaid shall be deemed and adjudged to be in the custody and possession of the occupier or occupiers of the dwelling-houses, outhouses, gardens, and lands wherein or whereon the same shall be so found hid, concealed, or lodged, as aforesaid; and such occupier or occupiers of the said dwelling-houses, outhouses, gardens, and lands, shall be liable to all the pains and penalties by this act inflicted on the person or persons having such dyed, coloured, stained, fabricated, or manufactured and other leaves in his, her, or their custody or possession; if it shall be proved, to the satisfaction of the justice or justices before whom the matter shall be heard, that such leaves were lodged in such dwelling-houses, outhouses, gardens, or lands, with the privity or consent of the said occupier or occupiers thereof."

Sect. 6. "That one moiety of all and every the forfeitures hereinbefore directed to be paid in pursuance of this act shall go to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish where such offence shall be committed."

Sect. 7. "And for the more easy conviction of persons offending against this act, that in all informations and other proceedings for any of the offences aforesaid, the evidence of the inhabitants of the parish or place where the offence shall be committed shall be taken and allowed, any law, custom, rule, order, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 8. "That His Majesty's justices of the peace for the respective counties, cities, ridings, divisions, districts, or places wherein any of the offences committed against this act shall be done, are hereby authorized to put this act in execution, and to administer an oath to any such credible witness or witnesses."

Sect. 9. "That the conviction or convictions of all and every offender and offenders against this act shall be certified, by the justice or justices of the peace before whom the same shall be made, to the next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be filed amongst the records of the said sessions; and that such conviction shall be fairly written on parchment or paper, in the following form of words (as the case shall happen), or in any other form of words to the like effect; that is to say,

(6, 7 and 8.)
Coffee, Tea, &c.

Be it remembered, that on the _____ day of _____, in the year _____, A. B. was, upon the complaint of C. D., convicted before _____ of the justices of the peace for _____, in pursuance of an act passed in the seventeenth year of the reign of His Majesty King George the Third, for _____, [as the case shall be.]
Given under _____ hand and seal, the day and year above written.

Form of conviction.

Which said conviction shall be good and effectual in law to all intents and purposes, and shall not be quashed, set aside, or adjudged void or insufficient, for want of any form or words whatsoever; nor shall the same be liable to be removed by certiorari into His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, but shall be deemed and taken to be final to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Conviction not to be quashed for want of form, &c.

As to the true manufacturing, stamping, tying up of chocolate in proper quantities, and as to making it for private families from not less than half a cwt. of cocoa-nuts at one time, see 10 Geo. I., c. 10, s. 17, 18. 22—25; 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 13; 32 Geo. II. c. 10, s. 16, 17; 27 Geo. III., c. 13, s. 35—c. 31, s. 26; 6 Geo. IV., c. 118, s. 7.

True manufacturing, stamping, tying up, &c. of chocolate, and making it for private use.

By 9 Geo. II., c. 35, s. 20. "That from and after the said 24th day of June, 1736, if any person shall offer any tea, brandy, arrack, rum, or other strong waters, or spirits, to sale, not having a permit for the same, or if any hawker, pedlar, petty chapman, or any other trading person or persons going from town to town, or to other men's houses, and trading either on foot, or with any horse or horses, or other cattle, or otherwise, within the kingdom of Great Britain, shall offer any such tea, brandy, or other spirits, to sale, although such hawker, pedlar, or trading person or persons, shall have a permit for the same, it shall and may be lawful to and for every person and persons, to whom the same shall be so offered to sale, to stop, arrest, seize, and detain all such tea, brandy, or spirits, and carry the same to the next warehouse belonging to the Customs or Excise, and to bring the person and persons so offering the same to sale before any one of His Majesty's justices of the peace, to be by him committed to prison, and prosecuted for the penalties and forfeitures incurred for such offence; and such tea, brandy, or other spirits, shall and may be prosecuted in the name of such person or persons who stopped or seized the same, in like manner as if the said goods had been seized by any officer of the Customs or Excise; and after condemnation of the goods, and commitment of the persons so offending as aforesaid, the persons so seizing the same as aforesaid shall be entitled to one-third part of the gross produce of the sale of such goods, which the commissioners of the Customs and Excise respectively are to cause to be paid accordingly; and in case such person or persons, so seizing the said goods, shall desire it, the said commissioners shall in the mean time, till the said goods can be publicly sold, cause one shilling for every pound of tea, and one shilling for every gallon of brandy so seized, to be paid or advanced to such person or persons, upon a certificate under the hand of such justice or justices of such offender or offenders being committed to prison, and after the sale of such goods the moneys so paid or advanced shall be replaced out of the produce of such sale; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Tea, brandy, &c. offered to sale, with or without a permit, may be stopped on suspicion.

The person stopping such goods may prosecute in his own name, and on recovery be entitled to a third part of the produce at sale.

Commissioners to advance 1s. per pound for tea, and 1s. per gallon for brandy, so seized, to the prosecutor, till sale.

By 10 Geo. I., c. 10, s. 16. "That from and after the said 24th day of June, 1724, no coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, or chocolate, exceeding the quantity of six pounds' weight, shall be removed or carried from any part of this kingdom, by land or by water, without a permit or certificate, signed by one or more of the officers for the said inland duties hereby set and imposed, signifying and certifying the names and places of abode of the buyer and seller, and expressing the quantity and species of the commodity so permitted or certified for, and that His Majesty's inland duties chargeable by Any quantity exceeding the weight of six pounds carrying without such permit or certificate is forfeited.

(6, 7 and 8.)
*Coffee, Tea,
&c.*

The time to be limited by the officer for such permit or certificate to be in force.

or not returning the permits, treble the value.

If there does not appear a sufficient decrease to answer the removal, officer to seize a like quantity of the brandy, &c.

No permit for removal, but by direction of him from whose stock commodities are to be removed.

Penalty 50l. or imprisonment.

All sellers of, &c. and keepers of coffee and chocolate houses, to keep accounts of quantities less this act upon coffee, tea, and chocolate, have been duly paid and satisfied, or that the cocoa-nuts have been duly entered as aforesaid, or that the same have been condemned as forfeited, or were part of such stock in hand as aforesaid; upon pain of forfeiting the coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, or chocolate which shall be found carrying from one place to another without such permit or certificate, together with the canisters, bags, jars, tubs, boxes, casks, and other vessels or package whatsoever containing the same; which permit or certificate shall be left with the officer of the division to which the same shall be carried, to prevent the seizure thereof; in which permits or certificates the officers who grant the same shall express and limit the time for which the same shall continue in force."

By 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 10. "That from and after the said 24th day of June, 1725, if any person or persons whatsoever shall take out any permit or permits from the officers employed in the said duties or any of them, for removing of any of the said commodities from one place to another; and if, within the times limited in such permit or permits respectively, the party or parties, by or for whom such permit or permits shall be so taken out, shall not either actually and really send away all the commodities by such permit or permits authorized thereby to be sent away, pursuant to the true intent and meaning thereof, or, in default of so sending away such commodities, shall not before the expiration of the time limited in and by such permit and permits, respectively, return such permit and permits to the officer or officers from whom the same was had; then, and in every such respective case and cases, the person or persons taking out such permit or permits, or for whose use such permit or permits shall be taken out, shall, for every gallon of brandy, arrack, rum, spirits, and strong waters, and for every pound weight of coffee, tea, and cocoa-nuts, mentioned in such permit or permits, and not removed according to the purport thereof, forfeit and lose treble the value thereof, to be estimated according to the highest rate of the like commodities at the time when such forfeiture shall be incurred: and if such permit or permits are not so returned, as aforesaid, and in case, upon taking an account by any of the officers for the said duties upon brandy, arrack, rum, spirits, and strong waters, and for the said inland duties of the stock of the coffee, tea, and cocoa-nuts remaining in the hands or custody of the person or persons from or out of whose stock the commodities mentioned in such permit or permits as aforesaid are thereby authorized to be removed, there shall not appear a sufficient decrease to answer the removal of the commodities mentioned in such permit or permits as aforesaid, respectively; then, and in such case, the respective person or persons, from or out of whose stock the said commodities mentioned in the said permit or permits shall be authorized to be removed, shall forfeit and lose the like quantities of the respective commodities, so permitted to be removed, and not removed according to such permission, to be seized and taken by the officers for the said respective duties, for his Majesty's use, out of the like commodities then in the possession of the person or persons forfeiting the same. Provided always, that no person or persons whatsoever shall demand, take, or receive any permit or permits from any officer or officers for the said respective duties, for the removal of any of the said commodities from one place to another, without the special direction in writing of the person or persons or the known servant or servants of the person or persons from or out of whose stock the said commodities are to be removed, upon pain of forfeiting for every such offence therein the sum of 50l.; or in default of the payment thereof, shall suffer imprisonment for and during the space of three months, without bail or mainprize."

But by 9 Geo. IV., c. 44, s. 5, permits for the removal of coffee or cocoa are no longer necessary.

By 10 Geo. I., c. 10, s. 35. "That for the better ascertaining the quantities of all coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, and chocolate, which shall from time to time be sold, all sellers and dealers therein, or in any of them, and all makers of chocolate, and all coffeehouse-keepers and chocolate-house-keepers, who shall sell or consume the same, or any of them, in small quantities under the weight of six pounds, shall, and are hereby obliged and directed, from time to time, after the said 24th day of June, 1724, to keep an account of all such coffee, tea, chocolate, and cocoa-nuts which they or any of them respectively shall so sell or consume in small quantities in each day, and shall every night enter in a book, to be kept for that purpose, an account of the gross quantities of the said several commodities which have been by him, her, or them respectively so retailed or consumed in that day in small quantities under the said weight of six pounds; and the said sellers or dealers in coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, and chocolate, and coffeehouse-keepers and chocolatehouse-keepers, shall also keep one other book, wherein they shall respectively enter each parcel of coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, or chocolate, above the weight of six pounds, which they shall respectively sell in each day; which said parcels of coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, or chocolate, above the weight of six pounds, shall not be removed out of the respective sellers' custody, without a permit or certificate signed by some officer for the said duties, expressing the quantity and quality of the coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, or chocolate so sold, and the name of the person so selling and the persons so buying the same, and the place to which the same is intended to be carried; and that the duties by this act charged on the coffee, tea, and chocolate, were paid, or that the cocoa-nuts were entered, or that the same were condemned as forfeited, or were part of the stock in hand of some person or persons, expressing their names, of which an account had been taken on or before the said 24th day of June, 1724; which said books shall be and are hereby directed to be prepared for the making such entry as aforesaid, and delivered, upon demand, unto the respective sellers and dealers in coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, and chocolate, by the commissioners for the said inland duties, or such person or persons as they the same commissioners for the said inland duties shall for that purpose direct and appoint. Provided always, that no such seller or dealer as aforesaid shall have in his, her, or their custody more than one such book of each sort at a time; and when the said books in their custody shall be filled up, the same are hereby directed, from time to time, to be returned to the respective officer or officers for the said inland duties from whom the same were respectively received, upon the oath, or, in case of a quaker, upon the solemn affirmation of such sellers or dealers as aforesaid, or his, her, or their servant or servants, who kept the same, and made the entries therein, of the truth of such entries, according to the best of his, her, or their knowledge and belief; and one or more new book or books shall thereupon be delivered to such respective sellers or dealers, in the room of such book or books so returned, and so toties quoties, as often as such book or books shall be filled up with such entries; which said books so kept by such respective sellers or dealers shall, from time to time, lie open to be perused by the officers for the said inland duties hereby granted, the better to enable them to make their charges of such duties, and keep their stocks of the increase and decrease of the respective commodities charged therewith. Provided always, that if any such seller or dealer in coffee, tea, cocoa-nuts, or chocolate, shall neglect or refuse to keep such books and make such entries therein, or to permit the said officers for the said duties to inspect them, or not return the said books according to the direction of this act, or shall make any false entry in such book or books, he, she, or they shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Duties.

These duties are now collected according to the general regulations and provisions of the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, ante, p. 226; and 1 W. IV., c. 64, ante, 347.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 111, all former duties of Customs were repealed, and new duties enacted. Ante, p. 113.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 1, all former duties on Excise licences are repealed; and by s. 2 new duties are imposed, ante, 245; for which, as applying to persons selling cyder or perry by retail, vide ante, title Ale and Beer; and see 1 W. IV., c. 64, ante, 350.

The several general regulations respecting the duties, licences, &c. as to the general sale of beer and cyder by retail, contained in the statute 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, are stated ante, 249 to 262.

Licences.

By 1 W. IV., c. 51, ante, 333, the rates, duties, and drawbacks on cyder in the united kingdom are not to be collected during the life of William the IVth.

By 1 W. IV., c. 64, s. 30, licences to retail cyder may be granted under the regulations of that act on payment of 1*l.* 1*s.* duty. Ante, 350.

By 3 Geo. III., c. 1, s. 25. “Every dealer in and retailer of cyder and perry, and other person receiving into his custody either of them for sale,

Dealers in cyder,
&c. to make entry of their storehouses.

10. Cyder, Perry, &amp;c.

Factors are to enter at the next office of Excise their names and storehouses, three days before they make sale of any cyder or perry consigned them, on forfeiture of 50*l.* for every unentered storehouse made use of; and they are subjected to all the regulations, penalties, and provisions, which dealers in, and retailers of, cyder and perry are subject to.

All persons receiving any cyder or perry into their custody for sale are deemed factors, and chargeable with the said duty; unless the same was made from fruit of their own growth, or were otherwise duly charged.

Persons buying cyder or perry, or fruit to make into cyder or perry, and selling what they so buy or make, are deemed retailers.

and every person who shall buy any fruit to make into cyder or perry for sale, shall make entry of his storehouses, cellars, and other places, at the Excise office within the district, on pain of 50*l.*"

By 6 Geo. III., c. 14, s. 9. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1766, every such factor or agent, or factors or agents, so having, receiving, or taking any cyder or perry into his, her, or their custody, possession, or power, to sell or dispose of, shall, at least three days before he, she, or they shall begin to sell or dispose of the same, make a true and particular entry in writing, at the office of Excise next to the place where such cyder or perry shall be intended to be sold or disposed of, of the respective name and names of such factor or agent, factors or agents, and of every storehouse, warehouse room, cellar, or other place wherein he, she, or they have laid or kept, or intend to lay or keep, any cyder or perry; and if any such factor or agent, factors or agents, shall, contrary to the direction of this act, make use of any warehouse, storehouse, room, cellar, or other place, for the laying or keeping any cyder or perry, without having made such entry as aforesaid, he, she, or they shall respectively forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.* for every such storehouse, room, cellar, vault, or other place which, from and after the said 5th day of July, 1766, shall be made use of without entry as aforesaid; and all and every such factor or agent, factors or agents, so receiving cyder or perry to sell or dispose of as aforesaid, shall be subject and liable, and is and are hereby declared to be subject and liable, to all the clauses, provisos, regulations, fines, penalties, forfeitures, rules, methods, matters, and things, any dealer or dealers in, or retailer or retailers of, cyder or perry, are subject and liable to by this or any other act or acts of parliament now in force for the regulating and enforcing, managing, raising, levying, collecting, paying, mitigating, adjudging, ascertaining, and recovering the duties on cyder and perry."

Sect. 5. "That all and every person and persons who shall receive into his, her, or their custody or possession any cyder or perry, to be by him, her, or them, sold or disposed of, shall be deemed to be, and is and are hereby declared to be, a factor or agent, factors or agents, within the intent of the last-mentioned clause, and chargeable as such with the said duty of 16*s.* 8*d.* per hogshead; unless he, she, or they, so receiving the same, shall and do make due proof<sup>(a)</sup> that such cyder or perry was made from fruit of his, her, or their own growth respectively, and not from bought fruit; or unless it shall appear by a certificate under the hand of the proper officer or officers of Excise, accompanying the said cyder or perry, that the duties imposed by this and all former act or acts of parliament now in force had been charged on the same."

Sect. 11. "That all and every person or persons who shall buy any cyder or perry, or any fruit to make into cyder or perry, and shall sell any of the cyder or perry so bought or made by the hogshead, or any greater or lesser measure, or shall sell any quantity of cyder or perry, or either of them, in less quantity than twenty gallons at a time, whether the same be made from fruit of his, her, or their own growth, or from bought fruit, shall be deemed and taken to be a dealer or dealers in, and retailer or retailers of, cyder or perry, within the intent and meaning of this act, and shall be chargeable with the several duties hereby granted for such cyder or perry so made and sold respectively."

Sect. 13. "That all and every such dealer or dealers in, and retailer or retailers of, cyder or perry made from fruit of his, her, or their own growth, shall be subject and liable, and is hereby declared to be subject and liable, in respect of such cyder or perry so made, to all the clauses, provisoes, regulations, fines, penalties, forfeitures, rules, methods, matters, and things, which any dealer in, or retailer of, cyder or perry, is subject and liable to, by this or any other act or acts of parliament now in force for the regulating, enforcing, managing, raising, levying, collecting, paying, mitigating, adjudging, ascertaining, and recovering the duties on cyder or perry."

Dealers in, and retailers of, cyder and perry from fruit of their own growth, are subjected to like regulations, penalties, and provisions, as other dealers and retailers.

Sect. 15. "And whereas great frauds have been committed by dealers in, and retailers of, cyder or perry, by sending and removing, or causing or procuring to be sent or removed, great quantities of cyder and perry from the makers thereof immediately to the person or persons who contract for the same with, or order the same from, such dealers in or retailers of cyder or perry, whereby the duties thereon have not been charged, as such cyder and perry never comes into the possession of such dealers or retailers, and the like frauds may be committed by such factors and agents if proper provision is not made for prevention thereof; that from and after the said 5th day of July, 1766, if any dealer or dealers in, or retailer or retailers of, cyder or perry, or any such factor or factors, agent or agents, shall remove or send, or cause or procure to be removed or sent, any cyder or perry, from the maker or makers thereof, to the person or persons buying or contracting for or ordering the same, without the duties thereon have been first charged, and without a certificate to accompany the same, signed by the proper officer of Excise (which certificate he is hereby required to give, without fee or reward, to the person or persons desiring the same), signifying the quantity of cyder or perry so sent or removed, and the number of casks or other package containing the same, and that the duties due thereon had been charged for the same, every such dealer or dealers in or retailer or retailers of cyder or perry, or factor or factors, or agent or agents, respectively, so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l*."

Dealers, retailers, or factors, sending, &c. cyder or perry from the maker to the contractor, &c. without the duties charged, and a certificate,

Sect. 16. "That the said duties by this act imposed upon cyder and perry shall and may be drawn back on the exportation of such cyder and perry, by the same means and methods, and under the same rules and directions, as the other duties, or any of them, now payable for cyder or perry, may be drawn back on the exportation thereof; and also that the said duties on cyder and perry granted by this act shall be drawn back or allowed upon the distillation of cyder and perry into low wines and spirits, by the same means and methods, and under the same rules and directions, as the other duties, or any of them, now payable for cyder or perry, may be drawn back or allowed upon the distillation thereof: and in case any cyder or perry which hath been charged with and hath paid the said duties, or any of them, granted by this act, shall hereafter, by being unfit for sale as cyder or perry, be charged with the duties on vinegar, it shall be lawful for three or more of the commissioners of Excise for the time being, or two justices of the peace within their respective jurisdictions, on proof that such cyder or perry hath been charged with and paid the said duties, or any of them, granted by this act, and that the same cyder or perry hath also been charged with the duty on vinegar, to discharge or allow such of the duties granted by this act as shall have been charged thereon, which they are hereby required to do."

These duties are to be drawn back on exportation and distillation; and also where cyder or perry become unfit for sale as such, and shall be charged with the duties on vinegar.

Sect. 17. "That from henceforth, in case any maker or retailer of vinegar, or of any of the commodities aforesaid, shall, upon due request or demand made by the gauger or officer in the daytime, or if by night, then in the presence of a constable, refuse to permit such gauger or officer to enter and come into his or their house, storehouse, or other place belonging to or used by such maker or retailer of vinegar, or of any other the liquors or commodities aforesaid, and to take account of any of the liquors or commodities aforesaid; in every such case such maker of vinegar, or any other of the liquors or commodities aforesaid, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 15*l*."

By 6 Geo. III., c. 14, s. 17. "That if, from and after the said 5th day of July, 1766, any person or persons whatsoever shall assault, resist, oppose, molest, or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in the due seizing or securing of any cyder or perry which, by any officer or officers of Excise, shall or may be seized by virtue or in pursuance of this act, or in the execution of any of the powers or authorities by this act given or granted, or shall by force or violence rescue, or cause to be rescued, any cyder or perry, after the same shall have been seized by such officer or officers as aforesaid, or shall attempt or endeavour so to do, or after such seizure shall stave, break, or otherwise destroy or damage any casks, vessels, or package wherein the same shall be contained, all and every the party or parties so offending shall, for every such offence respectively, forfeit and lose the sum of 40*l*."

By 8 & 9 W. III., c. 19, s. 9. "That if any common brewer, or maker of cyder, brewing or making any beer, ale, or cyder for sale, shall at any time after the said 10th day of April deliver to any distiller or vinegar-maker any wash, tilts, ale, beer, vinegar, beer, or cyder, without first giving notice to the gauger or gaugers within whose division or district such brewer or maker of cyder doth or shall inhabit, what quantity of wash, tilts, ale, beer, vinegar, beer, or cyder he intends to deliver, and when and to whom he intends to deliver the same, every such common brewer or maker of cyder shall forfeit and lose for every barrel of wash, tilts, ale, beer, vinegar, beer, and cyder, delivered without such notice given as aforesaid, the sum of 20*s*."

By 6 Geo. III., c. 14, s. 8. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1766, the master or other person having the charge of any ship, vessel, barge, or trow, in which shall be shipped or put on board any cyder or perry, to be carried from one part of this kingdom to another, shall, within three days after his arrival at any port or place where any part of such cyder or perry is to be delivered, give to the proper officer of Excise, to be appointed for that purpose by the respective commissioners of Excise in England and Scotland respectively, a just and true account in writing of the whole quantity of cyder and perry by him received on board; distinguishing in such account the names and places of abode of the persons by whom the same, and every part thereof, was put on board, and at what place; and the names and places of abode of the persons to whom the same, and every part thereof, is or was sent, directed, or consigned; and where the same, and every part thereof, was to be delivered: and in case the master or other person having the charge of any such ship, vessel, barge, or trow, shall neglect or refuse to give such account as aforesaid, according to the directions of this act, or shall dispose of or deliver any part of the cyder or perry by him taken on board at sea, or in any other place, except the place to which the same was consigned (unavoidable accidents excepted), the person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l.*; and such master or other person having the charge of such ship, vessel, barge, or trow, shall, within twenty-one days after his arrival at the place of delivery, land or cause to be landed all the cyder and perry then on board to be delivered there, on pain of forfeiting all such cyder and perry which shall not be landed according to the directions of this act; which shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, together with the casks or other package containing the same."

By 12 C. II., c. 24, s. 29. "That all common brewers of beer and ale shall once in every week, and all inn-keepers, alehouse-keepers, victuallers, and other retailers of beer, ale, cyder, perry, metheglin, or strong water, brewing, making, or retailing the same, shall once in every month make true and particular entries at the office of Excise within the limits of which the said commodities and manufactures are made, of all beer, ale, perry, cyder, metheglin, strong-water, or other the liquors aforesaid, which they or any of them shall brew, make, or retail in that week and month respectively as aforesaid."

Sect. 30. "That all such common brewers who do not once a week make due and particular entries shall forfeit 10*l.*: and that every such inn-keeper who doth not make true and particular entries once a month shall forfeit 5*l.*: and that every alehouse-keeper, victualler, or other retailer, who doth not once a month make due and particular entries, shall forfeit 20*s.*"

Sect. 31. "That every common brewer who shall not pay and clear off within a week after he made his entry, or ought to have made his entry, as aforesaid, shall pay double the value of the duty; and that every inn-keeper, alehouse-keeper, victualler, or other retailer, who shall not pay and clear off within a month after he made his entry, or ought to have made his entry, as aforesaid, shall pay double the value of the duty: the said respective forfeitures to be levied upon their goods and chattels, in such manner and form as hereafter in this act is ordained and directed."

Sect. 32. "That no such person as aforesaid shall be compelled by the commissioners or sub-commissioners of the Excise to travel for the making of the said entries or payment of the said duties or other cause whatsoever touching or concerning the same, if he live in a market-town, out of the said town; if he live out of a market-town, then to no other place than to the next market-town to his habitation in the same county, on the market-day."

12 C. II., c. 23, s. 20. "And for the avoiding of all incertainty and dispute touching the returns made or to be made by the gaugers of any beer or ale so brewed as aforesaid, be it enacted and declared by the authority aforesaid, that every six-and-thirty gallons of beer taken by the gauge according to the standard of the ale quart, four whereof shall make the gallon, remaining in the custody of the chamberlains of His Majesty's Exchequer, shall be reckoned, accounted, and returned by the gauger for a barrel of beer; and every two-and-thirty gallons of ale taken by the gauge according to the same standard shall be in like manner reckoned, accounted, and returned for a barrel of ale; and all other the liquors aforesaid according to the wine gallon."

12 C. II., c. 24, s. 34. "That every six-and-thirty gallons of beer taken by the gauge according to the standard of the ale-quart, four whereof shall make the gallon, remaining in the custody of the chamberlains of His Majesty's Exchequer, shall be reckoned, accounted, and returned by the gauger for

"That from and after the fifth day of July, 1795, all and every maker and makers of glass, before he, she, or they shall begin to make any glass, or to mix or prepare any materials for the making of glass, shall, in pursuance of this act, make true and particular entry in writing of all workhouses, furnaces, pots, pot-chambers, annealing arches, warehouses, rooms, and other places by him, her, or them respectively intended to be made use of for the making or keeping of glass, or for the making or keeping of any pot or pots for the making of glass, or for the keeping of materials mixed and prepared for the making of glass, at the office of Excise within the compass or limits whereof such respective workhouses, furnaces, pots, pot-chambers, annealing arches, warehouses, rooms, and other places respectively shall be situate, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 200*l*. for every workhouse, furnace, pot, pot-chamber, annealing arch, warehouse, room, or other place which he, she, or they shall make use of for the making or keeping of glass, or for the making or keeping of any pot or pots for the making of glass, or for the keeping of any materials mixed or prepared for the making of glass, without having made such entry thereof as aforesaid."

By 58 Geo. III., c. 21, s. 3. "That from and after the passing of this act, no person or persons whatsoever shall make, manufacture, or keep, or erect, set up, enter, or make use of any house or place whatsoever in Great Britain for the making, manufacturing, or keeping of a certain glass called smalts, within the distance of one mile in a direct line from any house or place which shall be entered or used for the making, manufacturing, or keeping of any other glass; nor shall any person or persons whatsoever make, manufacture, or keep, or erect, set up, enter, or use any house or place whatsoever in Great Britain for making, manufacturing, or keeping any other glass within the distance of one mile in a direct line from any house or place which shall be entered or used for making, manufacturing, or keeping the said glass called smalts; nor shall any maker or manufacturer of smalts make or manufacture any other kind of glass, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 500*l*.; and all and every entries and entry of any such house or place so made use of for the making, manufacturing, or keeping of either smalts or other glass contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever." See also 59 Geo. III., c. 115, s. 8.

By 45 Geo. III., c. 30, s. 10. "That each and every person who shall make or manufacture any sort or kind of glass, or glass wares, by melting any metal, materials, cullet, or old or broken glass, in any pot, crucible, or other utensil, shall be deemed and taken to be a maker of glass, and shall be subject to all and every the provisions, rules, regulations, restrictions, and penalties to which makers of glass are now by law subject and liable; any thing in this or any other act or acts of parliament to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

By 54 Geo. III., c. 97, s. 7. "That each and every person who shall make or manufacture any kind or sort of glass ware by means of the melting or softening of any glass, or who shall melt or soften any glass, in any manner whatsoever, for the purpose of making or converting the same into any vessel, utensil, ware, or piece of household furniture, or part of any vessel, utensil, ware, or piece of household furniture, shall be deemed and taken to be a maker of glass, and shall be subject to all and every the provisions, rules, regulations, restrictions, and penalties to which makers of glass are now by law subject and liable; any thing in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

By 58 Geo. III., c. 33, s. 2. "That no person who shall carry on the trade or business of a drop-pincher only, and not make or manufacture any other kind of glass or glass wares, and who shall use and employ in such trade or business lump, paste, or cane glass only, and shall duly make entry with the proper officer of Excise of all and every workshop and workshops, room and rooms, and place and places where he shall carry on such trade or business, or keep any material or materials for that purpose, and shall from time to time produce to the officer or officers of Excise surveying such workshop, room, or place, all materials by him used or employed in such trade or business, and shall at the same time deliver to such officer an invoice or invoices for all lump, paste, or cane glass received into his custody or possession, signed by the maker and seller of such glass, or his foreman or clerk, and subscribed also by the officer of Excise surveying the glass-house where such glass was made, and shall not use or employ as aforesaid any cullet or waste glass, and shall in all other respects observe and perform the several regulations, matters, and things by law imposed for and in respect of such trade or business, except taking out a licence as a glass-maker, shall incur or be subject or liable to any penalty or forfeiture for or by reason of using or carrying on such trade or business as aforesaid without having first taken out the licence required by law for that purpose; any thing in any other act or acts to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. Provided always, that all cullet or waste glass, and all and every other material and materials for or which may be used in making any glass or glass wares, found in the custody or possession of any such person or persons as aforesaid, or any person or persons using or carrying on such trade or business as aforesaid, save and except lump, paste, or cane glass for which such invoice so subscribed shall be produced as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and the person and persons in whose custody or possession the same shall be found shall, over and above all other penalties, forfeit and lose the sum of fifty pounds."

By 35 Geo. III., c. 114, s. 2. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every the officers of Excise, at all times, by day or by night, upon his or their request, to enter into all and every the workhouses, furnaces, pot-chambers, annealing arches, warehouses, rooms, and other places whatsoever entered or made use of by any maker or makers of glass for the making, preparing, or keeping any materials for the making of glass, or for the making or keeping of glass, or for the making or keeping of any pot or pots for the making of glass, and at any such time or times, and from time to time, to inspect, examine, weigh, gauge, or otherwise take account of the metal and materials there mixed and prepared for the making of glass, as well before such metal and materials shall be put into the pot or pots, as after the same shall be put into the pot or pots, and of all glass there made or manufactured, or making or manufacturing; and also to examine, gauge, or otherwise take an account of, the capacity or content of each and every pot there found for the making of glass; and to mark and number every such pot, in such manner as he or they shall think fit; and if any person or persons whatsoever shall counterfeit or alter, or cause or procure to be counterfeited or altered, any such mark on any pot for the making of glass, or shall connive at any such mark being so counterfeited or altered, the person or persons so offending shall for each and every such offence severally forfeit and lose the sum of 500*l.*; and if any person or persons shall wilfully deface or obliterate any such mark, or cause or procure any such mark to be defaced or obliterated, or shall connive at any such mark being so defaced or obliterated, the person or persons so offending shall, for each and every such offence, severally forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

By 10 Geo. II., c. 12, s. 9. "The officer shall be permitted at all times, by day or night, to enter into the workhouse, warehouse, or other place for making glass, and to weigh and take account of the quantity of materials; and shall make report thereof to the commissioners or whom they shall appoint, leaving a copy (if demanded) under his hand for the glass-maker; and if he shall not leave such copy on demand, he shall forfeit 40*s.*"

11. Glass.

Cullet or waste glass found in the possession of such persons forfeited;

Officers of Excise may at all times enter into workhouses, &c. to gauge materials, &c. and mark pots.

Penalty of 500*l.* for counterfeiting marks, and 200*l.* for defacing them.

11. Glass.

Notice of beginning to work.

Notice to be given to the officer in writing.

Penalty.

Proviso.

New notice to be given.

Particulars of the notice to be given by glass-makers before they charge their pots.

Penalty on neglect.

No pot to be filled with metal till gauged by the officer, on penalty of 50l.

No fire to be stirred, &c. in any furnace or annealing arch, to obstruct the officer, on penalty of 100l.

By 35 Geo. III., c. 114, s. 3. "Every maker shall, four hours before he begins to light any fire to heat his annealing arch, give to the officer under whose survey he is notice in writing of his intention so to do, specifying therein every pot set in such annealing arch, with the number marked by the officer on such pot, on pain of forfeiting 20l."

By 19 Geo. II., c. 12, s. 7. "That every maker of glass, before he, she, or they do or shall begin to fill or charge any pot or pots for making of glass, shall, by the space of twelve hours next before the beginning of every such filling or charging, give to the officer or officers of the division or place where such glass is intended to be made, notice in writing of the particular time and hour when and at which such filling or charging is intended to be begun, with an account of the true weight of the metal or preparation to be made use of, and the species of glass so to be made, on pain of forfeiting and losing the sum of 50l. at every time or times when any such filling or charging shall be begun, without first giving such notice as aforesaid."

Sect. 8. "That if such intended filling or charging of such pot or pots, whereof such notice shall have been given, shall not be begun pursuant to such notice, then, and in every such case and cases, such notice or notices respectively shall be null, void, and of no effect; and every maker of glass whatsoever, who after the expiration of such times mentioned in such notice shall begin to fill or charge such pot or pots, without having first given a new or other like notice, as aforesaid, of his, her, or their intention to fill or charge such pot or pots, with an account of the true weight of the metal or preparation to be made use of, and the species of glass so to be made, shall in every such case incur and be subject to the like penalty and forfeiture as if he, she, or they had not thereof given any notice at all."

17 Geo. III., c. 39, s. 33. (a) "That every maker of glass shall, in every notice hereafter to be given, express in writing the particular time and hour when he intends to begin to fill or charge his pot or pots, and the account of the true weight of the metal or preparation to be made use of in each particular pot used for the making of glass, and the species and particular kind of glass intended to be made in each pot: and if any maker of glass shall neglect or refuse to give the notice by this present act, and the said recited act, directed and required, or after such notice given, and a gauge taken by the officer of the metal or preparation in their pots, shall, without a fresh notice in writing, put into any such pot any metal, material, or preparation whatsoever, every such maker of glass shall, in every such case, forfeit and lose the sum of 50l."

35 Geo. III., c. 114, s. 4. "That no maker or makers of glass shall, after any pot for the making of glass shall have been placed or set in the furnace, begin to fill or charge any such pot with metal, or preparation for the making of glass, until the proper officer or officers of Excise shall have previously examined and gauged such pot after the same shall have been placed or set in the furnace as aforesaid; and if any maker of glass shall, after any pot for the making of glass shall have been placed or set in the furnace, begin to fill or charge any such pot with metal, or preparation for making of glass, before the proper officer or officers of Excise shall have examined and gauged such pot, after the same shall have been so placed or set in the furnace, as aforesaid, all and every such maker and makers of glass so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 50l."

Sect. 5. "That no maker or makers of glass shall, during the space of one quarter of an hour after any officer or officers of Excise shall have entered the glass-house of any such maker or makers of glass, and shall have forbidden the same, stir or break up the fire, or add fresh coals or fuel thereto, in any furnace or annealing arch belonging to such glass-house, or wilfully raise any smoke, or other noisome or offensive vapour, whereby the officer may be hindered or obstructed in gauging or examining any pot or pots placed or set in any furnace or annealing arch, or in the examining the metal or materials in any such pot or pots in the furnace for the making of glass, or in gauging or ascertaining the quantity of any such metal or materials, or in examining or counting the vessels, utensils, or wares in any annealing arch; and if any maker or makers of glass shall, contrary to the directions hereinbefore in that behalf contained, stir up or break up the fire, or add fresh coals or fuel thereto, in any furnace or annealing arch as aforesaid, or wilfully raise any such smoke, or other noisome or offensive vapour, all and every such maker and makers of glass shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 6. "That all and every the officer and officers of Excise shall and may at all times unstop or take down any stopper from any pot or pots containing any metal or preparation for the making of glass, for the purpose of inspecting, examining, gauging, or taking account of the materials, metal, or other preparations in such pot or pots for the making of glass."

Officers may unstop pots to gauge materials.

By 47 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 30, s. 16, reciting the 19 Geo. II., c. 12, and the method prescribed therein of taking an account of metal and materials for making glass after being put into the pots, and reciting that since that act it had been the invariable practice of the officers of Excise to take such account of the quantity after the same had been put into such pots according to the following method, viz. to gauge and ascertain the dimensions of every such pot, before the same had been set in the furnace, and therefrom to calculate the quantity which every such pot was capable of containing at every inch,  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch,  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch, and fractions of an inch, and to ascertain the weight or quantity of the metal or materials at any time contained in such pot, for the making of crown or any other species of glass, by gauging or measuring the dry inches or unfilled and unoccupied space or distance between the top, rim, edge, or lip of such pot in the furnace, and the surface of the fluid, metal, or materials in such pot, and deducting the quantity of metal or materials which this space, denoted by such dry inches, or the unfilled and unoccupied part of such pot, appeared, by such original gauge or calculation, capable of containing, from the quantity of metal or materials which, according to such original gauge or calculation, the whole pot was denoted to be capable of containing, and reciting that doubts had arisen whether this method were warranted by law, enacted, "that from and after the 10th day of October, 1807, the quantity of the metal and materials mixed and prepared for the making of glass, after the same shall have been put into any such pot or pots, shall be deemed and taken to be such as the same shall by the said method be denoted to be; and the officer and officers of Excise shall make a return or report thereof in writing to the respective commissioners of Excise in Great Britain, or such person or persons as they shall respectively appoint to receive the same; and such return or report of the said officer or officers of Excise shall be a charge upon such maker or makers of glass, any thing in this or any other act or acts of parliament to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

By 51 Geo. III., c. 69, s. 5. "That all and every maker and makers of glass, before he, she, or they shall begin to anneal any glass or glass wares whatsoever, shall make true and particular entry in writing of all and every lear and lears by him, her, or them respectively intended to be made use of, for the annealing of glass, at the office of Excise within the compass or limits whereof such lear or lears respectively shall be situate, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 200*l*. for every lear which he, she, or they shall make Entry of lears.

Penalty.

11. Glass.

If makers, desirous of making common glass bottles, &c. in distinct houses, give a declaration thereof, and of their desire to pay the duty according to the weight of the bottles, the officer not to charge it on the materials in the pot. (a)

Declarations to remain in force for six months at least.

Makers delivering such declarations to make their annealing arches of a certain form, and to number them, on penalty of 100*l*.

use of for the annealing of any glass or glass wares whatsoever, without having made such entry thereof as aforesaid."

By 35 Geo. III., c. 114, s. 7. "That in case any maker or makers of common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils, shall be desirous of making common bottles, or other vessels or utensils, of common bottle metal only, in any distinct and separate glass-house and building, and to be charged with and pay the duty for or in respect of the materials or metal or other preparations made use of in the making of such common bottles, or other vessels or utensils, of common bottle metal, and shall deliver in to the surveyor or supervisor of Excise of the division or district within which his, her, or their glass-house shall be situate, a declaration in writing of his, her, or their being desirous to be charged with and pay the said duty according to the weight of the bottles, (b) or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, and specifying the particular glass-house and building in which such maker or makers shall be desirous of making the same, then and in such case it shall not be lawful to or for any officer or officers of Excise to make any charge of duty from any gauge or gauges taken by such officer or officers in any pot or pots of the materials or metal or other preparations made use of by such maker or makers in such glass-house or building for the making of common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, any thing in any act or acts of parliament contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding. Provided always, nevertheless, that every such declaration so delivered as aforesaid shall be and remain in full force for six months at the least, to be computed and reckoned from the time of the delivery thereof, and from thenceforth until the same shall be revoked or withdrawn by a note or memorandum in writing, delivered by such maker or makers of glass to the surveyor or supervisor of Excise of the division or district within which his, her, or their glass-house shall be situate."

Sect. 8. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as aforesaid, shall, and he, she, and they is and are hereby required to erect, build, make, and construct every annealing arch or oven by him, her, or them intended to be made use of in such glass-house or building as aforesaid, for the annealing of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, in a rectangular form, with the sides and ends thereof perpendicular and parallel to each other respectively, and the bottom thereof level, and with only one mouth or entrance into the same, and shall number the same progressively

(a) The stat. 35 Geo. III., c. 114, gives the maker of common glass bottles, &c. the option of being charged with the duty either according to the weight of the materials ascertained by the gauge thereof in the pots, or by weighing the pots, &c. when made; but, in case of his electing the latter mode, requires him to deliver to the officer of Excise a declaration in writing to that effect. In an information for penalties on that statute, and others in pari materia, containing counts for using false scales and weights, and counts for obstructing an officer in weighing glass, the delivery of the declaration must be proved, but the production of the instrument itself may be dispensed with, and its existence may be presumed from the defendant's being charged with, and paying the duty for six years by weighing the bottles and other vessels.

Quære, Whether the counts for the obstruction should contain the averment respecting the declaration, in order to bring the defendant within the statute; or whether, if the duties are computed by the gauge, the officers are entitled to weigh the bottles also, for the purpose of checking the account taken by the other method.

What shall not be held a misdescription of the defendant under the statute: Attorney-General v. Pemberton, M'Clel. 634.

with a durable mark; and if any such maker or makers shall erect, build, make, or construct any annealing arch or oven contrary to the directions of this act, or shall neglect or refuse to number and mark the same according to the directions of this act, or shall make use of any annealing arch or oven not constructed in the manner before directed, all and every such maker or makers so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 9. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as aforesaid, shall, at his, her, and their own expense, find, provide, and affix, a good and sufficient iron grating to the mouth or entrance of every annealing arch and oven by him, her, or them intended to be made use of for the annealing of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, such iron grating to be approved of in writing by and under the hand of the respective surveyors or supervisors of Excise of the division or district within which such annealing arch or oven shall be situate; and proper locks and keys, and all other necessary fastenings for securing and sealing every such annealing arch and oven, and the mouth or entrance and iron grating thereof, shall be provided by the respective surveyors and supervisors of Excise of such division or district, at the expense of such maker or makers; and each and every such annealing arch or oven, and the mouth or entrance and iron grating thereof, shall be securely locked, fastened, and sealed by the officer or officers of Excise under whose survey such maker or makers respectively shall from time to time be, at all times, except when such maker or makers shall be actually at work in putting, placing, or depositing therein common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, for the purpose of annealing the same therein, or when such annealing arch or oven shall be opened by the proper officer or officers of Excise in that behalf, in pursuance of such previous notice as is hereinafter directed and prescribed for opening the same, for the purpose of lighting fire in or heating the same for annealing common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, or for the purpose of drawing or taking any such common glass bottles, or such other vessels or utensils as aforesaid, from or out of such annealing arch or oven, or for the purpose of necessarily repairing the same; and if any such maker or makers shall neglect or refuse, at his, her, and their own expense, to find or provide such good and sufficient iron grating, or to affix the same in the manner herein directed, before such annealing arch or oven shall be made use of as aforesaid, or to pay for any lock, key, or other necessary fastening which shall be provided by any surveyor or supervisor of Excise, according to the directions of this act, or if any person or persons shall obstruct or hinder any officer or officers of Excise, or any person or persons by him or them employed in that behalf, in the fixing or placing any such fastening, in such manner as the said officer or officers shall direct or think expedient to answer the purposes by this act in that behalf intended, or in the locking, sealing, or securing any such annealing arch, or oven, or the mouth or entrance, or iron grating thereof, or any such fastening as aforesaid, or by any means, art, device, or contrivance whatsoever, shall open any such lock or annealing arch or oven, or the mouth, entrance, or iron grating thereof, after the same shall have been locked, sealed, fastened, or secured as aforesaid, before the same shall have been unlocked and opened by the officer of Excise, or shall wilfully break or damage any such lock, seal, or fastening, every such maker or makers, or other person or persons, so offending, shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*. Provided always, nevertheless, that no such annealing arch or oven shall be, remain, or continue unlocked or open, for any purpose or on any pretence whatever (except for the necessary repairing thereof when empty) for any greater or longer space of time than 24 hours, to be computed and reckoned from the time when the same shall have been opened Makers delivering such declaration to fix iron gratings to the mouth of annealing arches, to be approved of by the officer, &c.

Annealing arches to be locked by the officer except at certain times.

Penalty of 200*l*. for neglecting to furnish or fix iron gratings, or for obstructing officers in placing fastenings, &c.

No annealing arch to remain open more than 24 hours except for repairs.

11. Glass.

Makers of common glass bottles to alter locks, &c. when required by the surveyors or supervisors of Excise, on penalty of 100*l*.

Makers delivering declaration, to give 12 hours notice of intention to heat annealing arches.

Officers to attend to unlock them.

If fires be not lighted within an hour, the officers to lock up the arch, and fresh notice to be given.

Bottles, when blown, to be removed into the annealing arch, and placed as the officers shall approve; and bottles of different makings not to be put at the same time therein, or any other sort of glass, on penalty of 50*l*.

by the proper officer of Excise; and that it shall and may be lawful to and for any officer or officers of Excise, under whose survey such maker or makers shall then be, at the end and expiration of such 24 hours, securely to lock, fasten, and seal such annealing arch or oven, and the mouth, entrance, and iron grating thereof; any thing herein contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 10. "That where any locks, keys, or fastenings shall be provided in pursuance of this act, all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, and other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, to whom such locks, keys, and fastenings respectively shall then belong, shall at his, her, or their own expense, from time to time, and at all times, when required so to do by the respective surveyors or supervisors of Excise of the division or district in which his, her, or their glass-house shall be situate, immediately set about the altering, repairing, and amending; and shall also, within a reasonable time then next following, alter, repair, and amend the same respectively, according to such requisition; and if any such maker or makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, to whom any such locks, keys, and fastenings, or any or either of them, shall belong, shall neglect or refuse immediately to set about the altering, repairing, or amending the same, or to repair, amend, or alter the same, when thereunto required according to the directions of this act, he, she, or they shall, for each and every such neglect or refusal, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 11. "That when any maker or makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as aforesaid, shall be desirous to light, kindle, or prepare any fire to heat his, her, or their annealing arch or oven, into which any common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, are intended to be put or deposited, for the purpose of annealing the same, such maker or makers shall give to the officer of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, twelve hours notice in writing of his, her, or their intention; and upon such notice being given, such officer shall attend at the time mentioned in such notice, and shall unlock and open such annealing arch or oven, and the mouth or entrance and iron grating thereof; and if any such maker or makers shall neglect or refuse to light, kindle, or prepare such fire, within one hour after such annealing arch or oven, and the mouth or entrance and iron grating thereof, shall be opened by such officer, then such notice shall be void, and such officer shall again, immediately after the expiration of such one hour, lock up, fasten, and seal such annealing arch and oven, and the mouth or entrance and the iron grating thereof, in manner aforesaid; and such maker and makers shall give the like and a fresh notice in writing to such officer, before such annealing arch or oven, or the mouth or entrance or iron grating thereof, shall be again opened."

Sect. 12. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as aforesaid, shall, when and so soon as the same shall be severally and respectively blown or made, remove all and singular the common bottles, and other vessels and utensils of common bottle metal, by him, her, or them so blown or made, directly into such annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens, and shall there place and deposit the same in such manner and form as the officer or officers of Excise, under whose survey such maker or makers shall then be, shall approve, and so that the same may the most easily and securely be viewed, inspected, and examined, and the numbers and kinds thereof respectively ascertained in each and every such annealing arch or oven; and no such maker or makers shall at one and the same time put, place, have, or keep in any such annealing arch or oven any common bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, of different makings, or fillings or chargings of the pots, nor shall any such maker or makers put, place, or keep any other sort or species of glass or glass wares whatever, or any phials, in any such annealing arch or oven entered or made use of for the annealing of common bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal; and if any such maker or makers shall neglect or refuse to remove, when and so soon as the same shall be blown or made, any such common bottles, or other vessels or utensils respectively of common bottle metal, by him, her, or them made, directly into such annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens, or to place or deposit any such common bottles, or other vessels or utensils, in manner and form as aforesaid, or if any such maker or makers shall at one and the same time put, place, or keep in any such annealing arch or oven, any common bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, of different makings, or fillings or chargings of the pots, or put, place, have, or keep, any other sort or species of glass or glass wares whatever, or any phials, in any annealing arch or oven entered or made use of for the annealing of common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, every such maker or makers so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 50%."

Sect. 13. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as aforesaid, and having begun to work any common bottle metal from or out of any pot or pots, shall, without any unnecessary delay or interruption, continue to work such common bottle metal out of all and every the pots then charged in such glass-house or building, and shall proceed therein until the whole of the metal by him, her, or them intended to be manufactured shall be worked out of all such pots, and shall finish such working out thereof within sixteen hours next after such maker or makers shall so have begun to work out the same; and when and so soon as such metal shall have been so worked out as aforesaid, and the common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, made or manufactured therefrom, put or deposited in the annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens, such maker or makers shall, in the presence of the officer of Excise under whose survey such maker or makers shall then be, again charge each and every such pot and pots with fresh materials or preparations (other than cullet or broken glass), not less in quantity than fifty pounds weight, and shall also deliver to such officer a declaration in writing, specifying the true number of bottles, and whether the same are reputed quart or pint bottles, or bottles of any other and what, reputed measure, and the true numbers and kinds of any other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal put or deposited, and contained in each and every such annealing arch respectively; and if any such maker or makers shall neglect or refuse to work the metal from or out of such pot or pots within such sixteen hours as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to deliver such declaration in writing as last aforesaid, every such maker or makers so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100%. Provided always, nevertheless, that no such maker or makers shall incur or be liable to the said penalty of 100% for or by reason of his, her, or their not delivering a true declaration as last aforesaid, in any case where the number of bottles, vessels, or utensils respectively, of any particular kind, specified in any declaration so delivered, shall not differ from the number of bottles, vessels, or utensils respectively, so put, deposited, or contained in any such annealing arch, in any greater proportion than in the proportion of five in the hundred; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 14. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, who shall have begun to work any common bottle metal from or out of any pot in his, her, or their glass-house or building, shall be deemed and taken to

The whole of metal intended to be manufactured into common glass bottles to be worked within sixteen hours after beginning to work it from pots;

Sect. 15. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as first aforesaid, shall, and he, she, and they is and are hereby required to keep sufficient and just scales and weights at the place or places where he, she, or they shall make or manufacture glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, and shall at his, her, and their own expense, find, provide, and affix, a fit and proper hook or staple in a proper place, to be approved of in writing by and under the hands of the respective surveyors or supervisors of Excise of the division or district in which his, her, or their glass-house shall be situate, and also permit and suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same for the purpose of weighing and taking an account of the bottles, and other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, which shall at any time be in the possession of such maker or makers of glass; and if any such maker or makers shall neglect to keep such scales and weights, or either of them, or shall not, at his, her, or their own expense, find, provide, and affix a fit and proper hook or staple in a proper and convenient place, to be approved of in writing by and under the hands of the respective surveyors or supervisors of Excise of the division or district in which his, her, or their glass-house shall be situate, or shall not permit or suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same, he, she, or they shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 50*l*.; and if any such maker or makers of glass shall, in the weighing of any such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, make use of, or cause, or procure, or suffer to be made use of, any false, unjust, or insufficient scales or weights, or shall practise any art, device, or contrivance, by which any such officer or officers may be hindered or prevented from taking the just and true weight of any such glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, then and in every such case such maker or makers shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l*., with all such false, unjust, or insufficient scales and weights respectively, and the same shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 16. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as first aforesaid, and being desirous to draw or take any glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, from or out of any annealing arch or arches or oven or ovens to him, her, or them belonging, shall, by the space of twelve hours next before the beginning to draw or take any such glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils, from or out of any such annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens, give to the officer of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, a notice in writing of his, her, or their intention, specifying each particular arch or oven, and the number thereof, from and out of which it is intended to take such common bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, and the particular time and hour at which it is so intended to begin to draw or take the same from or out of such annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens; and upon such notice being given, such officer shall attend at the time mentioned in such notice, and shall unlock and open such annealing arch and arches, and oven and ovens, for the purpose aforesaid; and such officer shall attend to see such glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils, respectively drawn or taken from and out of such annealing arch and arches, and oven and ovens; and such maker or makers shall immediately on such officer's attendance begin to draw and take, and shall proceed and continue, without any unnecessary delay or interruption, to draw and take, from and out of such annealing arch and arches, or oven or ovens, the whole of the bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, and shall draw and take the whole of such bottles, and other vessels and utensils respectively, from and out of such annealing arch and arches, and oven and ovens, within the space of four hours, to be computed and reckoned from the time of such beginning to draw or take such bottles, or other vessels or utensils, from and out of any such annealing arch or oven as aforesaid; and such maker or makers shall, immediately on such bottles, and other vessels and utensils respectively, being so drawn or taken from or out of such annealing arch, or oven, proceed to weigh the whole thereof with such scales and weights as aforesaid, in the presence of such officer, and such weight shall be deemed and taken to be the weight of the materials or metal, or other preparations, from which such bottles, or other vessels or utensils respectively, shall have been made; and such maker or makers shall be charged with and pay the duty for or in respect of such materials or metal, or other preparations, according to such weight: and if any such maker or makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having given such notice, and begun to draw or take any such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils, from or out of his, her, or their annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens, shall not proceed and continue, without any unnecessary delay or interruption, to draw and take the whole of such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils respectively of common bottle metal, from and out of such annealing arch and arches, and oven and ovens, or shall not draw and take the whole of such bottles, or other vessels or utensils respectively, from and out of such annealing arch and arches, and oven and ovens, within the space of four hours, to be computed and reckoned as aforesaid, then and in every such case such maker or makers so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and if any such maker or makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having given any such notice as last aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to begin to draw or take such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils respectively, from or out of his, her, or their annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens, immediately after such annealing arch or arches, or oven or ovens, and the mouths or entrances and iron gratings thereof, shall be opened by such officer, then such notice shall be void, and such officer shall again immediately lock up, fasten, and seal each and every such annealing arch or oven, and the mouth or entrance, and iron grating thereof, in manner aforesaid, and such maker and makers shall give the like and a fresh notice in writing to such officer before any such annealing arch, or oven, or the mouth or entrance or iron grating thereof, shall be again opened. Provided always, nevertheless, that no such maker or makers of common glass, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, shall be at liberty to give any such notice to draw or take any such common bottles, or other vessels or utensils respectively, from or out of any of his, her, or their annealing arches or ovens, except in the daytime, and that between the hours of eight in the morning and six in the afternoon; and that every notice given for the drawing or taking any such common bottles, or other vessels or utensils respectively, from or out of any annealing arch or oven at any hour or time, other than in the daytime, and that between the hours of eight in the morning and six in the afternoon, shall and the same is hereby declared to be null and void, to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Bottles, when taken out, to be weighed in the presence of the officer.

Penalty of 100*l.* for delaying to draw, or not clearing out the whole in four hours.

If makers neglect to begin drawing bottles out of annealing arches immediately on their being opened, fresh notice to be given.

No notice to be given for drawing out bottles but between certain hours.

Sect. 17. " Provided also, that in the weighing, as aforesaid, of any such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, the turn of the scale shall be given in favour of the crown; and in lieu thereof there shall be allowed to such maker or makers of such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, one pound weight upon each and every one hundred pounds of such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal."

Sect. 18. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as first aforesaid, shall, when and so often as he, she, or they shall be thereunto required by the officer or officers of such Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, with a sufficient number of his, her, or their servants, aid and assist, to the utmost of his, her, or their power, such officer or officers in weighing and taking an account of all common glass bottles, and other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, of such maker or makers, on pain of forfeiting for every neglect or refusal the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 19. "And whereas, by an act made in the 17 Geo. III., c. 39, amongst other things, for the better collecting the duties upon glass, it was enacted, that in pots used for the making of common bottles, and of other vessels or utensils thereinbefore mentioned, to be made of common bottle metal, an allowance should be made to the makers thereof of one-fifth part of the metal or other materials contained therein; and whereas it is expedient to repeal the said recited allowance; be it therefore enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that the said recited allowance shall be, and the same is hereby repealed, and no such allowance shall hereafter be made."

Sect. 20. "That no maker or makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as first aforesaid, shall convey away any common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, from any annealing arch or oven, before the proper officer of Excise shall have weighed the same, or shall neglect or refuse to produce any such common glass bottles, vessels, or utensils to such officer, that he may weigh the same, according to the directions of this act; and if any such maker or makers shall convey away any common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, from any annealing arch or oven before the proper officer of Excise shall have weighed the same, or shall neglect or refuse to produce any such common glass bottles, vessels, or utensils to such officer, that he may weigh the same, according to the directions of this act, every such maker or makers of glass shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 21. "That all and every maker and makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as first aforesaid, shall from time to time, and at all times, keep all common glass bottles, and all other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, in his, her, or their custody or possession (and which shall not have been weighed by the officer of Excise, according to the directions of this act), separate and apart from all common glass bottles, and other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, which shall have been weighed, and from all other glass wares whatsoever, upon pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 22. "That if any maker or makers of common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as first aforesaid, shall, for the annealing of any common glass bottles or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, make use of any private or concealed annealing arch, oven, utensil, or place whatever, other than his, her, or their known annealing arch or arches entered for that purpose, or if any such maker or makers shall fraudulently remove or convey away any common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, before the same shall have been weighed by the proper officer or officers of Excise, or shall fraudulently hide or conceal any common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, each and every such maker and makers so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 500*l*."

Sect. 23. "That no maker or makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, having delivered such declaration as first aforesaid, shall make or manufacture, within the same glass-house or building by him, her, or them entered or used for the making or manufacturing of common glass bottles, or in any glass-house or building adjoining thereto, any phials, or any other sort or species of glass or glass wares whatever, except common bottles, and other vessels and utensils of common bottle metal, which vessels and utensils shall be such only as were, immediately before the passing of this act, usually made of common bottle metal; and if any such maker or makers of common glass bottles, or of other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, shall make or manufacture, within the same glass-house or building by him, her, or them entered or used for the making or manufacturing of common glass bottles, or in any glass-house or building adjoining thereto, any phials, or any other sort or species of glass or glass wares, except common bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal as aforesaid, every such maker or makers respectively shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

No phials, &c. to be made in any building entered for making common glass bottles, or in any adjoining building, on penalty of 200*l*.

Sect. 24. "That if any officer or officers of Excise shall have cause to suspect that any common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, which have been fraudulently removed or conveyed away before the same shall have been weighed by the proper officer or officers of Excise, according to the directions of this act, shall be deposited, lodged, hid, or concealed, in any place or places whatsoever, then and in such case, if such place or places shall be within the cities of London or Westminster, or within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London, upon oath made by such officer or officers before the commissioners of Excise in England for the time being, or any two or more of them, or, in case such place shall be in any other part of Great Britain, upon oath made by such officer or officers before one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, or place where such officer or officers shall suspect the same to be deposited, lodged, hid, or concealed (which respective oaths they the said commissioners of Excise, or any two or more of them, and justice or justices of the peace respectively, are hereby authorized and empowered to administer), setting forth the ground of his or their suspicion, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said commissioners of Excise, or any two or more of them, or the justice or justices of the peace respectively (as the case may require) before whom such oath shall be made, if they or he shall judge it reasonable, by special warrant or warrants under his and their respective hands and seals, to authorize and empower such officer or officers by day or by night, but if in the nighttime in the presence of a constable or other lawful officer of the peace, to enter into all and every such place or places where he or they shall so suspect such common glass bottles or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal to be deposited, lodged, hid, or concealed, and to seize and carry away all such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, which he or they shall then and there find so deposited, lodged, hid, or concealed, as forfeited; and if any person or persons whatsoever shall let, obstruct, or hinder any such officer or officers so authorized or empowered, or any other person or persons acting in his or their aid or assistance, in the execution of such warrant, from entering any such place or places where such officer or officers shall so suspect such common glass bottles, or other vessels or utensils of common bottle metal, to be so deposited, lodged, hid, or concealed, or in seizing or carrying away the same, or in the due execution of any such warrant, the person or persons so offending shall for each and every such offence severally forfeit the sum of 200*l*."

On oath of ground of suspicion that any bottles have been removed before being weighed, officers may by warrant search suspected places, and seize the bottles, &c.

Sect. 25. "That if any person or persons shall obstruct or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in the execution of any of the powers or authorities to him or them given or granted by this or any other act or acts of nor to the unstopping them within thirty-six hours from the time of beginning to charge them.

On giving six hours previous notice, forty pounds of metal which has paid the duty may be put into any new pot, in the presence of the officer, for the purpose of glazing it, notice, shall be deemed and taken to be a beginning to fill and charge such pot or pots, according to and under such notice, any thing in any former act or acts of parliament contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 2. "That every maker of flint glass who shall give any such notice for beginning to fill or charge any pot or pots for the making of flint glass shall, within six hours next after the time and hour at which he, she, or they shall begin to fill or charge such pot or pots, put into such pot or pots one-fourth part at the least of the true weight of the metal or preparation specified in such notice as being to be made use of in the making of flint glass, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 50*l* for every neglect or refusal thereof."

Sect. 3. "That it shall not be lawful for any maker or makers of flint glass to unstop or take down any stopper from his, her, or their pot or pots, containing any metal or preparation for the making of flint glass, unless notice in writing shall, by the space of one hour next before he, she, or they shall so unstop such pot or pots, or take down any such stopper from any such pot or pots, be given to the officer or officers of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, of his, her, or their intention so to do, specifying therein the particular time and hour when and at which any pot or pots is or are intended to be unstopped, or any such stopper or stoppers is or are intended to be taken down, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 50*l* for every neglect or refusal to give such notice as aforesaid."

Sect. 4. "That if any such pot or pots, so intended to be unstopped, and whereof such notice shall have been given, shall not be begun to be unstopped pursuant to such notice, then, and in every such case and cases, such notice or notices respectively shall be null, void, and of no effect, and all and every maker and makers of flint glass, who, after the expiration of the time mentioned in such notice, shall unstop or take down any such stopper from any such pot or pots, without having first given a new or like notice as aforesaid of his, her, or their intention to unstop or take down any such stopper or stoppers from any such pot or pots, shall, in every such case, incur and be subject to the like penalty and forfeiture as if he, she, or they had not thereof given any notice at all."

Sect. 5. "That nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to extend, to subject any maker or makers of flint glass to the said penalty of 50*l*, for or by reason of his, her, or their unstopping or taking down any stopper from any such pot which may happen to crack or break whilst the same is filled or charged with any metal or preparation, for the sole purpose of preventing the loss of such metal or preparation, or from any other pot or pots, for the sole purpose of discovering such broken pot or pots, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 6. "That nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to extend, to subject any maker or makers of flint glass to the said penalty of 50*l*, for or by reason of his, her, or their unstopping or taking down any stopper or stoppers from any pot or pots, during the time of the filling or charging any such pot or pots, and within thirty-six hours from the time of his, her, or their having begun to fill or charge such pot or pots, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 7. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every maker and makers of flint glass (on his, her, or their giving to the officer or officers of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, six hours previous notice in writing of his, her, or their intention so to do) to glaze, or cause to be glazed, any new pot or pots previously gauged and taken an account of by the proper officer or officers of Excise, and specified in such notice, and for that purpose to take from and out of any other pot any quantity of metal, on which the duty has been charged, not exceeding 40bs. weight in the whole, and to put such metal immediately, in the presence of such officer or officers, into such new pot or pots for the sole purpose of glazing the same, without such maker or makers of flint-glass being liable to any further duty for or in respect of such metal so put into such new pot or pots for the purpose aforesaid, or without incurring any penalty for beginning to fill or charge such new pot without notice."

Sect. 8. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every maker and makers of flint glass (on his, her, or their giving to the officer or officers of Excise, under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, six hours previous notice in writing of his, her, or their intention so to do), to cleanse any pot or pots in which any stained glass hath been melted, and specified in such notice, by taking any quantity of unstained metal on which the duty has been charged, not exceeding 10lbs. weight in the whole, and by lading and unlading the same in the presence of such officer or officers into and from such pot for that purpose, and by repeating such operations in the presence of such officer or officers, until such pot shall be sufficiently cleansed, without incurring any penalty for beginning to charge such pot without notice."

and on like notice, ten pounds of unstained metal may be used for the purpose of cleansing any stained glass pot.

By 51 Geo. III., c. 69, s. 7. "Provided always, nevertheless, that nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to prevent any maker or makers of flint or phial glass from using a lear, in respect of which no licence has been taken out, for the purpose of annealing flint glass of the sort or description which is made for cutting; provided such lear, in respect of which no licence has been taken out, be immediately contiguous to a lear in respect of which a licence has been taken out, and the entrance of which shall be in the full view of any officer or officers of Excise, who shall at the same time observe and inspect the entrance of such contiguous lear, in respect of which a licence shall have been taken out, and the discharge hole of which shall be in the weighing room hereinafter mentioned, and not more than twelve feet from the discharge hole of such contiguous lear, in respect of which a licence shall have been taken out; any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 43. "That all the powers, authorities, methods, rules, directions, regulations, penalties, forfeitures, provisos, clauses, matters, and things, which in and by any act or acts of parliament relating to the duties on glass, or on the materials or metal, or other preparation made use of in Great Britain in the making of glass, or to the paying or allowing of any drawback on the exportation of glass, in force immediately before the said first day of August, 1811, are contained, provided, settled, or established, for managing, assessing, raising, levying, collecting, recovering, adjudging, mitigating, ascertaining, enforcing, and securing the said duties, or for paying or allowing any drawback of the said duties, and for preventing, detecting, and punishing frauds relating thereto, except where the same are expressly repealed or altered by this act, shall be and remain in full force and effect, to all intents and purposes; and the said powers, authorities, methods, rules, directions, regulations, penalties, forfeitures, provisions, clauses, matters, and things, except as before excepted, shall continue and be duly observed, practised, applied, used, and put in execution throughout the whole kingdom of Great Britain, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes (except as before excepted) as if the said powers, authorities, rules, directions, regulations, penalties, forfeitures, provisions, clauses, matters, and things had been expressly inserted and re-enacted in this present act."

By 58 Geo. III., c. 21, the 49 Geo. III., c. 63, and 51 Geo. III., c. 69, (relating to spread window-glass, crown-glass, and flint and phial-glass) are respectively continued to 5th July, 1819; and from thence, by 59 Geo. III., c. 104, and 1 & 2 Geo. IV., c. 13, until 25th July, 1824. 59 Geo. III., c. 104, is continued by 5 Geo. IV., c. 40, until 10th Oct., 1827, and by 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 40, until the 10th Oct., 1830.

By 59 Geo. III., c. 104, s. 3. "That all and every maker and makers of flint glass and phial glass shall, and he, she, and they is and are hereby required, at his, her, and their own expense, to find and provide and make lawful entry of proper and sufficient boxes or vessels, for the purpose of containing all the chest metal and waste glass and skimmings produced on each weekly making of flint glass and phial glass, and shall from time to time, as the same is produced on such weekly making, forthwith put and place in such boxes or vessels all the chest metal and waste glass and skimmings of each particular weekly making of flint glass and phial glass, and keep and continue the same in the particular box or vessel, boxes or vessels, in which the same shall be so put and placed, except when taken out daily for the purpose of being picked and sorted, in which case the same shall be so taken out in the presence of and weighed by the proper officer of Excise, and shall be kept separate and apart from all other glass of any other weekly making until the same is weighed, taken account of, and reweighed as provided by law for and in respect of manufactured flint glass; and when and so soon as each such weekly making of glass shall be finished, shall produce the same to be weighed and taken account of by the proper officer, and reweighed by the supervisor of Excise, as provided by law for and in respect of manufactured flint glass, and shall reflux the same and every part thereof in the next, or next but one, succeeding charge of his or their pot or pots for making flint or phial glass; and if any maker or makers of flint glass or phial glass shall neglect or omit to find or provide proper and sufficient boxes or vessels for the purpose in that behalf aforesaid, or to put or place as aforesaid in one or more of such boxes or vessels all the chest metal and waste glass skimmings of each particular weekly making of flint glass or phial glass, or to keep or continue the same and every part thereof in such box or vessel, boxes or vessels, in which the same shall be put and placed as aforesaid, as and when the same are produced in the manufacture of the glass of such weekly making, except as aforesaid, until the same shall be weighed and taken account of by the proper officer, and reweighed by the supervisor of Excise, as provided by law for and in respect of manufactured flint glass; or shall neglect or omit, when and so soon as any weekly making of flint glass or phial glass is finished, to produce the same, together with the metal laded out at the end of every such weekly making of such glass, to the proper officer, to be so weighed and taken account of, and reweighed by the supervisor as aforesaid; or shall mix, put, or place any other chest metal, or broken or waste glass, or skimmings or other thing, with the chest metal or waste glass and skimmings of any particular weekly making of such glass; or shall produce to the officer to be weighed and taken account of, or to the supervisor to be reweighed as aforesaid, any other chest metal, or broken or waste glass, or other thing, except such skimmings and laded metal as aforesaid with the chest metal or waste glass and skimmings and laded metal of that particular weekly making of glass; or shall produce to be weighed or reweighed as aforesaid any chest metal or waste glass or skimmings or laded metal which has before been weighed and taken account of, or reweighed as aforesaid; or shall convey away or conceal or not reflux such chest metal or waste glass, skimmings or laded metal, or any part thereof, at such time and in such manner as aforesaid, all such chest metal, broken or waste glass, and skimmings, laded metal, and other thing shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and all and every maker and makers of glass so offending shall, for each and every such offence, severally forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 4. "That whenever any officer or officers of Excise shall weigh the vessels, articles, and utensils of flint glass or phial glass of any particular weekly making, he and they shall also weigh the chest metal and waste glass and skimmings of that weekly making, and also the metal laded out at the end thereof; and if the weight of the articles, vessels, and utensils of flint glass or phial glass of any particular weekly making of flint glass or phial glass respectively, together with the weight of the chest metal and waste glass, skimmings and laded metal aforesaid, of the same weekly making, so produced and weighed or reweighed as aforesaid, shall not amount to ninety-eight parts of every hundred parts of the gross quantity of all the metal, materials, and preparations which shall have been in the pot or pots made use of in that weekly making, according to the best and highest gauge which shall or may have been taken of the fluxed metal thereof by any officer or officers of Excise, the maker or makers of such glass shall be deemed and taken to have made and manufactured articles of flint glass and phial glass of equal weight to the weight of such deficiency below ninety-eight hundred parts of the gross quantity of such fluxed metal as last aforesaid, and shall be charged with and pay duty for the same as if such last-mentioned article had been produced to and weighed by the proper officer of Excise. Provided always, that no such deficiency shall of itself, and without any proof of the fraudulent removal or concealment of any part of the glass of any weekly making of glass, subject any such maker as aforesaid to any penalty for having fraudulently removed or concealed the glass so deficient."

Sect. 5. "That all and every maker or makers of flint glass or phial glass shall, and he, she, and they is and are hereby required to keep sufficient and just scales and weights at the place or places where he, she, or they shall make or manufacture any flint glass or phial glass, and shall at his, her, or their own expense find, provide, and affix fit and proper hooks or staples, and also permit and suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same for the purpose of weighing and taking an account of and reweighing the chest metal, broken and waste glass, which shall at any time be in the possession of such maker and makers, and shall at all times (when requested by the officer so to do), by himself or themselves, or by a sufficient number of his, her, or their servants, give all needful and necessary help and assistance to any officer or officers of Excise in weighing and taking a just and true account of or reweighing such chest metal, broken or waste glass; and if any such maker or makers shall neglect to keep such scales and weights, or either of them, or shall not, at his, her, or their own expense, find, provide, and affix, in manner aforesaid, such fit and proper hooks or staples as aforesaid, or shall not permit or suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same, or shall at any time refuse or neglect to give such help and assistance as aforesaid, every such maker or makers of glass shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and if any maker or makers of glass, or his or their servants, shall in the weighing or reweighing of any chest metal or waste glass, make use of, or cause or procure or suffer to be made use of, any false, unjust, or insufficient scales, weight, or weights, or shall practise any art, device, or contrivance by which any officer or officers of Excise shall or may be hindered in or prevented from taking and ascertaining the just and true weight of any such chest metal, broken or waste glass, then and in every such case such maker or makers shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 500*l.*, with all such false, unjust, or insufficient scales and weight or weights respectively, and the same shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 6. "Provided always, that no such maker as aforesaid shall be compelled to reflux or incur any penalty for not refluxing any chest metal, skimmings, or broken or waste glass that shall be mixed with and constitute part of the weighed and reweighed chest metal, skimmings, or broken or waste glass of any weekly making of glass as aforesaid, and which such maker or his foreman or principal servant shall show and declare to the supervisor, at the time of the reweighing of the chest metal, skimmings, broken, or waste glass of such weekly making of glass, to be refuse glass, and unfit for immediate manufacture, and shall afterwards pick and separate from the rest of the chest metal, skimmings, broken or waste glass of such weekly making of glass; and that no such maker as aforesaid shall be compelled to reflux or incur any penalty for not refluxing any coloured or stained glass so reweighed as aforesaid, until his or her next making, or next making but one, of the like coloured or stained glass; and that no such maker as aforesaid shall be subject or liable to pay duty for any deficiency of glass produced, weighed, and reweighed, as the produce of any weekly making of glass as aforesaid, which has arisen and been occasioned by the unavoidable loss of the metal through the sudden cracking or breaking of any pot at the time the same is charged with and contained such metal, and which shall be satisfactorily shown and proved to the officer at the time the same shall so happen; and that no such maker as aforesaid shall incur any penalty by reason of his or her not refluxing at the time aforesaid any metal laded out of the pot into water, provided such metal shall be weighed and reweighed separate, and be lodged in and kept in some room or place separate and apart from all other broken or waste glass, and under the immediate survey and inspection of the officer of Excise, until all such laded metal shall be, under notice in writing, delivered to the proper officer, and in his presence put into the pot to be refluxed as aforesaid; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 7. "That this act shall continue in force until the 5th day of July, 1820."

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 117, s. 8. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, the same or so much of the said last-mentioned acts respectively as are above recited, shall be and are hereby repealed; and that from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, all and every maker or makers of flint glass shall, and he, she, or they, is and are hereby required, at or before the hour of six o'clock in the evening of Saturday, in each and every week, to work out into wares, or to cause and procure to be worked out into wares, the whole of the materials, metal, or other preparations, which at any time during that week shall have been fluxed or melted in any pot or pots to him, her, or them belonging, for the purpose of making flint glass, or upon a notice for that purpose given by such maker or makers of glass to the proper officer of Excise, six hours before he, she, or they shall commence to lade out any part of such metal, to lade out, in the presence of the supervisor or officer attending upon such notice for that purpose, the whole of such materials, metal, or other preparations as aforesaid, which may remain in such pot after such maker or makers shall have ceased to work out any wares therefrom, and the gauged weight of such laded fluxed materials, metal, or preparations, as taken by the supervisor or officer in the pot, shall be deducted from the weight of glass for or in respect of which such maker or makers shall at that time be chargeable with duty, upon the gauge thereof taken in the pot, according to the provisions of this act; and if any such maker or makers of glass as aforesaid shall neglect or refuse so to do, he, she, or they shall, for every such pot in respect of which he, she, or they shall commit or make such neglect or refusal, forfeit the sum of 200*l.*"

Penalty.

Officer to make out an account at times herein mentioned of the whole quantity of glass charged with duty, and the whole weight of glass weighed within such period, and to charge additional duty upon every pound weight of such excess.

shall have re-examined and regauged or taken the dimensions thereof, or before he shall have marked the same as aforesaid, or if any such maker or makers as aforesaid shall deface, or counterfeit, or alter, or cause to be defaced, or counterfeited, or altered, any such mark as aforesaid, he, she, or they shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 11. "That when and so soon as any pot for the making of flint glass shall be gauged, and the dimensions thereof ascertained and taken by the supervisor or surveyor of Excise, according to the rules and directions to him in that behalf given from time to time by the commissioners of Excise for the time being, such supervisor or surveyor shall and is hereby required to give such dimensions or calculation of the capacity and contents of such pot, according to the gauge by him in that behalf taken, to the maker or makers of flint glass to whom such pot shall belong."

Sect. 12. "That no pot or pots for the making of flint glass shall be set in the furnace, unless the maker or makers of flint glass to whom such pot or pots shall belong shall give six hours notice thereof in writing to the officer of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, specifying in such notice the time and hour when he, she, or they intends or intend to set such pot or pots in the furnace, and the particular pot or pots, and marks and numbers on the same, by him, her, or them intended to be so set, and the particular hole in the furnace in which each such pot is intended to be so set; and if any maker or makers of flint glass shall set any pot for the making of flint glass in the furnace without having given such notice as aforesaid, or having given such notice, and after the Excise officer attending for such purpose shall have taken an account of and examined the same, shall change or alter the position of any pot of which he, she, or they shall have given such notice, except in any case of emergency, of which notice in writing shall be given by such maker or makers to the surveying officer within four hours after the making of such change or alteration, and before unstopping the pot, if any materials, metal, or other preparations be therein uncharged with duty, or shall set in the furnace any other pot in lieu or in place of any pot of which he, she, or they shall have given such notice as aforesaid, or in any different hole than the hole of the furnace mentioned in such notice for each such pot, every such maker or makers so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 13. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1826, it shall not be lawful for any maker or makers of flint glass to unstop or take down any stopper from his, her, or their pot or pots, containing any materials or metal, or other preparation for the making of flint glass, (the same not being a pot cracking or breaking, whilst the same is filled with such materials, metal, or preparation as aforesaid,) without giving six hours notice, in such manner in other respects as by the said act, passed in the thirty-second year aforesaid, was and is in that behalf directed and required; and all such pots as aforesaid, which shall be charged with any such materials or metal, or other preparations as aforesaid, for any particular journey or making of flint glass, upon such notice to unstop the same, or take down the stopper thereof as aforesaid, being given, shall be opened altogether and at one and the same time, upon the attendance of the officer or supervisor of Excise (if he can be present) for that purpose, and in the presence of such officer or supervisor; and if, upon opening such pots as aforesaid, any pot or pots shall be found to contain materials or metal, or other preparation for the making of flint glass, then unfit for the making or working of the same out into glass wares, the whole of the pots charged with such materials or metal, or other preparations, of such particular journey or making, shall be stopped up again, and a fresh and like notice for unstopping the same, or taking down the stoppers thereof, shall be given as aforesaid; any thing in this or any other act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof notwithstanding ; and if any maker or makers of flint glass shall commit any offence against any of the regulations aforesaid, he, she, and they respectively shall forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 14. " That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, it shall and may be lawful for any maker or makers of flint glass, after the pots of any particular journey or making of flint glass to him, her, or them belonging, shall have been charged under a notice by him, her, or them, given according to the said act passed in the seventeenth year aforesaid, and after the expiration of the time mentioned in such notice, to fill or charge any fresh pot or pots (commonly called overtakers) with materials or metal, or other preparations for the making of flint glass, at any time during the making of such journey or making of flint glass, upon giving such or a similar notice in writing of his, her, or their intention so to do, according to the notice directed to be given by every maker or makers of glass, by the said act passed in the seventeenth year aforesaid ; all which said pot or pots (commonly called overtakers) as aforesaid shall be opened in the same manner, and at one and the same time, as the pots of the same journey or making, for the making of flint glass, are hereinbefore directed to be opened, and shall be under and subject in every respect to the same penalties, rules, regulations, and directions, as any other pot or pots for the making of flint glass. Provided always, that if the filling or charging of such pot or pots (commonly called overtakers) as aforesaid, whereof such notice shall have been given as aforesaid, shall not be begun pursuant to such notice, then and in every such case such notice shall be void and altogether null, and of no effect whatsoever."

Sect. 15. " That where the metal contained in any pot or pots for the making of flint glass shall become unfit for use, or shall be incapable of being worked or manufactured into wares, the maker or makers of glass to whom any such pot or pots as aforesaid shall belong shall give notice thereof immediately to the officer of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be ; and such pot or pots shall be thereupon allowed to remain and continue, until the end of the week in which such pot or pots shall have been charged, with all the materials or metal, or other preparation for the making of flint glass as aforesaid, therein, at which time the materials, metal, or preparations in such pot or pots, shall be laded out in the presence of the supervisor or the officer of Excise ; and if such supervisor or officer be satisfied that no alteration has been made therein, the gauged weight of the fluxed materials, metal, or other preparations so laded out as aforesaid, shall be deducted from the weight of the glass with which such maker or makers shall be chargeable with duty upon the gauge thereof taken in such pot or pots as aforesaid ; and if any maker or makers of glass shall, after giving such notice as aforesaid, take out any of the materials, metal, or other preparations as aforesaid, from any such glass pot, until the whole thereof shall be so laded out as aforesaid, or add any materials, metal, or other preparations thereto, or make any alteration therein, he, she, and they respectively shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

Sect. 16. " Provided always, that if the fluxed materials, metal, or other preparations contained in any such pot or pots, of which such notice shall be given as aforesaid, be coloured glass, and incapable of being used for white glass, or otherwise than as blue, green, or other coloured glass, it shall be lawful for any such maker or makers (on giving six hours notice thereof, and of such his, her, or their intention, to the surveying officer of Excise, specifying therein the particular pot or pots,) to lade out, in the presence of the supervisor or surveying officer, all such fluxed materials, metal, or other preparations as shall be therein, into water, and thereupon to make such alteration in such materials, metal, or other preparations as he, she, or they may think fit, for deepening or improving the colour thereof, as aforesaid, and forthwith to recharge such pot or pots with such materials, metal, or other preparations for the making of such coloured glass

Sect. 17. "That such clause or proviso, or so much of the said act passed in the thirty-second year aforesaid, as above recited, shall, from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, remain and continue in force: provided always, that the metal, material, or preparation in such pot, which may so happen to crack or break as aforesaid, shall immediately be laded out by such maker or makers of glass as aforesaid, in the presence of an officer of Excise, in which case the amount of the gauged weight of metal, materials, or preparations so laded out of such pot as aforesaid, or inevitably and wholly lost by such cracking or breaking of the pot as aforesaid, shall be deducted from the gross gauge of such pot, by which the same, or the metal, materials, or preparation with which such pot was charged, were before charged with duty."

Sect. 18. "That if, from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, any maker or makers of flint glass shall, after a gauge taken by the officer of Excise of the materials, or metal, or other preparations for the making of flint glass, in any pot set in the furnace to him, her, or them belonging, put into or add any materials, metal, or preparation whatsoever to such pot, he, she, or they so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

Sect. 19. "That from and after the said fifth day of July, 1825, no maker or makers of flint glass shall incur such penalty of 200*l*. as aforesaid, by reason of his, her, or their not putting, placing, or depositing, in one or more of such lears as aforesaid, for the purpose of annealing the same, or for not annealing therein all the flint glass which shall from time to time be by him, her, or them made or manufactured; but that it shall and may be lawful for any maker or makers of flint glass to make or manufacture flint glass which shall not be so put, placed, or deposited as aforesaid in any lear or lears, or to be annealed therein as aforesaid, upon such maker or makers of glass as aforesaid giving six hours' notice in writing to the officer or officers of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, of his, her, or their intention so to do, specifying in such notice the number and particular pot or pots from which he, she, or they intends or intend to make or manufacture such flint glass, and the particular kinds of wares to be made therefrom. Provided always, that if such maker or makers of flint glass as aforesaid shall neglect or omit to give such notice as in that behalf aforesaid, nothing herein contained shall in any wise extend or be deemed or construed to extend to prevent such maker or makers of glass as aforesaid from incurring such penalty as above mentioned."

Sect. 20. "That all and every maker and makers of flint glass who shall be desirous of making or manufacturing any flint glass which does not require to be put, placed, or deposited in any lear, or to be annealed therein, shall, and he, she, or they is and are hereby required to find and provide, or to build and construct in every glass-house in which such flint glass as aforesaid shall be intended to be made or manufactured into glass wares as aforesaid, a good and sufficient and well lighted room for the placing and depositing therein of such flint glass or glass wares, which room shall be next to and communicate with such glass-house; and all and every such maker or makers shall be, in respect of every such room, subject to all and every the penalties and regulations to which flint glass every person and persons shipping, or being about to ship in Ireland any flint glass for exportation on drawback, or for the removal thereof to Great Britain, shall give notice thereof to the nearest collector or officer of Excise, and such collector and officer respectively is and are hereby authorized thereupon to attend and to cause all such flint glass to be weighed, and if such flint glass has not been made in Ireland, and charged with duty under the provisions of this act, to charge the same with duty after the rate of sixpence British currency for every pound weight thereof; and every collector and officer of Excise in Ireland so attending upon such notice as aforesaid, and so taking an account thereof, is hereby authorized, before any such flint glass shall be shipped in Ireland for exportation on drawback, or for removal to *Great Britain, shall, upon payment thereon of the duty aforesaid to such collector, or if such glass shall have been made and charged with duty under the provisions of this act, to grant a certificate of the payment of such duty, or that it is duly secured to be paid, to accompany such glass upon such removal as aforesaid; and if, from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, any person or persons shall export upon drawback, or shall remove from Ireland, or bring into Great Britain from Ireland, any flint glass, without such duty thereon being paid or secured as aforesaid, or when removed into Great Britain unaccompanied with such certificate, containing such particulars as aforesaid, or if any person or persons shall forge or counterfeit any such certificate, or shall make use of or deliver any false or untrue certificate, as and for the collector's certificate of such duty being paid or secured to be paid as aforesaid, on such glass, all such glass shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and the person or persons so offending shall forfeit the sum of 500/."

By 9 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 7. "And whereas no Excise duty upon plate glass, broad glass, and crown glass has been payable in Ireland, under any act in force immediately before the passing of this act; but a drawback has been payable in Great Britain upon plate glass, broad glass, and crown glass made in Great Britain and sent to Ireland; for the preventing therefore of any evasion of payment of the duty on any such glass sent to Great Britain, or any undue claim of drawback in respect of any such glass exported from Ireland to foreign parts, on which duty shall not have been paid, be it enacted, That from and after the said fifth day of July, 1828, every person shipping or intending to ship, or being about to ship, in Ireland, any plate glass, broad glass, or crown glass, for exportation on drawback, or for the removal thereof to Great Britain, shall give twenty-four hours' notice of such intention, and of the place of shipping, to the nearest collector or officer of Excise; and such collector and officer respectively is and are hereby authorized and required thereupon to attend, and to cause all such plate glass, broad glass, and crown glass respectively, to be weighed and measured; and in case such plate glass, broad glass, or crown glass has not been charged with the respective duties under the provisions of this act, and is about to be removed to Great Britain, it shall be lawful for such collector or officer, and he is hereby authorized and required, to charge all such glass with duty at and after the respective rates of duty made payable by this act on such sort or kind of glass respectively; and upon payment of such duty it shall be lawful for such collector or officer, and he is hereby required, to grant a certificate of the payment of such duty, to accompany such glass upon such removal, and to be produced at the port of entry in Great Britain; and in case any such glass which shall have been duly charged with the respective duties payable by this act shall be entered for exportation to foreign parts, upon drawback, or to be sent and removed to Great Britain, it shall be lawful for such collector or officer, upon proof that such duties have been paid, or have been charged and duly secured to be paid, and he is hereby authorized and required to grant a certificate of the payment of such duty, or a certificate that such duty has been charged and is duly secured to be paid, to accompany such glass upon such exportation to foreign parts, or such removal to Great Britain, and to be there produced as aforesaid; and if at any time after the said fifth day of July, 1828, any person or persons shall export or enter for exportation from Ireland upon drawback, or shall remove or send from Ireland to be brought into Great Britain, or shall bring into Great Britain, any plate glass, broad glass, or crown glass, unaccompanied by such certificate, containing such particulars as aforesaid; or if any person or persons shall refuse to produce such certificate at the port of entry in Great Britain, or shall forge or counterfeit any certificate required by this act, or shall make use of or deliver any false or untrue certificate as and for a certificate required by this act; all such glass respectively shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and the person or persons so offending shall forfeit the sum of 500*l.* Provided always, that if any plate glass, broad glass, or crown glass, which shall have been previously sent to Ireland from Great Britain on drawback, shall at any time afterwards be sent or removed to Great Britain, the rate of duty to be charged thereon as aforesaid shall be equal and according to the rate of drawback now payable thereon respectively when exported to foreign parts."

Sect. 8. "That where by the schedule to this act annexed any drawback is allowed or made payable on any sort of glass exported, such drawback shall not be allowed or paid or given on any glass exported to the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, or any of them, except in cases where the names of the said islands are expressly respectively mentioned or set forth, nor on any glass exported to any of the said islands, the name of which shall not be expressly mentioned and set forth."

By 49 Geo. III., c. 63, s. 5, (which was made perpetual and extended to united kingdom by 9 Geo. IV., c. 48.) "That all and every maker or makers of spread window glass or of crown glass respectively shall, and he, she, and they is and are hereby required, to erect, build, make, and construct every annealing arch or oven by him, her, or them intended to be made use of for the annealing of spread window glass or crown glass respectively, in a rectangular form, with the sides and ends thereof perpendicular and parallel to each other respectively, and the bottom thereof level, and with only one mouth or entrance into the same, and shall number the same progressively with a durable mark; and if any such maker or makers shall erect, build, make, or construct any annealing arch or oven contrary to the directions of this act, or shall neglect or refuse to number or mark the same according to the directions of this act, or shall make use of any annealing arch or oven not constructed in the manner before directed, all and every such maker and makers so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 6. "That all and every maker or makers of spread window glass, or of crown glass, shall at his, her, and their own expense find, provide, and affix a good and sufficient iron grating to the mouth or entrance of every annealing arch and oven by him, her, or them intended to be made use of for the annealing of spread window glass or crown glass respectively, such iron grating to be approved of in writing by and under the hand of the respective surveyors or supervisors of Excise of the division or district within which such annealing arch or oven shall be situate; and proper locks and keys, and all other necessary fastenings for securing and sealing every such annealing arch and oven, and the mouth or entrance and iron grating thereof, shall be provided by the respective surveyors and supervisors of Excise of such division or district at the expense of such maker or makers; and when and so soon as any such maker or makers shall have delivered or ought to have delivered the declaration of the number of tables put, or deposited, or contained in any such annealing arch or oven, as by this act is directed and required, the proper officer or officers of Excise shall Locks and fastenings shall be altered and kept in repair when required.

Sect. 7. "That where any locks, keys, or fastenings shall be provided in pursuance of this act, all and every maker and makers of spread window glass or crown glass respectively, to whom such locks, keys, and fastenings respectively shall then belong, shall, at his, her, or their own expense, from time to time, and at all times when required so to do by the respective surveyors or supervisors of Excise of the division or district in which such his, her, or their glass-house shall be situate, immediately set about altering, repairing, and amending; and shall also, within a reasonable time then next following, alter, repair, and amend the same respectively, according to such requisition: and if any such maker or makers of spread window glass or crown glass respectively, to whom any such locks, keys, and fastenings, or any or either of them shall belong, shall neglect or refuse immediately to set about the altering, repairing, or amending the same, or to repair, amend, or alter the same when thereunto required, according to the directions of this act, he, she, or they shall, for each and every such neglect or refusal, forfeit and lose the sum of 50%."

Penalty 50%.

Notice of heating the annealing arch shall be given to Excise officer.

Sect. 8. "That when any maker or makers of spread window glass or crown glass respectively shall be desirous to prepare, light, or kindle any fire, to heat his, her, or their annealing arch or oven, into which any spread window glass or crown glass is intended to be put or deposited for the purpose of annealing the same, such maker or makers shall give to the officer of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be six hours' notice in writing of his, her, or their intention; and if any such maker or makers shall neglect or refuse to prepare, light, and kindle such fire within one hour after the time mentioned in such notice, then such notice shall be void, and such maker or makers shall give the like and a fresh notice in writing to such officer before he, she, or they shall prepare, kindle, or light a fire in any such annealing arch or oven; and if any such maker or makers shall light or kindle a fire in any such annealing arch or oven, without having given such previous notice as aforesaid, he, she, or they shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 50%."

be drawn back, that the particular quantity of glass so intended to be exported, and every part thereof, shall be shipped and exported, and shall not be unshipped, unloaded, or laid on land, or put on board any other ship or vessel in Great Britain, shipwreck, or other unavoidable accident, excepted; which security the officer of Excise of the port where the said glass shall be exported is hereby directed to take, in His Majesty's name, and to His Majesty's use; and the said exporter shall make oath that he believes the duties upon the materials whereof such glass is made had been fully paid, and that such glass is the same that is described in the account sent as aforesaid by the officer in whose presence the same was packed to the officer attending the shipping (which oath the surveyor or supervisor, or other officer appointed by the said respective commissioners, or the major part of them, for that purpose, is hereby authorized to administer); and the said surveyor or supervisor, or other officer aforesaid, and the officer who attended the shipping the said glass, being satisfied of the truth thereof, shall, within one month after the exportation of the said glass, give to the exporter, or his, her, or their clerk or manager, a certificate or debenture, expressing the quantities and kinds of such glass so shipped, and that all the duties have been paid in respect of the same, and that security hath been given, before the shipping the same, for the due exporting the same; and such certificate or debenture being produced to the collector of the port where the said glass was exported, he shall forthwith pay or allow the persons so exporting the same, or their agent, such drawback or allowance as by the said act, made in the 17th year of His present Majesty's reign, is given or allowed upon the exportation to foreign parts, by way of merchandise, of the several and respective species of glass in the said act mentioned; and if such collector shall not have money in his hands to pay the same, then the respective commissioners of Excise in England or Scotland are required to pay the said drawback or allowance out of the duties upon materials used in the making glass."

Sect. 4. "Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the officer attending the shipping such glass, if he thinks it necessary, to open or examine such glass at the port of exportation, in order that he may be satisfied that such glass is the same that is described in the account sent to him by the officer in whose presence the said glass was packed. Provided also, that if after the shipping any such glass, and the giving such security as aforesaid, in order to obtain a drawback or allowance of the duties before paid in respect thereof, the same glass, or any part thereof, shall be unshipped, unladed, or laid on land, or put into any other ship or vessel within Great Britain (shipwreck, or other unavoidable accident, excepted), that then, and in every such case, over and above the penalty of the bond, which shall be levied and recovered to His Majesty's use, all the said glass which shall be so unshipped, unladed, or laid on land, or put into any other ship or vessel within Great Britain (shipwreck, or other unavoidable accident, excepted), or the value thereof, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of the Customs or Excise."

By 19 Geo. II., c. 12, s. 10. "Provided always, that every officer who shall be empowered to make such charge as aforesaid shall in the first place be sworn for the due and faithful execution of his office, and the oath in that behalf shall and may be administered by all or any of the commissioners of Excise in Great Britain, or by any of His Majesty's justices of the peace, who shall give to such officer a certificate thereof; and all and every such maker and makers of glass respectively are hereby required to keep sufficient and just scales and weights at the place or places where he, she, or they do make such glass, and permit and assist the officer to make use thereof for the purposes of this act, under the penalty of 50*l.*, to be forfeited and lost for not keeping such scales and weights, or for not permitting and assisting the officer to use the same, as aforesaid." See 49 Geo. III., c. 63, s. 11, ante, 436.

11. Glass.

And by 10 Geo. III., c. 44, s. 1. "That if at any time after the 24th day of June, 1770, any trader subject to the survey of any officer of Excise, and required by the laws concerning the duties under the management of the commissioners of Excise to keep sufficient and just scales and weights, shall, in the weighing his, her, or their stock or stocks, make use of, or cause, or procure, or suffer to be used, any false, unjust, or insufficient scales or weights, to the intent to defraud His Majesty of the duties by the said laws respectively granted, that then, and in every such case, the party or parties offending shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.* for every such offence."

After 24th June, 1770, trader using false weights and scales in weighing his stock in fraud of the duties, &c. forfeits 100*l.*

By 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 8. "That if, at any time or times after the 1st day of August, 1786, any trader or traders subject to the survey of any officer or officers of the Excise or inland duties, and who is or are required, by any law or laws relating to the duties of Excise, or other duties under the management of the commissioners of Excise, to keep just scales and weights, shall, before or after or in the weighing of his, her, or their stock, or any part thereof, put or suffer or cause or procure to be put any other substance into the commodity or stock so to be weighed, whereby such officer or officers might be hindered or prevented from taking a just and true account of such stock, as is directed and prescribed by the several acts of Parliament in that case made and provided, or shall forcibly obstruct or hinder, or shall, by any art, device, or contrivance, prevent or impede such officer, or procure or suffer him to be prevented or impeded in taking such just and true account of such stock or commodities as aforesaid, the party offending therein shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Penalty.

Permits granted for the removal of muriate of potash.

Sect. 8. "That where any maker or makers of glass shall have occasion to remove any muriate of potash from any such workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, room, or other place by him, her, or them entered as being intended to be made use of for the making or keeping mineral alkali or flux for glass, the officer or officers of Excise of the respective divisions or places where such entered workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, room, or other place shall be situated, shall, without fee or reward, from time to time, upon a request note being made and delivered by such maker or makers of glass, according to the directions of this act, grant and give a permit in writing, signed by the said respective officer or officers, expressing the quantity of all such muriate of potash so to be removed, and expressing the name and names of the person or persons from whom the same is intended to be removed, and to whom the same is to be removed, and that the duty for or in respect of such muriate of potash so intended to be removed has been paid; and all officers of Excise granting or giving any such permit shall therein limit and express the time within which the said muriate of potash in such permit mentioned shall be removed from the workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, room, or other place of the maker or makers of glass taking out such permit, and also the time within which the said muriate of potash shall be delivered and received into the workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, room, or other place of the maker or makers of alum to whom the same is permitted to be sent."

Sect. 9. "That no permit for the removal of any such muriate of potash shall be granted, or be valid, unless such maker or makers requiring the same shall make and send or deliver to the officer or officers of Excise hereby authorized to grant such permit a request note in writing, specifying the name of the maker or makers of alum to whom such muriate of potash is intended to be sent, the quantity of such muriate of potash intended to be removed, and for the removal of which such permit is required, and also the number and contents of the casks or other packages containing the same, and whether the same is to be removed by land or by water, and by what mode of conveyance such muriate of potash is intended to be sent."

Sect. 10. "That no muriate of potash shall be brought into any workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, room, or other place made use of by any maker or makers of alum, without an authentic permit granted and given according to the directions of this act, which permit shall be produced to and left with the officer of Excise under whose survey such maker or makers of alum shall then be, on pain of forfeiting all such muriate of potash so brought in without such permit."

Sect. 11. "That all and every maker and makers of alum shall, within six hours next after any such muriate of potash shall be received or delivered at or into any workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, room, or other place to him, her, or them belonging, give to the officer of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be notice in writing of the receipt and delivery thereof; and if any maker or makers of alum shall neglect or refuse to give any such notice, such maker or makers so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 12. "That in case in the muriate of potash brought in to be used, stored, or deposited at any such alum work or works for the purpose of being used in the manufacture of alum, any decrease shall be found exceeding the rate of one pound in every one hundred-weight of such muriate of potash specified in the permit which shall accompany the same, the maker or makers of alum to whose use or to whose account the said muriate of potash was so delivered at such work or works as aforesaid shall forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 13. "That all and every maker and makers of glass shall respectively daily and every day enter in a book or on a paper to be provided for that purpose an exact and particular account of each and every parcel, quantity, or load of muriate of potash and the weight thereof, sold, delivered, or sent out by such maker or makers of glass, with the name of the maker or makers of alum to or for whom every such quantity of muriate of potash was so sold, delivered, or sent out, and the place where his, her, or their alum-works at which the same is to be or was delivered, and such book or paper shall be returned to the next office of Excise every six weeks, and the truth of the entries made therein shall be then and there verified upon the oath of such maker or makers, or his, her, or their chief workman or agent, before the proper collector or supervisor of Excise, and the several and respective collectors and supervisors of Excise are hereby authorized and required to administer such oath accordingly; and in case any such maker or makers of glass shall neglect or refuse to keep such book or paper, or to make such entries therein, according to the true intent and

Sect. 14. "That all and every such maker or makers of glass shall, within one week after he, she, or they shall have or ought to have made such entry upon oath as last aforesaid, pay and clear off all the duties for and in respect of muriate of potash, which shall be due from him, her, or them respectively; and that every such maker or makers of glass, who shall neglect or refuse to make such payment as aforesaid, shall forfeit for every such offence double the sum of the said duties whereof the payment shall be so neglected as aforesaid."

Sect. 15. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the officers of Excise, or any or either of them, from time to time and at all times, by day and by night, upon his or their request or demand (but if in the night, then in the presence of a constable or other lawful officer of the peace), to enter into all and every the workhouses, warehouses, storehouses, rooms, and other places made use of by any maker or makers of glass, or by any maker or makers of alum, in or for the storing or keeping of muriate of potash, or any other matter or material alleged or pretended to be or passing under the name or denomination of muriate of potash, and by weighing or otherwise to take an account of the quantity and quality of all the muriate of potash or other matters or materials alleged or pretended to be or passing under the name or denomination of muriate of potash which shall at any time be in the custody or possession of any such maker or makers of glass, or of any such maker or makers of alum."

Sect. 16. "That all and every maker or makers of glass, and all and every maker and makers of alum, shall, and he, she, and they respectively is and are hereby required to provide and keep proper, sufficient, and just scales and weights at the place or places where he, she, or they respectively shall have or keep any muriate of potash, and shall, at his, her, or their own expense, find, provide, and affix a fit and proper hook or staple in a proper place, to be approved of in writing by and under the hands of the respective surveyors or supervisors of Excise of the division or district in which such place shall be situate, and also permit and suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same for the purpose of weighing and taking an account of the muriate of potash which shall at any time be in the custody or possession of any such maker or makers of glass or maker or makers of alum respectively; and if any such maker or makers of glass, or any such maker or makers of alum, shall neglect or refuse to provide or to keep such scales and weights, or either of them, or shall not, at his, her, or their own expense, find, provide, and affix a fit and proper hook or staple in a proper and convenient place, to be approved as aforesaid, or shall not permit or suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same as aforesaid, or if any such maker or makers of glass, or any maker or makers of alum, shall, in the weighing of any muriate of potash, make use of, or cause or procure, or suffer to be made use of, any false, unjust, or insufficient scales or weights, or shall practise any art, device, or contrivance by which any such officer or officers shall or may be hindered or prevented from taking the just and true weight and ascertaining the true quantity of any such muriate of potash, then and in every such case such maker or makers of glass, or maker or makers of alum (as the case may be), shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l*., together with all such false, unjust, or insufficient scales and weights respectively."

Sect. 17. "That all and every maker or makers of glass, and all and every maker or makers of alum, shall, when and so often as he, she, or they shall be thereunto required by the proper officer of Excise, with a sufficient number of his, her, or their servants, aid and assist to the utmost of his, her, or their power such officer or officers in weighing and taking an account of his, her, or their muriate of potash, on pain of forfeiting, for every neglect or refusal thereof, the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 18. "That if any person or persons shall take, remove, or carry away any muriate of potash, with intent to evade the duty by this act imposed, every person so offending shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*, and all the muriate of potash so taken, removed, or carried away shall be forfeited."

Sect. 19. "That in case any muriate of potash shall be deposited, hid, or concealed in any place or places whatsoever, with an intent to defraud His Majesty of any of the duties by this act imposed, such muriate of potash shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, and the person or persons in whose custody the same shall be found shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*; and, the better to enable such officer or officers to discover such muriate of potash so forfeited, if any such officer or officers shall have cause to suspect that any such muriate of potash shall be so deposited, hid, or concealed in any place or places whatsoever, then and in every such case, if such place or places shall be within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London, upon oath made by such officer or officers before the commissioners of Excise in England for the time being, or any two or more of them, or before one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county, city, or liberty where such place or places shall be, or in case such place or places shall be in any other part of Great Britain, upon oath made by such officer or officers before one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, riding, shire, division, or place where such officer or officers shall suspect the same to be deposited, hid, or concealed, setting forth the ground of his or their suspicion, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said commissioners, or any two or more of them, or the justice or justices of the peace respectively, as the case may require, before whom such oath shall be made, if they or he shall judge it reasonable, by special warrant or warrants under his or their respective hands and seals, to authorize and empower such officer or officers by day or by night, but if in the night-time, then in the presence of a constable or other officer of the peace, to enter into all and every such place and places where he or they shall so suspect such muriate of potash to be so deposited, hid, or concealed, and to seize and carry away all such muriate of potash which he or they shall then and there find so forfeited."

Sect. 20. "That in case any maker or makers of alum, to whom or to whose use or on whose account any such muriate of potash shall be delivered from any workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, room, or other place belonging to or made use of by any maker or makers of glass, or in case any other person or persons shall make use of or employ such muriate of potash, or any part thereof, to or for any use or purpose other than in the manufacture of alum, or shall, after any such muriate of potash, or any part thereof, shall have been used in the manufacture of alum as aforesaid, make use of or employ the residuum, caput mortuum, or any remains thereof for any other purpose than in the manufacture of alum, the maker or makers of alum or other person or persons so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 21. or cause to be planted or grow, any hops within or upon any ground whatsoever in Great Britain, shall neglect to give or send such notice in writing, of his, her, or their hop-grounds as aforesaid, within such time as is before mentioned, contrary to the true meaning of this act, then and in every such case the offender therein, for every such offence, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 40s. for every acre, by estimation, of such ground, and after that rate for a greater or lesser quantity."

Sect. 7. "Provided always, that the person or persons who are to give such notice as aforesaid shall not be obliged, for the doing thereof, to go or send farther than the next market town to the place where the said hops shall be planted or growing; and the officer who shall receive the said notice shall, within five days after such notice shall be given or sent to him, from time to time, enter the same in a book to be kept at the said next office for that purpose, upon pain of forfeiting, for every neglect therein, the sum of 40s. to the party whose notice shall not be so entered."

Sect. 8. "That no person or persons whatsoever shall at any time or times, from and after the 1st day of August, 1711, during the continuance of the said duties upon hops, make use of any oust, store-house, or other place, or of any kiln, for curing or keeping of hops chargeable with any of the duties aforesaid, unless notice of such oust, store-house, place, or kiln shall have been before given or sent in writing as aforesaid, upon pain of forfeiting the sum of 50l. for every offence."

Sect. 9. "That all such hops as in any year, during the continuance of this act, shall grow in Great Britain as aforesaid, shall by the respective owners or planters thereof, within six weeks after the gathering or picking of the same, be brought to be cured and bagged at such ousts or other places to be notified as aforesaid, and none other, upon pain of forfeiting the sum of 5s. for every pound weight of the said hops which shall not be so brought, cured, and bagged as aforesaid."

Sect. 15. "That all and every the officers of the said duty shall at all times, by day or by night, and (if in the night) then in the presence of a constable, or other lawful officer of the peace, be permitted, upon his or their request, to enter into the oust, store-house, or other place made use of by any person or persons, within or during the said term, for the growing, curing, or keeping of hops, whereof such notice shall or ought to have been given as aforesaid, in order to his viewing the same, and discovering any frauds in relation to Her Majesty's duties thereupon; and if any planter or owner of hops shall obstruct or hinder any of the said officers in the execution of the powers and authorities given to him or them by this act for the ascertaining and securing the said duties upon hops, the person or persons offending therein shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 20l."

By 6 Geo. I., c. 21, s. 25. "That from and after the said 1st day of August, 1720, the respective planters or owners of hops to grow in Great Britain, before they respectively shall or do begin to bag or to weigh his, her, or their hops, or any part or parts thereof, shall respectively give or send notice in writing under his, her, or their hands to the next officer of Excise, or to the proper officer for the said duty, of the particular day, and of the precise hour of such day, as well of his, her, or their beginning to bag, as also of his, her, or their beginning to weigh such their respective hops, and every part and parts thereof, which notice, as well as to such bagging, as also to such weighing of such hops as shall be either bagged or weighed in the first week of each respective planter's or owner's bagging and weighing, or either of them, shall be given or set at least twenty-four hours before the particular time and times, when as well every such bagging, as also every such weighing, shall respectively begin; and such notice as aforesaid, as well as to every other bagging, as also as to every other weighing, of such hops as shall not be bagged and weighed in such first week, shall likewise be given or left by the space of at least forty-eight hours, as well before every such other bagging, as also before every such other weighing shall respectively begin ; and if, after such notice given, he, she, or they shall not proceed to bag and weigh, or to bag or weigh, according to each respective notice, that then and in every such case he, she, or they, before he, she, or they shall at any other time or times begin to bag and weigh, or to bag or weigh, his, her, or their hops, or any part or parts thereof, shall give or send the like notice as aforesaid ; that is to say, twenty-four hours' notice of such bagging and weighing, or either of them, in such first week, and forty-eight hours' notice, as well of every such other bagging, as also of every such other weighing, or either of them respectively, under the pain of forfeiting and losing the sum of 50*l.* for every neglect and default of every such notice or notices, as aforesaid, in either of the respective cases before mentioned."

But by 39 & 40 Geo. III., c. 81, s. 6. "That no planter or owner of hops to grow in Great Britain shall at any time be obliged to give more than twenty-four hours' notice of his or her intention to weigh hops. Provided always, that the particular time to be specified in any such notice for the weighing of hops shall be between the hours of four in the morning and five in the evening, any thing in this or any other act of parliament to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

And by 9 Ann. c. 12, s. 11. "That the proper officer of Excise for the district in which the said hops shall grow, or some other sworn officer of Excise, by appointment of the commissioners of that revenue, shall attend and be present at the bagging of every parcel of such hops as aforesaid, and at the weighing of the same, and shall cause the true weight of every bag or pocket of the said hops, great or small (such tare of the bag as is allowable by this act only excepted), to be plainly and visibly marked in one or more places upon every bag of the said hops ; and shall then also cause an entry of the said weight (the tare being abated) to be made in his book, and shall thereof make return or report in writing to the respective commissioners of Excise, or such as they shall respectively appoint to receive the same, leaving a true copy (if demanded) of such report in writing under his hand with or for such planter or owner respectively ; and such return or report of the said officer or officers shall be a charge upon the said planters or owners respectively ; and if the said officer or officers shall refuse or neglect to give or leave a true copy of such report in writing with or for such planters or owners respectively, at the time of taking such account (upon demand as aforesaid), every such officer for such offence shall forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.* to every such planter or owner respectively."

By 39 and 40 Geo. III., c. 81, s. 8. "That all and every owner, planter, and grower of hops growing or to grow in Great Britain shall, and he, she, and they respectively is and are hereby required to keep sufficient and just scales and weights at his, her, or their ous, store-houses, or other places where such hops shall have been so weighed, and also to permit and suffer any supervisor of Excise to use the same for the purpose of reweighing such hops ; and if any such owner, planter, or grower shall neglect to keep such scales and weights, or either of them, or shall not permit or suffer any supervisor of Excise to use the same for the purpose aforesaid, he, she, or they shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 50*l.* ; and if any such owner, planter, or grower shall, for the reweighing of any such hops, provide or make use of, or cause or procure or suffer to be provided or made use of, any false, unjust, or insufficient scales or weights, or shall practise any act, device, or contrivance by which any such supervisor of Excise may be hindered or prevented from taking the just and true weight of any such hops, then and in every such case such owner, planter, or grower shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l.*, together with all such false, unjust, or insufficient scales and weights respectively, and the same shall and may be seized by any supervisor or officer of Excise."

for every other bagging, on pain of 50*l.*

Owner of hops shall not be obliged to give more than 24 hours' notice of his intention to weigh them.

Time of weighing between four in the morning and five in the evening.

Officer to attend the bagging and weighing, and mark the weight on the bag, and make entry and return accordingly.

A copy of the return to be left with the planter.

Officer not leaving return forfeits 5*l.*

Owners of hops shall keep scales and weights at the place of weighing, and permit any supervisor to use them, on penalty of 50*l.*

If unjust scales or weights, &c. shall be used, they shall be forfeited, and the owner shall forfeit 100*l.*

13. Hops.

Owners, when required by supervisor, shall put hops into the scale to be reweighed, and assist him therein, on penalty of 50*l*.

No officer inferior to a supervisor shall be suffered to weigh hops between five in the evening and four in the morning, on penalty of 20*l*.

Owners, &c. shall mark the bags with their names, &c. before they put in any hops, on penalty of 20*l*.

Hops shall not be bagged in bags of greater weight than in the proportion of 10*lb*. for every 112*lb*. of the gross weight of bag and hops, on penalty of 20*l*.

Officer of Excise shall mark on the bags the gross weight, with the year of growth, and the progressive number according to the number of bags charged to each owner for the season.

Persons counterfeiting the marks aforesaid shall forfeit 100*l*.; and for defacing marks shall forfeit 20*l*.

Sect. 9. "That all and every owner, planter, and grower of hops growing or to grow in Great Britain shall, when and so often as he, she, or they shall be thereunto required by any supervisor of Excise, bring or cause to be brought to, and be put into and taken out of, the scale, all hops belonging to such owner, planter, or grower, and which such supervisor shall be desirous to reweigh; and shall also, on the request of such supervisor, by themselves respectively, and with a sufficient number of their servants, aid and assist, to the utmost of their power, such supervisor of Excise in reweighing all such hops of such owner, planter, or grower, on pain of forfeiting, for every neglect or refusal thereof, the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 7. "That no officer of Excise, inferior to the rank or degree of a supervisor of Excise, shall be at liberty to weigh or shall be permitted to weigh any hops at any ous, store-house, or other place of any owner, planter, or grower of hops, between the hours of five in the evening and four in the morning; and if any such owner, planter, or grower shall permit or suffer any such inferior officer to weigh any such hops between the hours aforesaid, contrary to the directions of this act, every such owner, planter, or grower so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

By 39 and 40 Geo. III., c. 81, s. 1, 2, the 14 Geo. III., c. 68, is repealed, and in lieu thereof, after 28th July, 1800, "Every owner, planter, or grower of hops, before he, she, or they shall begin to put any hops into any bag or pocket, shall mark or cause to be marked on the outside of each and every such bag or pocket, in large, plain, and legible letters or characters, with durable ink or paint, his, her, or their name or names and place of abode; and if any owner, planter, or grower of hops shall begin to put any hops into any bag or pocket without having marked or caused to be marked, in manner hereinbefore directed, the several matters and things hereinbefore required and prescribed, every such owner, planter, or grower, or other person or persons so offending, shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 3. "That no owner, planter, or grower of hops shall bag any hops in any bag, the weight of which bag shall be greater in proportion to the gross weight of such bag and the hops contained therein than 10*lb*s. for every 112*lb*s. of the said gross weight of such bag and hops contained therein; and if any owner, planter, or grower of hops shall bag any hops in any bag, the weight of which bag shall be greater in proportion to the gross weight of such bag and the hops contained therein than 10*lb*s. for every 112*lb*s. of the gross weight of such bag and the hops contained therein, then and in every such case every owner, planter, or grower so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 4. "That when and as soon as any officer of Excise shall have weighed and taken account of any hops for the purpose of ascertaining and charging the duty thereon, such officer shall and he is hereby authorized and required to mark, or cause to be marked, in large legible figures, with durable ink or paint, on the outside of each and every bag or pocket containing such hops, the true gross weight of such bag or pocket of hops, together with the date of the year in which such hops were grown; and also with the true progressive number of such bag or pocket, according to the numbers of the bags or pockets of hops weighed and charged to each owner, planter, or grower of hops during the then current year or hop-season; such number to be taken progressively, beginning one, two, and so onwards, according to the number of bags or pockets of hops weighed and charged to each owner, planter, or grower as aforesaid in each such current year or hop-season; and if any person or persons shall counterfeit or alter, or cause, procure, or suffer to be counterfeited or altered, any or either of the matters or things hereinbefore directed to be marked, or caused to be marked, and so marked, or cause to be marked by any such owner, planter, or grower of hops, or so hereinbefore directed to be marked and so marked by any such officer as aforesaid, the person or persons so offending shall, for each and every such offence, severally forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and if any person or persons shall wilfully deface or obliterate any or either of the matters or things hereinbefore directed to be marked, or caused to be marked, and so marked by any such owner, planter, or grower of hops, or hereinbefore directed to be marked, and so marked by any such officer as aforesaid, or shall cause or procure any such matter or thing to be defaced or obliterated, or shall connive at any such matter or thing being so defaced or obliterated, the person or persons so offending shall, for each and every such offence, severally forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l.*"

By 6 Geo. I., c. 21, s. 27. "That from and after the 1st day of August, 1720, it shall and may be lawful to and for such owners or planters of hops, if they shall think fit, to put the said hops into casks; such owner or owners, planter or planters, first giving the like notice of the time that he, she, or they intend to weigh, and put the said hops into casks, as he, she, or they are by law required to give of the bagging of hops respectively: and in case any owner or owners, planter or planters, shall put any hops into casks without such notice, then he, she, or they shall be liable to the like penalties as such owner or owners, planter or planters, would have been liable unto in case such hops so put into casks had been bagged without such notice."

Hops may be put into casks.

Sect. 28. "That the officers of Excise, and others appointed by the commissioners of that revenue, shall in like manner attend and be present at the putting hops into casks and barrels, as he is by law required to be at the bagging of hops; and shall cause every cask or barrel, into which hops shall be put, to be weighed, and the weight of each cask to be plainly and distinctly marked on such cask respectively; and shall likewise cause the weight of the hops contained in such cask to be plainly and distinctly marked on each cask respectively; and shall cause an entry of the weight of such hops to be made in his book (the weight of such cask or barrel being abated), and shall make the like report to the commissioners of that revenue, and leave a like copy with the owner or planter of such hops, and under the like penalties and forfeitures as in case such hops had been put into bags; and the owner or owners, planter or planters, of such hops shall, within six months after the putting hops into casks or barrels, pay and clear off the duties on hops so casked or barrelled under the like penalty as if the same had been bagged."

Officers of Excise to attend the putting hops into casks, &c.

By 48 Geo. III., c. 134, s. 1. "That from and after the 25th day of July, 1808, in addition to the particulars required by law to be marked on the outside of every bag and pocket of hops, there shall be marked by the owner, planter, or grower of hops, in the form and manner in which the before-mentioned particulars are required to be marked, the name of the parish and of the county in which the hops put into any such bags or pockets were or shall be grown; and if any owner, planter, or grower of hops shall presume to put hops into any bag or pocket before the same shall have been marked in the form and manner by this act directed and required, he, she, or they shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit 20*l.*"

Bags and pockets of hops shall be marked with the parish and county of their growth.

Sect. 2. "That if any person or persons shall counterfeit or wilfully remove, alter, erase, or obliterate, or cause, procure, or suffer to be counterfeited, removed, altered, erased, or obliterated, any of the marks directed and required by this act, or any other act or acts of parliament in force at and immediately before the passing of this act, to be put or marked on bags or pockets of hops, all and every person or persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit 20*l.*"

Sect. 3. "That all fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by this act shall be sued for, recovered, levied, or mitigated by such ways, means, or methods as any fine, penalty, or forfeiture may be sued for, recovered, levied, or mitigated by any law or laws of Excise, or by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland respectively; and that one moiety of every such fine, penalty, or forfeiture shall be to His Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to him or them who shall inform, discover, or sue for the same."

By 54 Geo. III., c. 123, s. 1. "That from and after the 5th day of July, 1814, every owner, planter, or grower of hops, before he, she, or they shall begin to put any hops into any bag or pocket, shall mark, or cause to be marked, on the outside of each and every such bag, in large, plain, and legible letters, of four inches in length at the least, and half an inch in breadth, and on the outside of every such pocket, in large, plain, legible letters of three inches in length and half an inch in breadth at the least, with durable ink or paint, his, her, or their name or names, and the parish and county in which the said hops, to be packed therein, were actually grown; and if any owner, planter, or grower of hops, or any other person or persons shall put any hops into any bag or pocket, without having marked or caused to be marked thereon in manner hereinbefore directed the several matters and things hereinbefore required and prescribed, or shall before or at any future time after such hops have been packed, or shall * mark or cause to be marked thereon the name of any other person, parish, or county, than as is hereinbefore directed or prescribed, or the symbol appertaining to, or any thing denoting to be the symbol of any other county or place, every such owner, planter, or grower, or other person or persons so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.* for every such bag or pocket, to be recovered and applied in manner before directed."

Sect. 2. "That if any owner, planter, or grower of hops shall knowingly put or suffer to be put any hops of different qualities and value in the same bag or pocket, every such owner, planter, or grower shall forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.* for every such bag or pocket, to be recovered and applied in manner before directed."

By 9 Ann. c. 12, s. 23. "That no person whatsoever shall, during the continuance of this act, take any hops of foreign growth out of the bags in which they are imported, and rebag the same in British bagging, in order to sell, dispose, or export the same as British hops, under the penalty of 10*l.* for every hundred-weight, and after that rate for a greater or lesser quantity; and if any person or persons shall endeavour to defraud Her Majesty of her duties hereby granted, by using twice, or oftener, the same bag, with the officer's mark thereupon, such person or persons, for every such offence, shall forfeit the sum of 40*l.*"

Sect. 16. "That no planter or owner of hops, after the said first day of June, 1711, during the continuance of the said duties upon hops, shall (under pain of forfeiting the sum of 50*l.* for every offence) remove, carry or send away, or suffer to be removed, carried or sent away, from his, her, or their ous, store-house, or other place (whereof notice shall or ought to be given as aforesaid) any hops chargeable with the duty by this act imposed, until the same shall have been cured, bagged, and weighed, and the duties thereof shall be ascertained according to the true meaning of this act, unless in such cases where the officers of the said duties (having due notice first given or left as aforesaid) shall nevertheless neglect to attend the bagging and weighing of the same."

By 39 and 40 Geo. III., c. 81, s. 5. "That no owner, planter, or grower of hops growing or to grow in Great Britain shall remove or convey away, or cause or suffer to be removed or conveyed away, any hops from the ous, store-house, or other place where the same shall have been weighed, for the purpose of charging the duty, before the expiration of twelve hours next after such hops shall have been so weighed, unless the same shall sooner have been weighed or reweighed by the supervisor of Excise, to the end that such supervisor may have an opportunity to reweigh the same; and if, upon the reweighing of any such hops, any additional weight shall be found, such hops shall be liable to and chargeable with the duty of Excise imposed for or in respect of such hops, according to such last-mentioned weight; and if any such owner, planter, or grower shall remove or convey away, or cause or suffer to be removed or conveyed away, any such hops, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, the owner, planter, or grower of such hops so offending shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 50*l.*"

Sect. 10. "That if any person or persons whatsoever shall assault, oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in the due execution of this act, or of any of the powers or authorities given by this act, all and every such person or persons so offending shall, for every such offence, severally forfeit the sum of 100*l.*"

By 9 Ann. c. 12, s. 17. "That if any planters or owners of hops shall fraudulently hide or conceal, or cause or procure to be hid or concealed, any hops chargeable by this act, to the intent to deceive Her Majesty of the just duties by this act granted, that then, and in every such case, the party so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 20*l.*, and all the hops so concealed and hid, to Her Majesty's use."

Fraudulently concealing forfeits 20*l.* &c.

Sect. 18. "That if any picker or gatherer of hops, or any other person or persons, shall privately carry off or convey any hops from the place of growing, or the place where the same shall be put in order to be cured, bagged, and weighed, with an intent to defraud Her Majesty of her said duties, and the owner of the said hops, then, and in every such case, the person or persons offending therein shall forfeit and lose the sum of 5*s.* for every pound of hops so clandestinely carried off and conveyed; and in every such case it shall and may be lawful for the officers of the said duties, not only to seize the hops so clandestinely carried off and conveyed, but also to apprehend the said offender or offenders, and carry him or them before one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace of the county or place where such offence shall be committed; and in case the said offence shall be proved before the said justice of the peace, and the offender or offenders shall not forthwith pay down the penalties by this act imposed on such offender or offenders for the offences so proved on him, her, or them respectively as aforesaid, and no sufficient distress can be found to levy the same, it shall and may be lawful for the said justice of the peace to commit such offender or offenders to the house of correction, there to be whipt and kept to hard labour, for any time not exceeding one month; and if any person or persons shall obstruct or hinder any officer or officers for the said duties in the execution of his or their offices, or the powers given them by this act, or shall beat or abuse the said officers, or any of them, in the execution of his or their offices, such person or persons shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 5*l.*; and in default of distress whereby to levy the same, it shall and may be lawful for any of Her Majesty's justices of the peace, upon due proof of such offence, to commit such offender or offenders to the house of correction, there to be whipt and kept to hard labour, for any time not exceeding one month."

Picker of hops carrying off any such hops forfeits 5*s.* per lb. or sent to hard labour for a month.

the queen, and the other third part to the use of the informer or prosecutor."

By 7 Geo. II., c. 19, s. 2. "That if any person or persons in Great Britain or Ireland shall, from and after the said first day of May, 1734, mix with or put into any quantity of hops any drug or ingredient, or other thing whatsoever, to alter the colour or scent thereof, every person so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted by the oath of one or more witness or witnesses, before one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county or place where the offence shall be committed, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.* for every hundred-weight thereof."—R. v. Pack, 6 T. R. 374. The defendant was convicted on this fact for putting a quantity of sulphur and brimstone in the fire by which 100 cwt. of hops were drying, to alter the colour thereof, the vapour and fumes of which ascended to the hops placed over such fire, and, the hops being then in a moist state, fixed to the hops and made them appear brighter. Lord Kenyon, C. J. was clearly of opinion that this was an offence within the act of parliament, even though the vapours were a melioration of the hop (which was not the case, the vapour of the brimstone giving a false colour and a false value to the hops), and the conviction was affirmed.

By 9 Ann. c. 12, s. 24. "That during the continuance of this act, no common brewer, innkeeper or victualler shall use any broom, wormwood, or any other bitter ingredient (to serve instead of hops) in brewing or making any beer or ale to be brewed or made by him, her, or them for sale in any part of Great Britain, under the penalty of forfeiting the sum of 20*l.* for every such offence; the infusing of broom or wormwood into beer or ale by the retailer, after the same is brewed and tunned, to make the same broom or wormwood ale, or broom or wormwood beer, always excepted."

The penalties aforesaid (where not otherwise directed) shall be recovered and mitigated as by the laws of Excise, and distributed half to the king and half to him that shall sue. 9 Ann. c. 12, s. 26; 24 Geo. II. c. 42, s. 29; 26 Geo. III. c. 5, s. 8; 39 and 40 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 11; 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 53; ante, 227 to 310.

And by 9 Ann. c. 12, s. 19. "That all the hops in the custody of any planter or owner of hops, or any other person or persons to the use of or in trust for such planter or owner, shall be liable and subject to and are hereby made chargeable with all the debts and duties for hops in arrear and owing by such planter or owner respectively, and to all penalties and forfeitures incurred by such planter or owner for any offence against this act; and that it shall and may be lawful in all such cases to levy debts and penalties, and use such proceedings as may lawfully be done by this act, in case the debtor or offender were the true and lawful owner of the same."

The 6 Geo. II. c. 37, s. 6., and 4 Geo. IV., c. 46, s. 1, were repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 27, and the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 30, s. 18, enacts, "That if any person unlawfully and maliciously cut any hop-binds growing on poles in any plantation of hops, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years, and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped (if the Court shall so think fit) in addition to such imprisonment."

All the then-existing regulations of Excise duties and licences relating to leather were repealed by 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Wm. IV., intituled An act to repeal the duties of Excise and drawbacks on leather, and the laws relating thereto, (passed 29th May, 1830), and by which, after referring to 43 Geo. III. c. 69, it is enacted, "That from and after the 5th July, 1830, the several duties of Excise payable by law for or upon hides and skins, and pieces and parts of hides and skins, tanned, tawed, or dressed in oil, and on vellum and parchment made, in any part of the united kingdom, and all duties upon licences for exercising the trades of tanner, tawer, currier, or dresser of hides and skins in oil, and all drawbacks for or in respect of the exportation of any hides or skins, or leather, unmanufactured, or manufactured into goods, wares, or merchandise, shall cease and determine, and be no longer paid or payable; and that all enactments, provisions, regulations, and restrictions in any act or acts in force immediately before the passing of this act, relating to any such duties, or such licences, or such drawbacks, from and after the said 5th July, 1830, shall be and the same are hereby wholly repealed, and shall then cease and determine, save and except as to the payment and recovery of any arrear of the said duties, or of any penalty or forfeiture in respect thereof, which shall have been incurred before the said 5th July, 1830."

11 Geo. IV., c. 16.

Recites expediency of repealing the then-existing law, and repeals all duties and restrictions on the manufacture of leather in these words.

Sect. 2. "That nothing in this act contained shall be deemed or construed to continue in force so much of an act passed in the forty-eighth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, for repealing an act passed in the first year of King James the First, intituled An act concerning tanners, curriers, shoemakers, and other artificers occupying the cutting of leather, and also for repealing and amending certain parts of several other acts of parliament relating thereto, as prohibits any person or persons using the trade or business of tanning of leather, during the time that he, she, or they shall so use or carry on the said trade or business of tanning, from using, occupying, or in any manner carrying on the trade or business of a shoemaker, currier, leather-cutter, or other artificer exercising the cutting or working of leather, or to revive the said act of King James the First, or any other act or acts relating to the damaging of hides in the flaying thereof, or to revive or continue any other provision, restriction, or regulation in any way relating to the flaying of raw hides, or the tanning or working of hides or skins, or manufacture of leather, parchment, or vellum, or to repeal any act, or any part or provision contained in any of the said acts hereby repealed, repealing any former act."

Nothing in this act shall be deemed to continue so much of 48 Geo. 3, c. 60, as prohibits tanners from carrying on the business of a shoemaker, currier, &c.

As the prior laws are still in force with respect to any arrear of duty, it may be expedient to state the former enactments.

By 43 Geo. III. c. 69, a duty was laid upon all hides and skins, vellum, and parchment tanned in Great Britain; and other duties were also imposed by 49 Geo. III. c. 98, and 52 Geo. III. c. 94.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 1. "That from and after the 5th day of July, 1825, all and singular the respective duties and sums of money granted or payable for or upon any Excise licence in England, Scotland, or Ireland, or for or upon the granting thereof, by any act or acts of parliament in force at and immediately before the said 5th day of July, 1825, or by any other act or acts passed in this present session of parliament, shall cease and determine, save and except in all cases relating to the recovering, allowing, or paying any arrears of such duties and sums of money as aforesaid respectively which on the said 5th day of July, 1825, shall remain due and unpaid, and save and except as to any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, fines, penalties, or forfeitures, relating thereto respectively, which shall, on or before the said 5th day of July, 1825, have been incurred, and shall then remain due and unpaid, and save and except as to any Excise licence or licences theretofore granted, and any bond or bonds made or given by any Excise trader before the said 5th day of July, 1825, and which shall then remain in force and unexpired."

Sect. 2. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, in lieu and instead of the duties by this act repealed, there shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid unto His Majesty, his heirs and successors, in and throughout the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the several duties of Excise or rates and sums of money hereinafter following; (that is to say),

Every tanner	5l.
Every tawer	2l.
Every dresser of hides or skins in oil	4l.
Every currier	4l.
Every maker of vellum or parchment	2l."

Note.

And note, the several general regulations respecting the duties, fines, licences, &c. contained in statutes 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, and 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, are stated at length, ante, 227 to 310.

Collar-makers, &c. who dress skins, to be accounted tawers.

By 9 Ann. c. 11, s. 28. "Provided always, that all and every collar-makers, glovers, bridle-cutters, and others who dress any skins or hides, or pieces of skins or hides, in oil, alum, and salt, or meal, or with other ingredients, and who cut and make the same into wares, shall be accounted tawers or dressers within this act, and shall be subject to such rules and directions, and under such penalties and forfeitures for securing the duties of the hides and skins, or pieces of hides and skins, which they shall so dress, as are by this act prescribed in that behalf, and shall be charged with the duties for the same (by weight, tale, or ad valorem, as this act in the respective cases doth direct) before such hides and skins, or pieces of hides and skins, shall be respectively cut or converted into made wares."

Definition of tanned leather.

Leather dressed in oil, and tawed leather.

Sect. 3. "That by tanned hides or skins, or by tanned pieces of hides or skins, are meant only such as are tanned in wooze made of the bark of trees or shomack, or whereof the principal ingredients shall be such bark or shomack; and that by hides and skins dressed in oil, or pieces of hides and skins dressed in oil, are meant such as are made into leather in oil, or with any liquor or materials whereof the chiefest ingredient shall be oil; and that by tawed hides or skins, or by tawed pieces of hides or skins, are meant such as are dressed or made into leather in alum and salt, or meal, or other ingredients properly used by the tawers of white leather; and that when Her Majesty's full duty by this act shall be paid for any hide or skin, or part of any hide or skin, under any one of the said denominations, to wit, as for tanned leather, tawed leather, or dressed leather, the same skin or hide, or piece of any skin or hide, is not to be further charged by this act under any other of the said denominations, any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 18. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, or to and for the commissioners of the treasury, or any three or more of them now being, or the high treasurer, or any three or more of commissioners of the treasury for the time being, on Her Majesty's behalf, in writing to commissionate and appoint such and so many commissioners or persons as they shall think fit, by one or more commission or commissions, from time to time, to be Her Majesty's commissioners for the receipt and management of the said duties by this act set or imposed upon all hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, tanned, tawed, or dressed, or to be tanned, tawed, or dressed in Great Britain; which said commissioners, or the major part of them respectively, shall, and have hereby power, by commissions under their respective hands and seals, to substitute and appoint under them such receivers-general, collectors, comptrollers, surveyors, and other officers, as shall be requisite and necessary for the purposes aforesaid; and that the said commissioners so to be appointed, and all the officers for the said duties, shall have out of the same such salaries and rewards for their respective services in relation to the said duties, as the said commissioners of the treasury, or any three or more of them now being, or the high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of the treasury for the time being, shall think reasonable to establish or allow in that behalf; and that the said commissioners for the said duties respectively, for the time being, shall from time to time cause all the moneys to arise by or for the said duties upon hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, to be tanned, tawed, or dressed in Great Britain, and for the said vellum and parchment to be made in Great Britain (the necessary charges of managing, collecting, and raising the same excepted), to be paid from time to time, as the same shall arise, into the receipt of Her Majesty's exchequer in England, under the penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities hereinafter expressed."

Sect. 38. "That such commissioners or persons as shall be appointed in pursuance of this act to be the commissioners for the said duties upon hides and skins, tanned, tawed, or dressed in Great Britain, shall and may have and exercise the same jurisdiction, power, and authority, and shall and may adjudge, determine, mitigate, and order in all cases and matters relating to the said duties on hides and skins, and pieces thereof, tanned, tawed, or dressed in Great Britain, and to the said duties on vellum and parchment, made in Great Britain, as the commissioners of Excise, upon beer, ale, and other liquors, may or lawfully can exercise, adjudge, determine, mitigate, or order, in the like cases and matters relating to the said duties of Excise, by any law or statute now in force."

Sect. 15. "That all and every tanner, bazil tanner, currier, tawer, Spanish leather dresser, and all other dressers of hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, to be tanned, tawed, or dressed in wooze, mill, alum, salt, oil, meal, or other materials whatsoever, and all and every maker of vellum and parchment in Great Britain, shall, before the 20th day of July, 1711, give notice in writing to some one or more of the proper officer or officers to be appointed for the next market to the place where any tanhouse, tanyard, workhouse, mill, or other place, shall be made use of for the tanning, tawing, or dressing any such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or making any such vellum or parchment as aforesaid, of their respective names and places of abode, and of every such tanhouse, tanyard, workhouse, mill, or other place, for the tanning, tawing, or dressing any such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, vellum, and parchment as aforesaid, by them respectively used, and of the number and situation of pits and vats in them or any of them, and of the numbers and kinds of the hides and skins, or pieces of hides and skins, then being in the said pits and vats respectively; and that all and every such tanner, tawer, currier, dresser, and maker as aforesaid, as often as he, she, or they shall change their places of tanning, tawing, or dressing of such hides or skins, or pieces of hides and skins, or making such vellum or parchment, and all and every person and persons, who shall at any time or times hereafter, during the continuance of this act, be the tanner, tawer, currier, or dresser of any such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or be the maker of any such vellum or parchment as aforesaid, shall give or leave the like notice of their respective names and places of abode, and of their tanhouses, yards, workhouses, mills, or other places where they shall tan, taw, or dress, or intend to tan, taw, or dress any such hides or skins, or pieces thereof, or make any such vellum or parchment as aforesaid, before they or any of them do presume to make use of such tanhouse, yard, workhouse, mill, or other place, or any pits or vats therein, to the end the said officers may, from time to time, have due knowledge of all such tanhouses, tanyards, workhouses, mills, or other places, with the number and situation of vats and pits where such hides or skins, or pieces thereof, shall be tanned, tawed, or dressed, and where the said vellum or parchment shall be made, and be the better enabled to take an account of all hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, chargeable by this act, that so Her Majesty may be the better answered the duties for the same; and if any such tanner, tawer, currier, dresser, or maker as aforesaid, shall neglect to give or leave such notice as is required by this act as aforesaid, he, she, or they shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 50*l*.; one third part thereof to Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, and the other two thirds to him or them that shall inform or sue for the same."

Sect. 17. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the officer and officers so to be appointed, at all seasonable times in the day-time, to enter into any tanyard, workhouse, warehouse, mill, or other house or place used by any such tanner, tawer, currier, or dresser of any hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or by any maker of vellum or parchment, chargeable by this act, or where any such shall be lodged, to search and see what quantities of such hides and skins, or pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment are taken out of the wooze, mill, liquors, or other materials as aforesaid, in order to be dried, or made fit for sale or use; and if any owner or occupier of any such tanyard, workhouse, or other place as aforesaid, shall at any time or times refuse entrance to the officer or officers as aforesaid, he, she, or they shall for every such refusal forfeit the sum of 10*l*.; one third part thereof to the use of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other two thirds to the use of him or them who will inform or sue for the same; and if any tanner, tawer, currier, or dresser of any hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or any maker of vellum or parchment, chargeable by this act, shall endeavour to defraud Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, of any duty by this act payable, by using any private tanyard, workhouse, pit, vat, mill, or place, for the tanning, tawing, steeping, dressing, drying, or keeping the same, contrary to this act; or by not giving or sending such timely notice of taking his, her, or their hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, out of the wooze, mill, liquor, oil, or other materials, as this act requires; or by not making due entries, and giving an account of the said hides and skins or pieces thereof as aforesaid; or by removing, sending, or carrying away the same, or any part thereof, contrary to this act; or shall fraudulently hide or conceal, or cause to be hid or concealed, any of the said hides or skins, or pieces thereof, vellum or parchment, chargeable by this act, to the intent to deceive Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, of her or their just dues for the same; that then and in every such case, for every such offence, the party so offending shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*.; one moiety whereof to the queen, and the other moiety to him or them who will inform or sue for the same; and moreover, in all such cases, all such hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, which shall be found in any such private tanyard, workhouse, warehouse, house, mill, or place, or for which no such entry shall be made, or that shall be so unlawfully removed, sent, or carried away, contrary to this act, or shall be fraudulently hid or concealed, or the value thereof, shall be forfeited; to wit, one moiety thereof to the use of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other moiety thereof to the person or persons who will seize, inform, or sue for the same."

And by 41 Geo. III., (U. K.) c. 91, s. 10. "That from and after the 5th day of July, 1801, if any hide or skin tanned, tawed, or dressed in oil shall be found in any place whatsoever in Great Britain (except on the entered premises of any tanner, tawer, currier, or dresser of leather in oil), without having thereon the mark or stamp to denote the charging of the duty for such hide or skin, the same shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and the person or persons in whose custody or possession the same shall be found shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

From July 5, 1801, hides or skins tanned, &c. found on any other than entered premises shall be forfeited, and the person in whose custody found shall forfeit 100*l*.

By 9 Anne, c. 11, s. 16. "That the several tanners, tawers, dressers, and makers aforesaid, during the continuance of this act, shall not make use of any place or places for the drying or keeping the said hides or skins, or any pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, chargeable by this act, other than such place or places whereof he, she, or they shall first have given notice to the proper officer of the said duties to be the usual place or places for his, her, or their drying and keeping the same; and that the respective tanners, tawers, dressers, and makers aforesaid shall, from time to time, give or send notice in writing to the proper officer for the said duties of the time when such tanner, tawer, maker, or dresser shall take his, her, or their hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or any of them, or any vellum or parchment, out of the mill, wooze, liquor, oil, or other materials wherein the same shall be tanned, tawed, steeped, or dressed, in order to be dried; which notice shall, from time to time, be given or sent two days at the least before the taking such hides or skins, or pieces thereof, or the said vellum or parchment, out of the said wooze, mill, liquor, oil, or other materials, or before the hanging up or disposing the same to be dried; and that the respective tanners, tawers, dressers, and makers aforesaid shall from time to time permit and suffer the proper officers of the said duties, and they are hereby empowered, to take an account of the number and quality of all hides and skins and pieces thereof, vellum and parchment, which any such tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker, by or for himself or themselves, or by or for any other person or persons, shall (at any time or times from and after the said 24th day of June, 1711, during the said term of 32 years) take out of wooze, mill, liquor, oil, or other materials wherein the same shall have been tanned, tawed, steeped, dressed, or made, in order to be dried; and shall within two days after the taking out of the said wooze, mill, liquor, or other materials aforesaid, and before the carrying away the same from the usual place or places where such hides or skins or pieces thereof, or such vellum or parchment, are or shall be usually dried, make true entry, with the proper officer or officers, of the number and quality of the hides, skins, and the pieces of hides and skins so taken out to be dried, and shall verify such entry upon oath, which oath any justices of the peace, or the collectors or supervisors that shall be appointed for the said duty in their respective districts, are hereby empowered to administer, to the end the respective duties for the same may be answered, as is hereinafter directed; and that no tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker of such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or such vellum or parchment, so taken out of the wooze, mill, liquor, or materials aforesaid after the said 24th day of June, at any time or times during the term aforesaid shall remove, carry, or send away, or suffer to be removed, carried, or sent away, the same, or any part thereof, from their respective yards, workhouses, or other places where they shall usually dry such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or such vellum or parchment, unless the duty payable by this act for such hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, and for such vellum and parchment respectively, so to be removed, be first charged and entered, and a mark be put thereupon to denote the charge and entry thereof as this act directs."

Sect. 17. "If any person shall not send such notice of taking the goods out of the wooze or other materials, or not make due entries, or remove any the said goods contrary to this act, he shall forfeit 20*l.* and such goods, or the value thereof." See ante, 466.

Sect. 17. "If any tanner or other such person shall conceal any hide or skin, vellum or parchment, or any part thereof, he shall forfeit 20*l.*, and also the goods concealed, or the value thereof." See ante, 466.

Sect. 12. "That if any tanner or other person or persons, from and after the said 20th day of June, 1711, shall shave or cause to be shaved any hide or calve-skin whatsoever, before the same be thoroughly tanned, whereby such hide or skin shall be impaired, and Her Majesty's duty thereby diminished, every such hide or skin, or the value thereof, shall be forfeited; one moiety to the queen, and the other moiety to him or them that will inform or sue for the same."

By 56 Geo. III., c. 110, s. 4. "The 9 Ann. c. 11, s. 1, was repealed, save and except as to the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, fines, penalties, or forfeitures, incurred in any respect relating thereto before or upon that day; and that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful for any entered tanner or tanners to take out of the wooze and shave any hide or skin, or to cut and separate therefrom the thin parts thereof: provided always, that every such tanner or tanners shall give six days' previous notice in writing to the officer of Excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be of his intention or desire so to do, specifying in such notice the day and hour when he, she, or they will take any such hides or skins out of the wooze, and the number of such hides or skins respectively to be taken out, and whether the same are to be so taken out for the purpose of being shaved, or for the thin parts to be cut and separated as aforesaid; and if any tanner or tanners shall take any hides or skins, or parts or pieces of hides or skins, out of the wooze for either of the purposes aforesaid respectively, or for any other purpose, except by shifting the same into other wooze in the same entered premises, or shall remove or conceal any hide or skin, or any piece or part thereof, not being the shaving thereof, from the sight or view of the officer, so that the duties payable thereon shall not be duly charged, accounted for, and paid, the tanner or tanners respectively so offending shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*" two years shall tan, taw, or dress any hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins whatsoever, chargeable by this act, shall, at their several yards or places by them respectively used for drying the same, provide and keep, at their own costs and charges, sufficient and just scales and weights for weighing of all such hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, which they respectively shall tan, taw, or dress, and for which the said duties are to be paid by weight as aforesaid; and that such and so many sworn officers for the said duties as shall be sufficient and necessary for the weighing the said hides and skins, and pieces thereof, and performing such other matters and things as are to be performed by such officer or officers at every such yard or dressing-place, shall be appointed, and give due attendance for that purpose."

Sect. 26. "That if any tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker of any hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, chargeable by this act, shall not at their respective yards, or other places for drying the same, keep just scales and weights, as this act directs; or shall not permit his, her, or their hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, which are to be weighed at such yards or drying places as aforesaid, to be there weighed; or neglect or refuse to bring the same to the scales, or assist at the weighing of the same, as this act requires; or if any tanner, tawer, or dresser of hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, or any maker of vellum or parchment, chargeable by this act, shall remove or convey or cause or procure to be removed or conveyed from his, her, or their yard or drying place any of the said hides and skins, or pieces of hides and skins, or any such vellum or parchment, before the said duties shall be fully charged by weight, or tale, or ad valorem, as this act in the said respective cases doth require, and before the same hides or skins, or pieces of hides and skins, and such vellum and parchment respectively shall be marked, to denote the charging of the duty as this act directs; or if any buyer or contractor shall take or carry away or cause or procure to be carried away from any such yard or drying place any of the kinds of hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, before the same shall be marked as this act directs; that then, and in every such case, all and every such tanners, tawers, dressers, makers, buyers, contractors, or other persons respectively, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.*—to wit, one moiety thereof to the queen, and the other moiety to him or them that will inform or sue for the same; and moreover, that all the hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, which shall be sold or removed, contrary to this act, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized, by any of Her Majesty's officers, for Her Majesty's use."

By 10 Geo. III., c. 44, s. 1. "That if at any time after the 24th day of June, 1760, any trader subject to the survey of any officer of Excise, and required by the laws concerning the duties under the management of the commissioners of Excise to keep sufficient and just scales and weights, shall, in the weighing his, her, or their stock or stocks, make use of, or cause or procure or suffer to be used, any false, unjust, or insufficient scales or weights, to the intent to defraud His Majesty of the duties by the said laws respectively granted, that then, and in every such case, the party or parties offending shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.* for every such offence." And by the 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 15, the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer.

And by 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 8. "That if at any time or times after the 1st day of August, 1786, any trader or traders subject to the survey of any officer or officers of the Excise or inland duties, and who is or are required, by any law or laws relating to the duties of Excise, or other duties under the management of the commissioners of Excise, to keep just scales and weights, shall, before or after or in the weighing of his, her, or their stock, or any part thereof, put or suffer or cause or procure to be put any other substance into the commodity or stock so to be weighed, whereby such officer or officers might be hindered or prevented from

By 9 Ann., c. 11, s. 19. "That every such tanner, tawer, or dresser of any such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, and every maker of vellum or parchment, shall from time to time, before any such hides or skins, pieces of hides or skins, or such vellum or parchment shall be removed from his, her, or their yards, workhouses, places of dressing, drying, or keeping the same respectively, give notice in writing, by the space of two days, to the proper officer or officers for the said duties, of all hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, and all such vellum and parchment as he, she, or they shall intend to remove, to the intent that the officers for the said duties may ascertain the duties payable for the same (for the giving of which notice he, she, or they shall not be obliged to go farther than the next market town); and every such tanner or dresser shall permit all such hides or skins, for which the duties are to be charged and paid by weight, to be weighed by the proper officer or officers, at the yard or place where the same shall be dried or kept, before the same shall be removed as aforesaid; and shall bring or cause the same to be brought to the scales, and assist in weighing thereof; and shall also permit the officer for the said duties to take an account of the numbers and qualities of all such skins and hides, or pieces of skins and hides, vellum and parchment, so intended to be removed, whereof the duty is to be paid by tale; and shall likewise ascertain the value of all such skins and hides, or pieces of skins and hides, so intended to be removed, whereof the duty is to be charged and paid ad valorem, by the oath of the said respective tanners, tawers, dressers, or makers thereof as aforesaid; which oath any justice of the peace, for * the said respective officer or officers, are hereby empowered to administer, before any such skins or hides, or pieces of skins or hides, be removed from the places of drying or keeping the same respectively."

Sect. 20. "That from and after the duties of the said skins and hides, pieces of skins and hides, vellum and parchment, so intended to be removed, shall be ascertained by weight, tale, or ad valorem as aforesaid, the proper officer or officers for the said duties shall fairly enter in a book, to be kept by him or them for that purpose, the respective weights, tales, and value of all such hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, whereof the duties shall have been so ascertained as aforesaid, and shall make thereof a return or report in writing to the respective commissioners, or the collectors, or other persons by them appointed to receive the same, leaving a true copy thereof under his hand with the respective tanners, tawers, dressers, and makers of such hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment; which return or report of the said officer or officers shall be a charge upon the tanners, tawers, dressers, and makers of such hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment respectively."

Sect. 21. "That immediately from and after the duty of the said hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, so intended to be removed, shall be ascertained by weight, tale, or ad valorem as aforesaid, and an entry made thereof in a book to be kept by the said officer or officers as aforesaid, the said officer or officers who shall so have ascertained the same shall cause every hide or skin, and every piece of a hide or skin, and all vellum and parchment, whereof the duty shall be so ascertained, to be marked with such mark as this act directs to be provided and used, to denote the charging of such duty as aforesaid."

Sect. 22. "That in case any such tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker of

By 9 Ann., c. 11, s. 44; 5 Geo. I., c. 2, s. 9; and 38 Geo. III., c. 54, s. 10. "That if any person shall counterfeit the stamp, or the impression of the same, or knowingly sell any of the said goods with a counterfeit stamp or impression, he shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy."

By 52 Geo. III., c. 143, s. 1. "That in all cases where any act to be done or committed after the passing of this act, in breach of or in resistance to any part of the laws for collecting His Majesty's revenue in Great Britain, would by the laws now in force subject the offender to suffer death, as guilty of felony, without benefit of clergy, by virtue of the said laws, or any of them, such act, so to be done or committed, shall be deemed and taken to be felony with benefit of clergy, and punishable only as such, unless the same shall also be declared to be felony without benefit of clergy by this act."

To prevent frauds between the officers and dealers, by 5 Geo. II., c. 2, s. 10, all tanners, tawers, and dressers of hides, skins, vellum, and parchment shall keep those which have not been stamped from those which have, and also those which have been last stamped from those which have been stamped before, for twenty-four hours within the bills, and for two days elsewhere, unless they shall have sooner been weighed and taken account of by the surveyor or supervisor, on pain of 10*l*.

By 56 Geo. III., c. 110, s. 6. "That all and every tanner, tawer, or dresser of hides or skins, or pieces or parts of hides or skins, shall hang up such hides or skins, or parts or pieces of hides or skins, which he, she, or they shall take out of the wooze for that purpose, separate and apart from all hides or skins, and pieces or parts of hides or skins, hung up to dry, or taken out of the wooze for that purpose, on any former day, and shall keep and continue the same, and every of them, so separate and apart, until the surveying officer shall have taken an account thereof; and if any such tanner, tawer, or dresser shall refuse or neglect so to do, he, she, or they shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

And by 5 Geo. III., c. 43, s. 21. "That no tanner, tawer, or dresser of hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, chargeable with the respective duties by law payable for the same, shall at any time or times, from and after the 5th day of July, 1765, remove or convey, or cause, procure, or suffer to be removed or conveyed, from his, her, or their yard or drying-place, or from his, her, or their entered store-rooms, any hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, before the expiration of twenty-four hours next after the stamping thereof by the officers for the said duties, unless the same shall sooner have been weighed by the respective supervisors or surveyors for the said duties, to the end that the said respective supervisors and surveyors may have an opportunity to reweigh the same after the said officers: and if upon the reweighing any such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, any additional weight shall be found, such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, shall be liable to, and chargeable with, the respective rates and duties by law payable for such hides or skins according to such last-mentioned weight: and if any such tanner, tawer, or dresser of hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, shall remove, or cause or suffer to be removed, any such hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, from any of his, her, or their yards or drying-places, or entered store-rooms, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, he, she, or they shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 22. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1765, all and every such tanners, tawers, and dressers of hides and skins, shall, at their respective yards or drying-places, be obliged to provide and keep, at their own costs and charges, sufficient and just scales and weights for the reweighing such hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins; and to bring the same to the scales, and to assist the said respective surveyors and supervisors in the reweighing such hides and skins, and in examining, from time to time, the depending stock of every such tanner, tawer, or dresser of hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins; and if any such tanner, tawer, or dresser of hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, shall refuse or neglect to provide and keep, at their respective yards or drying-places, sufficient and just scales and weights for the reweighing such hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, or to bring the same to the scales, or to assist the said respective surveyors and supervisors in the reweighing such hides and skins, or pieces of hides and skins, or in the examining, from time to time, their respective depending stocks as this act directs, every such tanner, tawer, and dresser of hides and skins, or pieces of hides and skins, so refusing or neglecting, shall, in each and every such case, forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.*" (a)

By 9 Ann., c. 11, s. 23. "That the respective tanners, tawers, dressers, and makers of such hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, shall pay off and discharge all the duties of the said hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, so marked as aforesaid, in manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) such of the said duties as shall arise within the cities of London and Westminster, and the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, to the receiver of the said duties at the head office of the said commissioners, within fourteen days after the same shall be marked as aforesaid; and such of the said duties as shall arise and be payable in the other parts of Great Britain, within six weeks after the same shall be so marked and stamped as aforesaid, to the respective collectors that shall be appointed to receive the same: and the officers to be appointed for collecting and receiving the duties hereby granted shall, and they are hereby required to give receipts under their hands gratis, and without delay, for all the moneys they shall from time to time receive by virtue of this act, to or for the use of such person or persons as shall pay the same."

Sect. 24. "Provided always, that no person or persons shall be obliged, for the payment of the said duties, to go farther than the next market town to the respective places where the same shall be so marked as aforesaid."

Sect. 25. "That every such tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker of such hides and skins, pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, chargeable with the said duties, who shall neglect or refuse to make such payment as aforesaid, shall forfeit and lose for every such offence double the sum of the said duty whereof the payment shall be so refused or neglected; and that no such tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker, or other person, after such default made, shall send, deliver, or carry out any hides or skins, pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, until he, she, or they have or hath paid and cleared off his, her, or their duty as aforesaid, on pain to forfeit double the value of such hides or skins, pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, so delivered or carried out."

(a) The depending stock of a tanner, with respect to which the regulations of the 5th of Geo. III., c. 43, s. 22, apply, is not merely the stock of hides and skins, &c. which have been taken out of the wooze, and have been already weighed and marked by the inferior officer of Excise, but the whole of the stock which has been taken out of the wooze. Therefore the tanner is liable to the penalty for not providing scales and weights, and for not assisting the officers of Excise in not only reweighing the stock already weighed by the officer, but in so providing weights and scales for reweighing, and in examining any part of his stock of hides and skins taken out of the wooze, and being on his premises from that time until the time when they might legally be removed. Attorney-General v. Bevington and another, 11 Price, 222.

Sect. 27. "That every tanner, tawer, and dresser of any hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, and every maker of vellum and parchment, in Great Britain, shall once in every three months at the least make an account with the proper officer of every division or district respectively of and for all the hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, which such tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker respectively, by himself, or any other within the time of every such account, shall have taken out of the wooze, mill, liquor, or ingredients used for tanning, tawing, steeping, dressing, or making the same, and of his entries thereof with the officer, and shall at the same time balance the said account, by hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, for which the duty shall then have been charged as aforesaid, and by such hides and skins, and pieces of hides and skins, vellum and parchment, then remaining in his possession unmarked, for which the duty shall not have been charged as aforesaid; which account (if demanded) every such tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker shall truly and faithfully make, from time to time, under the penalty of 50*l.*—to wit, one moiety thereof to the queen, and the other moiety to him or them who will inform or sue for the same; and that every such officer, upon the taking of every such account, shall inform himself concerning the truth or falsehood thereof, to the end and purpose, that if such tanner, tawer, dresser, or maker shall have unlawfully conveyed away any of the said hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, contrary to this act, or shall have defrauded Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, of any part of the duties hereby payable for the same, he may be proceeded against in such manner and form, and for such penalties or forfeitures, as are by this act prescribed for such offence."

Tanner, &c. to account with the proper officer once in three months,

Sect. 36. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any two or more of the justices of the peace for the time being, residing near to the place where any forfeiture upon this act shall be incurred, or any offence against this act shall be committed, in any wise relating to the said hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, chargeable by this act, or any the duties thereupon, or the powers and authorities hereby granted, or where any offence shall be committed against the said recited act of the first year of the reign of King James the First, to hear and determine the same: which said justices of the peace are hereby authorized and required, upon any information exhibited, or complaint made in that behalf, within three months after any seizure made, or such offence committed, to summon the party accused, and also the witnesses on either side, and upon the appearance or contempt of the party accused in not appearing (upon proof of notice given) to proceed to the examination of the witness or witnesses upon oath (which oath they are hereby empowered to administer), and to give judgment or sentence accordingly; and where the party accused shall be convicted of the offence alleged against him, to award and issue warrants under their hands for the levying any pecuniary penalty or penalties so adjudged on the goods of the offender, and to cause sale to be made thereof, in case they shall not be redeemed within six days, rendering the party the overplus (if any): and if either party shall find himself aggrieved, or remain unsatisfied in the judgment of the said justices, then he or they shall or may, by virtue of this act, complain or appeal to the justices of the peace at the next general quarter-sessions for that county, riding, or place, who are hereby empowered to summon and examine witnesses upon oath, and finally to hear and determine the same, and in case of conviction to issue warrants for levying the penalties as aforesaid."

Two justices may hear and determine.

1 Jac. 1, c. 22.

Appeal to quarter-sessions final.

Sect. 37. "Provided nevertheless, that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said respective justices, where they shall see cause, to mitigate or lessen any such penalties in such manner as they in their discretion shall think fit, the reasonable cost and charges in the officers, as well in making the discovery as in the prosecution of the same, being always allowed over and above such mitigation, and so as such mitigation do not reduce the penalties to less than one-fourth part thereof, over and above the said costs

Justices may mitigate penalties.

14. Leather, &c.

No information to be brought to Westminster in cases cognizable by justices, &c.

and charges; any thing contained in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sect. 47. "Provided, that no bill, plaint, or information shall be brought or sued forth in any of Her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster for any offence against this statute touching or concerning the duties hereby granted for or upon any hides or skins, or pieces of hides or skins, vellum or parchment, tanned, tawed, dressed, or made in Great Britain, in cases where such offences are by this act cognizable by justices of the peace; nor shall any certiorari be brought or allowed to remove any the proceedings of the justices of the peace relating to the same offences, or any forfeitures or penalties for the same, but that the determination of the justices of the peace in the county where such offence or offences shall be committed shall, in manner and form aforesaid, be final, to all intents and purposes whatsoever; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

From July 5, 1803, the present duties under the management of the commissioners of Excise, and the drawbacks, shall cease.

This act shall not extend to malt duties under 43 Geo. 3, c. 3, nor to duties upon malt, tobacco, and snuff, continued by 43 Geo. 3, c. 4, except as to the duties on tobacco licences, and on tobacco of Spain and Portugal; nor to certain countervailing duties on importation from Ireland, &c.

By 43 Geo. III., c. 69, s. 1. "That from and after the 5th day of July, 1803, all and singular the duties, allowances, bounties, and drawbacks of Excise, and other duties under the management of the commissioners of Excise in England and Scotland respectively, granted by any act or acts of parliament now in force, shall cease and determine; save and except in all cases relating to the recovering, allowing, or paying any arrears thereof respectively, which may at that time remain unpaid, or to any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, fines, penalties, or forfeitures, relating thereto respectively, which shall have been incurred at any time before or on the said 5th day of July, 1803."

Schedule A., title "PRINTED GOODS," imposed the following duties:

For every yard square of paper which shall be printed, painted, or stained in Great Britain, to serve for hangings or other uses, over and above the duties payable for such paper before the printing, painting, or staining thereof	£.	s.	d.
	0	0	1½
For every yard in length, reckoning yard wide, of foreign calico, and of foreign muslin, which shall be printed, stained, painted, or dyed in Great Britain, except such as shall be dyed throughout of one colour only	0	0	7
For every yard in length, reckoning yard wide, of all linens, and of stuffs wholly made of cotton wool wove in Great Britain, commonly called British manufactory, and of British muslins, and of all fustians, velvets, velverets, dimities, and other figured stuffs, made of cotton and other materials mixed,

(a) See revision of the subject, ante, 310, 311.

(b) See some of these acts commented upon in the Attorney-General v. Brandon, 3 Price, 360. The scenes of the theatres, and all other canvas so painted, are liable to the duties of Excise as painted linen. Canvas is linen, within the statutes; but where the canvas has been previously primed, it is not liable to any further duty for being afterwards painted, the primer having paid a duty in the first instance in respect of the colour necessarily laid on in that preparatory operation. Attorney-General v. Brandon, 3 Price, 360.

or wholly made of cotton wool wove in Great Britain, and of all other stuffs whatsoever, which shall be printed, stained, painted, or dyed in Great Britain, except such as shall be dyed throughout of one colour only, and stuffs made of woollen, or whereof the greatest part in value shall be woollen

The said duties on printed, stained, painted, or dyed goods, to be paid by the printer, stainer, painter, or dyer thereof.

Schedule C., drawbacks to the "PRINTED GOODS."

For every yard square of paper printed, painted, or stained in Great Britain, for hangings or other uses, for which the duties imposed in respect thereof shall have been paid, and which shall be duly exported as merchandize to foreign parts

The whole duty.

For all linens, stuffs, fustians, velvets, velverets, dimities, figured stuffs, stuffs wholly made of cotton wool wove in Great Britain, commonly called British manufactory, calicoes, and muslins, and all silk handkerchiefs printed, stained, painted, or dyed; and for all silks printed, stained, or painted in Great Britain, for which the duties imposed in respect thereof shall have been paid, and which shall be duly exported as merchandize to foreign parts

All the duties.

These duties are collected and recoverable pursuant to the general regulations and provisions of 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53; ante, 227 to 310.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 111, all former duties of Customs were repealed, and new duties are imposed; ante, 133.

By 7 Geo. IV., c. 53, s. 1. "That from and after the 5th day of July next, and until the 10th day of October, 1828, in lieu and instead of the duties imposed by the therein recited act on silk goods, and set forth in a table thereunto annexed, denominated 'Table of Duties of Customs Inwards,' the several duties set forth in figures in the table hereinafter contained, and denominated 'Table of temporary Duties on Silk Goods,' shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid unto His Majesty, in like manner as if the same had been imposed by the said act hereinbefore mentioned, and set forth in the said table thereunto annexed; that is to say,

From 5th July, 1828, until 10th October, 1828, the duties herein mentioned shall be paid upon importation of silks.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81. "Every calico-printer, and every printer, painter, or stainer of linens, cottons, stuffs, or silks, shall pay annually for a licence 20*l.*" Ante, 247.

By 7 Geo. I., stat. 1, c. 7, s. 1. "That from and after the 25th day of December which shall be in the year of our Lord 1722, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons whatsoever to use or wear in Great Britain, in any garment or apparel whatsoever, any printed, painted, stained, or dyed calico, under the penalty of forfeiting to the informer the sum of 5*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain for every such offence, being lawfully convicted thereof by the oath or oaths of one or more credible witness or witnesses before any one or more justice or justices of the peace; which justice or justices is and are hereby respectively authorized and strictly enjoined and required, upon any complaint or information upon oath exhibited or brought of any such offence committed, contrary to this act, within six days after commitment thereof, to summon the party accused, and upon his or her appearance or contempt to proceed to examination of the matter of fact, and upon due proof thereof, either by voluntary confession of the party, or by the oath or oaths of one or more credible witness or witnesses (which oath or oaths the said justice or justices is and are hereby respectively empowered and required to administer), to hear and determine the same, and upon such conviction to cause the said penalty, by warrant under his or their hand and seal or hands and seals respectively, to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, rendering to the party the overplus (the charge of such distress and sale being first deducted); nevertheless it shall be lawful for any party aggrieved to appeal to the justices of the peace at the next general quarter-sessions to be holden for the county, city, riding, or place where the said offence or offences shall have been committed, giving six days' notice at the least of such appeal to the prosecutor or prosecutors; which justices at such general quarter-sessions are hereby authorized and empowered to hear and determine the same, and their judgment therein shall be final."

Sect. 2. "That if any mercer, draper, upholder, or any other person or persons or corporation whatsoever, shall at any time or times after the said 25th day of December, 1722, sell, utter, or expose to sale any printed, painted, stained, or dyed calico, or any bed, chair, cushion, window-curtain, or other household stuff or furniture whatsoever, made up of or mixed with any printed, painted, stained, or dyed calico, unless for exportation thereof, and unless the same shall be cleared outwards accordingly, as is usual in case of sale for exportation, every such person or corporation so offending shall for every offence, being lawfully convicted thereof, forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain, to be recovered as is hereinafter directed; and every steward or other officer of such corporation, or his deputy, offending herein, and being lawfully convicted of such offence, shall, over and besides the forfeiture or penalty aforesaid, forfeit and lose his office and employment, and be incapable to hold the same."

Sect. 4. "That one moiety of all pecuniary penalties and forfeitures imposed by this act, where the same shall exceed 5*l.*, shall be to the informer or prosecutor, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish or place where the offence shall be committed; and such penalties as are not herein directed to be otherwise recovered shall be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster, for offences committed in England, Wales, or Berwick-upon-Tweed, or in His Majesty's Court of Session, Court of Justiciary, or Court of Exchequer in Scotland, for offences committed in that part of Great Britain, together with full costs of suit, by any person or persons who shall sue for the same within six calendar months next after the offence committed; and that in any such action or suit, no essoin, protection, privilege, or wager of law shall be allowed, nor any more than one imparlance."

Sect. 3. "That from and after the 25th day of December, 1722, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to use or wear in Great Britain, in or about any bed, chair, cushion, window-curtain, or any other sort of household stuff or furniture, any printed, painted, stained, or dyed calico (except as hereinafter is excepted), under the penalty of forfeiting (being thereof lawfully convicted) the sum of 20*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain, to be recovered as hereinafter is directed."

Sect. 11. "Provided, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to such calicoes as shall be dyed all blue."

Sect. 10. "That the prohibition of calicoes intended by this act and the penalties thereby inflicted for wearing or using printed, painted, stained, or dyed calico in apparel, household stuff, or furniture, after the 25th day of December, 1722, contrary to this act, shall respectively extend to prohibit, and shall be levied and recovered for wearing or using in apparel, household stuff, or furniture, after the said 25th day of December, 1722, any stuff made of cotton or mixed therewith, which shall be printed or painted with any colour or colours, or any calico chequered or striped, or any calico stitched or flowered in foreign parts with any colour or colours, or with coloured flowers made there (muslins, neckcloths, and fustians excepted), in such manner as the penalties inflicted by this act for wearing or using printed, painted, stained, or dyed calico in apparel, household stuff, or furniture after the said 25th day of December, 1722, contrary to this act, are to be levied or recovered; but under such limitations, and with such liberties, privileges, and advantages, as are mentioned and expressed in this act, or in any other act or acts of parliament now in force relating thereto, or relating to printed, painted, stained, or dyed calicoes."

By 9 Geo. II., c. 4. "It shall be lawful to use stuff made of linen yarn and cotton wool manufactured and printed or painted in Great Britain, provided the warp thereof be entirely linen yarn."

By 14 Geo. III., cap. 72, s. 1. "That no greater or higher duty than threepence for every yard in length, reckoning yard wide, and after that rate for a greater or lesser quantity, shall be imposed, raised, levied, collected, or paid unto and for the use of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, on the said new-manufactured stuffs, wholly made of cotton spun in Great Britain, when printed, stained, painted, or dyed with any colour or colours."

Sect. 2. "That it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons to use or wear, within the kingdom of Great Britain, either as apparel, household stuff, furniture, or otherwise, any new-manufactured stuffs, wholly made of cotton spun in Great Britain, when printed, stained, painted, or dyed with any colour or colours; any thing in the recited act of the seventh year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the First, or any other act or acts of parliament, to the contrary hereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 3. "That in each piece of the said new-manufactured stuffs, wholly made of cotton wool spun in Great Britain, there shall be wove in the warp, in both selvages, through the whole length thereof, three blue stripes, each stripe of one thread only (a); the first of which said stripes shall be the first or outermost thread of the warp of each selvege, the second of which said stripes shall be the third thread, and the third of which said stripes shall be the fifth thread of the warp from each selvege; and that each piece of the same stuffs, when printed, stained, painted, or dyed in England, Wales, or Berwick-upon-Tweed, be

Sect. 5. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to cotton velvets, veverets, or other fustians, manufactured in Great Britain."

Sect. 8. "That the respective commissioners to be appointed for managing the said duty upon the said new-manufactured cotton stuffs, when printed, stained, painted, or dyed in Great Britain as aforesaid, shall, on or before the 5th day of July, 1774, provide proper seals or stamps for marking such of the said new-manufactured cotton stuffs to be printed, stained, painted, or dyed in Great Britain as aforesaid as are to be stamped and marked for and in order to the charging of the said duty for the same; and shall cause the said seals or stamps to be distributed to the respective officers, for the several purposes before mentioned; which officers are hereby enjoined and required, in using the same, to do as little hurt or damage as may be to the stuffs to be so marked or stamped: and the said respective commissioners, in providing the said respective seals or stamps, shall take care that they be so contrived that the impression thereof may be durable, and so as the same may be least liable to be forged or counterfeited; and that the said seals or stamps, or any of them, shall or may be allowed or renewed from time to time, as His Majesty, his heirs or successors, shall think fit: and if any person or persons whomsoever shall, at any time or times hereafter, counterfeit or forge any stamp or seal, to resemble any stamp or seal which shall be provided or made in pursuance of this act, or shall counterfeit or resemble the impression of the same upon any of the stuffs chargeable by this act, thereby to defraud His Majesty, his heirs or successors, of the said duty thereupon to be chargeable or payable in respect thereof, then every such person so offending, and being thereof convicted in due form of law, shall be adjudged a felon, and shall suffer death as in cases of felony, without benefit of clergy."

Sect. 10. "That if any person or persons shall, at any time or times hereafter, sell any printed, painted, stained, or dyed stuffs, wholly made of cotton, with a counterfeit stamp thereon, knowing the same to be counterfeited, and with an intent to defraud His Majesty, his heirs or successors, all and every such offender and offenders, their aiders, abettors, and assistants, being thereof convicted in due form of law, shall be adjudged a felon, and shall suffer death as in cases of felony, without benefit of clergy."
